P.C. Carter said that on Jan. 31 he was on duty in Alfred Street when he passed Davis's shop. Three cages of birds were exposed for sale. Sergeant Chapman entered the shop and pointed out to the female assistant the dirty condition of the birds and cages. The first cage contained two Larks, and measured 14in. long by 5½in. wide and 6in. high; the second cage contained five Bullfinches, one Green Linnet, and one Chaffinch, and measured 3ft. long, 8in. wide, by 2ft. 5in. high; the third contained five Brown Linnets, one Chaffinch, one Green Linnet, and one Canary, and measured 12in. wide, by 18in. high, and 18in. in length. The birds were in a filthy condition, and smelt very strongly. The tails and wings were covered with filth.

In reply to defendant, P.C. Carter said there was plenty of food in the cages. Of the nine birds in one cage, only one bird was "crumpled up."

P.S. Chapman gave corroborative evidence, and stated that the birds and cages were in a much better condition when he visited the house a second time.—Inspector Walding said he examined the birds, and was of opinion that they suffered a good deal through the dirty, neglected condition in which they were. He had twice previously cautioned defendant.

Defendant said the birds were kept in a condition most proper for wild birds.—Florence Bruford said she looked after the birds, and they always received ample food and water, and she cleaned them out once a week regularly. The bottoms of the cages looked untidy owing to the grit and seed.—Arthur Williams also spoke on behalf of defendant.

The Bench found the defendant guilty, but stated that inasmuch as that was the first case under the new Act they were going to deal leniently with him, and a fine of 5s. and costs would be imposed. He was liable, however, to a fine of £25 for each bird neglected.

No. 569.
A Square-net Bird Trap.
Sent by Mr. M. Jarvis, 118, London Road, Grays, Essex.

I enclose a sketch of a simple but useful square net trap for catching Goldfinches or Bullfinches, suitable for a garden or a small place where there is not room for large nets. No. 1 is a 2ft. 6in. square frame made of ¼in. round iron. This is covered with netting as used for clapnets. The bow is a hoop off a soda cask, with just the edges taken off; the ends are bound to the bottom of frame. No. 2 is a thin twig cut from a hedge; elm is the best for the purpose, as it bends easily without breaking. No. 3 is a wood stick with two prongs on the end. When the net is set (as in No. 4) the bow is about three inches off the ground, the twig only just touching it, so that when a bird touches the bow (as it generally does upon entering the net for the feed that is inside the bow) the twig goes, and the net drops at once before the bird has had time to fly out. It is as well to have the call-bird close to the net, so that when a bird flies to it it will see the feed under the net, and as a rule, in this case, it jumps on to the bow and springs the net.—M. Jarvis.

A Seed-drawer Contrivance.
Sent by Mr. E. Sim, Imber Rd. W'a'minster

I enclose a sketch showing the plan of a seed drawer I use for a large fly-cage. It prevents my having to blow out out the husks of seeds. As will be seen, I have the holes at the side of the drawer. I find the contrivance a very useful one; the birds are prevented from messing up the drawer in any way, and a good lot of seed can be put in.—E. Sim.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

*A Tame Robin.

An old gardener in our village feeds birds regularly outside a tool shed. Amongst them is a Robin, which is so tame that it will fetch crumbs from his hands. The man generally goes into the tool shed, and the Robin follows him. He stands at the side of a box, puts the food on a corner, and the Robin feeds in that way.—Sent by Benjamin Wardby (aged 16), Wesley Farm, South Cave, E. Yorks.

*A Sparrow Feeds a Canary.

A lady kept a Canary. In summer the lady hung the bird on a tree in the garden, and a Sparrow came and fed the Canary. It repeated this several times during the day. Winter came, and the Canary was taken indoors. There were several others hung out in the gardens, but the Sparrow took no notice of them.—Sent by N. Nicholson, 6, Weardale Place, Stockton-on-Tees

A Swim for a Canary.

A pretty story of a sailor's love for the pet of his ship comes from Sunderland. At present there is a ship by the name of Rubin lying in the Wear, and on Monday night a very precious portion of her cargo consisted of a Canary in a cage hanging under the bridge, but this morning the little bird was missing, and a search over the ship was in vain. Then one of the crew noticed something fluttering in the water, and this proved to be the missing pet. Without a moment's hesitation the sailor, though fully dressed, jumped into the water, swam out to the bird, and brought it back to the ship, where the rest of the crew at once took it to a fire to get it thoroughly resuscitated, while its saviour returned to fresh clothes and warmth.—Taken from the "Evening Chronicle" and sent by William McGinn (aged 13 years), 12, Airey Terrace, Walker-on-Tyne.

Another Member from the Colonies.

Among the members in the list given above I have the pleasure of welcoming to our ranks yet another Colonial reader, Mr. Jno. Maxwell, of Newfoundland. Mr. Maxwell is now on a visit to this country, and is intending to establish a cage-bird society in Newfoundland on his return, and is kind enough to promise to do what he can to introduce more Newfoundland fanciers to Cage Birds League.

Another Local Hon. Sec.

This week I have to record the addition of yet another hon. sec. to our long list. I should like to have an hon. sec. for every town in the British Islands, especially now that we are getting a large number of bird-shop keepers who are willing to receive visits from a representative of Cage Birds League, and this number promises soon to be spread over the whole country.

Our latest Local Hon. Sec. is for Catford, and is—

A Word to Bird-shop Keepers.

The R.S.P.C.A. is showing signs of renewed activity in the prosecution of sundry bird-dealers for "causing unnecessary suffering" to birds while in their hands, and birds-dealers, after they have been served with a summons, are seeking to join Cage Birds League.

It may save misunderstanding if I say at once that Cage Birds League does not want the membership of bird-dealers who cause unnecessary suffering to the birds which they have on sale, and that we certainly cannot admit to membership bird-dealers who are awaiting the hearing of a summons served on them. That they are served with such a summons is, of course, not evidence that they have been guilty of the cruelty alleged against them. The offence has to be proved in the police-court. Nevertheless, Cage Birds League cannot issue certificates of membership to bird-dealers while a charge of cruelty is hanging over their heads.

Drastic Penalties.

Bird-dealers should carefully note that under the Protection of Animals Act of 1911 it is an offence to "Cause any unnecessary suffering or permit any unnecessary suffering to be caused to any animal"; and "animal" includes birds. This offence, if proved, is punishable with a penalty up to twenty-five pounds for each bird, with or without hard labour, for any term up to six months.

There can be no doubt whatever that the Act is going to be used for all it is worth, and if only those dealers who keep their stock in insanitary and brutal conditions are prosecuted the Act can do nothing but good. As cage-bird lovers, we would be the last to deprecate the enforcement of deserved punishment upon those who bring discredit to the cage-bird hobby by inflicting cruelty upon the birds passing through their hands, but it is to be feared that there may be charges brought against bird-dealers who exercise every possible care in respect of their stock, and if evidence be not forthcoming in their defence, a magistrate may be led to believe any statements adduced against them.

Get On Our List of Inspected Bird-Shops.

We have among our members many bird-dealers, and the very fact of their being members of Cage Birds League would be, in some degree, a defence against any charge which may be brought, for in becoming members they express agreement with our aims and objects, one of which is the inculcation of the principles under which birds may be kept in humane and proper conditions, and if their names are on our list of bird-shop keepers who are receiving surprise visits from our local hon. secs., with a view of gaining one of our certificates to the effect that their shop is being properly conducted, an inspector would probably think more than once before lodging an information against them.

I hope, therefore, that every bird-dealer who is a member of Cage Birds League will write me signifying his willingness to have his method of conducting his trade reported upon by our local hon. sec., and I suggest to those bird-dealers who carry on their business under sanitary and humane conditions, and who are not yet members of Cage Birds League, that it would be of some value to them to be enrolled among our members, and to have their names on our list of bird-sellers who are receiving visits from our local hon. secs.

Our Prize Competition Nearing a Close.

Members are reminded that the twenty pounds worth of prizes to be given for most introductions to Cage Birds League will be won by some one in three weeks from now. There is time to make considerable alterations in the present state of the running for these prizes, and members should do their best in the time which remains. The prizes are as follows:—

Cash Prizes Amounting in all to Twenty Pounds.

£5 cash to the individual fancier who, between the opening date—March 10th, 1911—and March 11th, 1912, secures the greatest number of recruits to Cage Birds League.

£5 cash to the Society whose nominations to the League between March 10th, 1911, and March 11th, 1912, are the most numerous.

£3 cash to the individual fancier who nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

£3 cash to the Society which nominates the second highest number of members to the League between the same dates.

And four cash prizes of £1 each to Societies whose total nomination to the League shows the best average per member.

A Deserving Case.

In these League columns for Feb. 3, I referred to a little bird-show which the Swanley Cage Birds League members had organised for the benefit of a fellow-fancier. I have now received the following letter from our member, Mr. G. H. Peck, and I am sure that there will be many members who will be glad to have an opportunity of assisting in such a deserving case. Subscriptions, however small, may be sent either to Mr. Peck, 5, Baldwyn's Rd., Bexley, Kent, or to Mr. J. Shiers, Swanley Village, Kent.

> Sir,—I daresay you remember that at the great meeting at the Palace Show I was speaking to yourself and Mr. Carl respecting the poor fellow named Couchman, of Swanley Village, who had his child burnt to death and his wife seriously burnt, and his feathered pets destroyed in the flames. Now I have thoroughly investigated this case, and I find it a very deserving one. I am appealing to you to be kind enough to insert this letter in our valuable paper, Cage Birds, appealing to brother fanciers for a little support in aid of one of our brother Cage Birds League members. Mr. J. Cookham, another of our League members, of Newport, Mon., has already sent me a donation on this poor fellow's behalf, and I took this to him on Thursday evening last. I should much like to mention that Mr. J. Shiers, of Swanley Village, Kent, another of our League members, is witness to this poor fellow's misfortune, and I know this gentleman is doing his very best to assist this young fancier, as many can help one, but one cannot help many. So will you kindly allow this letter of appeal to all brother fanciers on his behalf? Any little assistance fellow-fanciers should think fit to render I should be pleased to receive, and I will see that it is put to a proper use.

WELL KNOWN FANCIERS' CANDID OPINIONS

Of the greatest Standard Work on Canaries ever issued. The work that deals with CANARIES ONLY thoroughly, practically and completely.

Oldham,

Dear Sir,
I received "Our Canaries" and can safely say that it is the best work that I have seen in all my life. I think no fancier can do very well without it, as if he happens to be a bit puzzled in any shape or form, all he has to do is to refer to the book and he finds it at once. whether it be what is needed in the birdroom or on the exhibition benches. I must say I never thought "Our Canaries" would be such a work of art.

GEORGE FITTON.

Gloucester.

Dear Sir,
It is with great pleasure I received the book, "Our Canaries," and I have carefully looked through the unique volume. Its magnificent coloured plates are of great credit to our famous artist. Mr. H. Norman. The way in which so many practical fanciers' experiences, ideas, and methods are compiled in such a volume is simply wonderful, and I feel it my duty to say that great praise is due to our esteemed and experienced friend, Mr. Claude St. John for the great ability he has displayed in its compilation, as it is the most wonderful volume ever produced on Canaries, and should be in the hands of every fancier, young or old.

Dear Sir,
I must thank you for the copy of "Our Canaries" duly received. After having a good look through the book I must congratulate you on producing such an up-to-date publication. From past experience I have learnt to expect good illustrations from Mr. Norman, but he has excelled himself in illustrating "Our Canaries." Every bird portrayed is a show specimen, with all the good points of the breed well brought out. The matter of the book is also remarkable for its accuracy, and is helpful both to novices and experienced fanciers.

THOS. POPE.

Glasgow.

Dear Sir,
I very much appreciate "Our Canaries." It is really a masterpiece, and quite beyond my expectations. The plates of the various breeds of Canaries are perfect models of their class, and the colouring true to life. The greatest credit is due to your artists and Mr. Claude St. John for helping in the way he did to place such an excellent work on the market and at such a moderate figure. It is indeed a standard work of the Canary, and ought to be in the hands of every breeder; and to those about to begin the hobby of Canary breeding it is simply invaluable and ought to adorn the bookshelf of every lover of the Canary bird. I wish it every success.

R. G. JOLIFFE.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF BIRD-BREEDING: HOW TO OVERCOME THEM.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

effect); or a little scalded and crushed rape, added to the food at this time is often invaluable in starting the hens to feed, or re-invigorating them. Green food is also a most valuable ally, and should be given in quite small quantities, fresh at frequent intervals, for a few days until the slackness of the hen has passed off. Do not trouble if the hen appears to feed exclusively on greenstuff; it will keep the young going, and, as a rule, all that is needed in these cases is to keep the hen "on the feed" for a few days until her maternal instinct returns in full vigour.

To assist this happy event it is a good plan to dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda in the drinking water for one half of each day for a few days as soon as any signs of lag are noticed, and to offer daily a bath made slightly saline with the addition of common salt, which has a very good invigorating effect.

EARLY DESERTION.

For the first fortnight of their lives the chicks are usually brooded almost constantly by the hen, who only leaves the nest at short intervals to get a little food or water, and generally a few moments' exercise before going back, and at night sleeps on the nest. This is very necessary for the first fortnight or so, particularly in the early part of the season when the nights are chilly. After the first week the hen will begin to prolong her absence from the nest more and more each day, but a good hen will generally continue to roost on the nest until the young are getting well-feathered and almost ready to leave home. But occasionally one will find a hen which begins to roost on the perch when the young are only a few days old and quite bare of feathers. In the early season this will often mean the loss of the young, who perish with cold, so that every effort should be made to get her to sleep on the nest at this stage. First of all make sure that the nest is not "alive" with red-mites at night, nor yet made uninhabitable by any self-respecting hen by too liberal use of odorous insecticides or powders. Supposing the nest is not at fault a hen will sometimes pop on to it and stay there if one only goes near the cage or touches the wires just after she has apparently settled down on a perch. But for a really obstinate hen of this kind I believe the best management is one I have known carried out, with every success. That is, if she refuses to go on the nest when gently coaxed, remove the perch on which she has settled down, and if she goes to another, and another one, repeat the manœuvre each time until every perch is out, and no other roosting place is left but the nest and the floor. In practically every case she will choose the nest. Of course, the perches must be replaced early next morning, or even the same night just as all lights are about being put out. If it is necessary, follow up the same method nightly for a few nights, and the hen's obstinacy will be gradually overcome.

OVER-LAPPING BROODS.

When the hen begins to roost on the perches when her brood is between a week and a fortnight old, there is always a fair chance that she is about to recommence nesting again before the brood in the nest is able to leave it. This is sometimes the result of giving too liberal a diet during incubation, and also one outcome of a too liberal or too early supply of hemp for rearing the young. Where our directions for the early part of the season have been adhered to, these causes, of course, will have been avoided. In other cases it is just the result of excessive vigour or precocity. For the rest of the season it will be good policy to try moving the cock after the eggs are laid and leave the hen to hatch and rear the brood by herself.

Here again a crystal of sulphate of soda in the water for a portion of each day for a few days may help to cool the hen, but if she is really coming forward towards laying, the only rational course is to give her a fresh nest pan in another part of the cage when she begins to show signs of being bent on building. New nesting material must be given too, and sometimes things will run quite smoothly, the cock taking over the chief work of feeding the young when the hen begins nesting again. But you

ROCHDALE O.C.

A discussion held Feb. 10th, on "The General aws of Nature," Mr. J. Naden in chair. Mr. Blincoe (our sec.) opened the discussion. In Mule reeding, he said it was very difficult to breed from Bullfinch cock and Canary hen; she would have othing to do with him. On the other band, colour- ng the Canary to resemble a Bullfinch might make ll the difference. By pairing two different varieties f Canary together they would, he thought, possibly reed back to the original wild Canary. He also told ow it would be possible to pick a winner from a ot of British birds, say Bullfinches or Hawfinches. Mr. Mills moved a vote of thanks, Mr. J. Naden econded it, Mr. T. Ashworth supporting. Mr. Blincoe was asked to open another disussion on the ame subject, to which he consented.—C. White- head, Press Correspondent.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 8, St. Philip's Mission Room, Westmorland Street, Mr. T. Ridal in chair, supported by Mr. J. G. Cowley (vice-chairman). Very good meeting, several subjects coming in for a fine lot of discussion. Balance sheet for 1911 read by late sec., Mr. J. Scott, showing a balance of £7 10s. in bank. Decided to have a change in prize cards; Hyde's finally adopted. The best thanks were accorded Mr. R. Smith, late treasurer. Following new members elected: Messrs. G. H. Cowley, G. Mason, A. Bailey, W. Staniforth, and J. Carr, making a total of 15 new members this year, and bringing our membership up to the half-century. A discussion took place as to how we should manage a series of table shows; ten specials have been promised by committee for highest number of points scored at the whole series. Decided that members (Messrs. J. Woolhouse and W. T. Furniss) judge Yorks and Nor. respectively at the June table show. Also decided that all birds count for points at these shows. Nest Feather Show, June 29, to be judged by Mr. H. Champion; annual show, Nov. 16, Mr. J. C. Barnes. Shall be pleased to welcome fanciers at next meeting, March; there is an alteration in date. READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held, Feb. 6th, Palmer Hall; very good attendance. Mr. Montgomery elected a member. Details of pair show for March 6th arranged: 8 classes (consisting of 3 Nor., 3 Yorks, 1 Crest, 1 A.O.V.) will be provided, details to be posted to members shortly. After judging, Mr. J. Meeting held, Feb. 13, headquarters; a good attendance, the best since open show, Mr. W. Lovatt in chair. That well-known successful breeder and exhibitor, Mr. J. Bagshaw, gave a washing exhibition. The way he went through the washing and handling the birds shows he is no novice at the game. There were several members who had not been to a washing exhibition, and they were thoroughly interested. Questions were put to Mr. Bagshaw and he answered them to the satisfaction of all. Members should be pleased to get the services of these experienced fanciers. We have on Mar. 12 Mr. T. Decided, to run two cock classes each for Nor., and Yorks., also two hen classes each, and one pair class each; British birds three classes. Mr. T. Two new members joined us, viz., Messrs. Sweetman (Cobridge), and A. Oakes (Burslem). Fanciers in district invited to visit us. We should like some of the older fanciers in the district to come and give us a lecture or two on Canaries or British.—L. James, Sec.

ROCHDALE (Good Intent) C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb, 7th, headquarters, Toad Lane. A goodly muster of members turned up for the second series of table shows, viz., a mating and judging competition on Nor. pairs. Mr. W. Banks (one of our Vice-Presidents) was to have judged, but was unable to do so owing to a family bereavement. Mr. R. Schofield (Heywood) again stepped into the breach. Members present were anxious to have "a cut in" at the placing for the 2 prizes given by the Society. Ten members judged. Mr. J. Dewhirst again tied with Mr. E. Lord, a novice member; so agreed to divide first and second prizes. It was very instructive to the younger members, and I hope they will appreciate the efforts of the committee. Our next event will be for Lancs. pairs, Feb. 28th, staged 7.30 sharp, when Mr. Wm. Adams will officiate; all welcome.—T. Holt, Hon. Sec.

GLOSSOP, HADFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held 59, Hague Street, Glossop, Feb. 6th. A good number of members turned up in anticipation of the washing exhibition, which should have been given by our President. For some unknown reason he, however, failed to come, and it was deferred to the next meeting. Mr. H. Holehouse presided. Mr. H. Cartwright gave a first-class demonstration on the art of washing birds. This led up to questions being asked Mr. Cartwright, which he answered in an able manner as he washed the birds. Decided, to provide a costly rose bowl, to be competed for in place of cup, won outright by our old member and friend, Mr. C. E. Fisher in 1909. I might also state that the Society is in a very flourishing condition, and since our December show we have enrolled Messrs. H. Oliver, W. Watson, W. Hollingworth, J. Platt, and J. Barbour as new members, and we extend a hearty welcome to fanciers to join. —E. Thompson.

A discussion ensued re our cup, when it was decided to open a sub. list to purchase same. Letter from Mr. Meades, suggesting leaflets be printed (containing list of specials offered for competition by the K.C. BANFNOOT & DIS. C.B.S.

Five mile limit show held Feb. 17, Red Lion Hotel. Sixty-eight birds were staged in fifteen classes. Owing to the illness of the appointed judge (Mr. J. Bailey), Mr. R. Halliday officiated, and his awards proved entirely satisfactory. The various specials in the open classes were simply given away; three for most points in open section were won by Messrs. W. Ormandroyd, B. Wilman, and F. Self. Special for best cock, Mr. W. Ormandroyd; best hen, Mr. F. Self. In the novice section specials were won by Messrs. C. Bastow, F. Gelder, G. Hudson, and Ellis Self, the last-mentioned winning special for most points. Although entries fell short of expectations, it will in no way daunt the enthusiasm of the members, and a repetition of the venture will no doubt be made in the near future, when full advantage will be taken of advertising the show in a proper manner. The entry included some really fine specimens.

LEITH O.S.

Members' fourth annual table show and judging competition held 10th Feb., Kinnaird's Hall, Kirkgate—an ideal place for the purpose. Nine classes were provided, and some capital exhibits staged. Mr. J. F. Dewar again officiated, and after making his awards he sealed them up and gave them to a neutral party to hold till after the members had tried their hands as amateur judges. Eighteen members took part in the competition, and it was very amusing to watch the expressions on their faces when they thought they had found the winners. After every one had handed in his card and compared it with Mr. Dewar's awards, the winner was found to be the secretary, Mr. G. Brown, with a total of 98 points; he holds the silver cup presented by Mr. Dewar, for one year, and also secured the beautiful hearthrug presented by a friend from Bonnyrigg. Second most points gained by Mr. J. McMillan, with a total of 85. Cake for lowest score carried off by Mr. R. M. Brunton, with a total of 33 points. We hope that when another year comes round a better attendance will be recorded. Special for best bird, Mr. R. Craig (Greenfinch Mule).

WE HAVE THEM, WE BREED THEM, WE SELL THEM.

It is absolutely ridiculous for those wanting first class specimens thinking they can get them from the men with the small quantities, the three or four winners they have cannot be bought at any price, as they must keep them to sell their surplus on their reputation. We have the largest and most wonderful stock of winners that has ever been in one room; over 40 first prize winners this season, and 20 of them for sale, reasonable. We have shown more winners that we have bred this season than any other six exhibitors put together. For proof see our winnings this season. Winning Carl's Trophy, the G.M.Y.C.C. Trophy outright with birds bred by exhibitor; both Y.C.C. competitions; the Yorkshire challenge trophy, Ramsden 6-guinea cup, £10 Yorkshire Union trophy 5 years in succession, which now becomes our own property with an aggregate of 1,418 points, only 3 birds to count, nearly 200 more points than any exhibitor; another world's record, champion diploma at Crystal Palace, 1911; also we have bred and sold four of the first prize winners at Palace, 1912; four years in succession winning the C.M.Y.C.C. Our strain has won more competitions and trophies than any other; so write direct to the breeders who breed their own winners and can give an honest pedigree and all details how bred. Cocks or hens 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-, 30/- each. We guarantee the best value in England. Inspection invited, all birds sent on approval; deposit: Ogden Bros., Dudley Hill, Bradford.

2 Firsts, 3 Specials Medal, etc.

The following unsolicited testimonials are a fair sample of hundreds I have recently received. These are all filed for the inspection of my visitors, and clearly prove that there is no better blood in the Fancy to-day.

"Filey, Feb. 7, 1912.—The pair of Yorkshires I had from you did well for me. The cock took 1st and special, also medal for best bird in the show. The hen got 3rd. There were 10 in each class.—F. Gray to Joe Thomas." "82, Dorrington Road, Lancaster, Feb. 9, 1912.—The hen I got from you early in December has been entered for a show, and I am pleased to say it took 1st and special.—J. Bostock to Joe Thomas."

For further proof I venture to refer you to the report of the Crystal Palace show, where my birds, both Yorkshires and Norwich, were bang at the top in strongest classes. During this season my birds have won consistently every week at all the championship shows, and have secured over 300 prizes during 1912 season. Please note that all my wins are at open championship shows in hottest competition. I have not exhibited a single bird at members' shows with limited competition. My customers also have won regularly both with Yorkshires and Norwich supplied by me. I am stating a simple fact when I say that I can supply you with Yorkshires or Norwich that can win, or with stock birds that can breed winners. I have now in stock some real clinkers in all the following varieties:—Yorkshires, Norwich, Borders, Yorkshire Greens, Mules, Siberian Goldfinches, Rollers, Lancashires, Cinnamons, Crests, etc. The following are a few prices:—

GRAND LARGE COBBY NORWICH, with good fronts and plenty of substance, at same price as Yorkshires. Seifert Rollers, in full rolling song, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Hens, same strains, 3/-, 4/-, 6/-, 7/6 each. CRESTS. Crestbreds from important breeders in Norwich, Lowestoft, Plymouth, Nottingham, etc. Yorkshires, Plainheads, from all the important Palace winners. All the birds are for sale. This is not a lot of boasting about wins done by studs bought to show at enormous outlay. The actual winners are for sale at stock bird prices. My prices are not up, if the quality is. As an instance, one of these purchases alone constitutes the following:—A clean clear-out, after 30 years' experience, of Crests and Plainheads, including Cages totalling 118 (one hundred and eighteen); birds exhibited at all the latest shows. The following are the wins of this one stud:—Ten firsts, four seconds, three thirds, and ten specials. With other stocks of cages bought, I have about 150 double breeding cages and fittings, flights, show cages, hampers, cases—all to go cheap.

VERY SPECIAL TO AMATEURS AND NOVICES. I will match you Norwich Yorkshires, Border Fancies, Hartz Mountain Rollers, or Lizards in the correct way, i.e., NOT two buffs, as the majority do when supplying the novice at low price. All the pairs I am offering here shall have cocks that are on song, and shall be selected as strong, hardy birds, likely to do all that you require of them, at 10/6 pair. I will also fit you up with a double breeding cage, with everything complete for use, for 3/6 extra; or a better cage, with sand drawers, sanitary fittings, etc., for 6/- extra; this latter recommended. With the utmost confidence I offer these bargains.

HARRY ALLEN, The Original Linnet King

and champion of all champions. I have won more prizes than any ten dealers put together for contest singing. Linnets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, with beautiful quality notes, can win any contest in England, 15/-, £1, 30/-, £2, and one that has won over 30 first prizes, £3 10s. Linnets singing indoors or out, with box cage, 2/6, 3/6, and one, a champion, 4/-; very large muling Linnets, finger tame, guaranteed to mule, singing hard, 2/6. I hold the world's record for mulers. Goldfinch and hen Canary, splendid pair, 5/-; cock Linnet and hen Canary, ready paired, 4/6; Larks, singing, as straight as arrows, as steady as rocks, singing full loud voice, daylight and gaslight, 1/6 and 2/-; a few with quality notes, will sing indoors or out, right for catching or contest singing, 4/-, with new cage, 5/6; these Larks cannot be beaten. Thrushes, singing with full loud voice, show condition, 4/-; the original Linnet whistles, 6d. each. I sold 3,000 Linnets at my shop and stall in the Leeds Bird Market during the pantomime, besides Canaries and other British Linnets I have sold to well-known contest singers. Mr. Soloman won over 50 first prizes, defeating all the champions of England and winner of the English Derby; and Mr. Nelson, of Castleford, who is winning all before him, defeated 40 of the best time singers of England in his own town a fortnight since; and Mr. Chippendale, who is winning all before him and beating all the recognised champions, which proves I have sent the best contest singers in the world out. All my birds are on 7 days' approval; cash or deposit; everybody welcome to see and hear what they are buying.—Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

I have just received the last consignment for this season of the genuine large Siberian cock Goldfinches, price 5/6, 6/6, and 7/6 each. Few extra special exhibition specimens, 10/-, 12/6, and 15 - each. Every one of these Siberian Goldfinches is in full song, and they're warranted real Siberians, not Russians, which are being sold at 4/-, and 5/- each, and dear at that. As these are absolutely last lot to arrive this season, intending purchasers should send orders at once, as demand is heavy and stock limited. Please note everything I sell is sent on approval on receipt of cash; or deposit system of this paper, and if fullest satisfaction is not given, only has to be returned, and back comes every penny of your money. No sharp practice tricks with me. See Roller Canary column for further advertisement.

THE HALL MARK

of quality in Roller Canaries is the name "Weber." If you get a Weber's Leipzig Roller you may depend upon having a bird that is absolutely "top notch." For years past I have publicly stated that for quality of song, variety and number of changes, and lowness of price, no other Roller on the market can approach the Leipzig Roller, of which I am sole importer. Won't you test the truth of this statement by having one on week's trial, and test it side by side against any other higher priced one from elsewhere. It does not matter if you have no intention of buying the bird, I shall be pleased to send it just the same. I now have about 1,500 genuine Leipzig Roller cocks, all 1911 bred birds, and guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, flute, and gong notes, etc., etc., and warranted entirely free from titlark, chopping, or other objectionable notes whatever, price 8/- and 9/- each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell tours, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 3/- each, two 5/6. I also have a few extra special contest Roller cocks, in glorious song, at 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are guaranteed of the original Seifert blood; their song is exceptionally soft and mellow, which is like a cascade of ever-flowing melody. Hens of same strain as contest cocks, 4/- each, two 7/6. I also hold a very large stock of loud free singing Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song day and gaslight, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where plenty of loud song is required, price 6/- each. Hartz hens, 2/6 each, two 4/-; singing-box cages, 1/6 each. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. Following few letters are entirely unsolicited, and will give an idea of quality of Leipzig Rollers. "16, Thomas St., Tonypandy, Feb. 19.—Sir, I am quite satisfied with Leipzig Roller you sent on Dec. 1st. He is a grand songster, singing all day and every day. Thanking you for splendid bird and straightforward dealing with strangers.—Yours, D. Davies." "Victoria St., Stocksbridge, nr. Sheffield, Feb. 16.—Sir, Please send another Roller as good as one you sent a year ago. He has turned out a splendid songster, and all who have heard him say so.—Yours, W. Rodgers." "Chester-le-Street, Feb. 16.—Sir, Roller and cage arrived safe, and am quite satisfied. Bird gives every satisfaction. Unpacked 9 in morning, and singing grandly in afternoon. Thank you very much.—Yours, J. Sewell, senr." "Phyllis St., Barry Island, Feb. 17.—Sir, I am more than satisfied with Roller. You will take some beating with Rollers, as I have paid £2 for one and not near as good as yours at 12/6.—Yours, Fred Westall." "65, Balfour Rd., Normanton, Feb. 17.—Sir, Contest Roller doing splendidly. I am highly satisfied; he is a gem. I again thank you for such a beautiful songster. It's the best I've heard lately.—Yours, G. Taylor." "Beech View, Whaley Bridge, Feb. 14.—Sir, Roller I had from you on Dec. 13th is singing splendidly and I am very pleased, as it sings night and day. Please send two hens.—Yours, F. Wyld." NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD AND MULE CLUB.

The report of the hon. secretaries, Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, read at the annual general meeting was of a highly satisfactory nature, a heavy year's work having been successfully got through, while the membership list was still growing. Amongst other things, a petition on the subject of the Wild Birds Acts had been presented to the Home Secretary, from which good was likely to accrue; a fine club diploma had been adopted, and the first one had been awarded to a lady member, Miss Reeves, the annual country outing was a splendid success, and the club show held at the Horticultural Hall in conjunction with the L.C.B.A. was one of the best they had ever had. The financial position was good, but not so strong as they would like it to be. They heartily thanked the committee and other officials likewise the members, for the way in which they had supported them.

Mr. T. R. Trower, the hon. treasurer, read accounts which showed a cash balance of £11 1s. 2d., besides other assets in the shape of cups, etc. They had expended £12 9s. 5d. in providing medals for competition amongst the members. He was afraid they expended a larger percentage of their income in this direction than was wise. He suggested that douations should be invited towards a special prize fund. It would help the club to keep a reasonable amount of funds at its back. He himself, in order to prevent their coffers being depleted, had defrayed the cost of the forms (about £5) sent out in connection with the petition to the Home Office. He was anxious to see the club with some money at its back, and it would help greatly if a special prize fund could be established.—It was decided (Mr. Mortlock proposing) that in future the balance sheet be sent out to members before the holding of the annual meeting.—The balance sheet was accepted as read, on the proposition of Mr. G. Crabb, who warmly eulogised the good work done by the treasurer.

On a discussion concerning certain rules, Mr. Marley raised the point that no penalty was stipulated by rule 17 in the case of particulars of cup entries not being sent to the sec. before the holding of a show. There was an animated discussion, but the general opinion was that the matter was covered by the previous rule (16).

Mr. Carr proposed that a gold medal be presented to the member or non-member breeding the rarest hybrid during the ensuing year. He thought that some such reward was well deserved; also that it would help to extend the membership roll. It should be given to the breeder, and not the exhibitor.—This suggestion was adopted.

Mr. Crabb brought up the anomaly of hybrids bred from foreign birds (Goldies and Bullies) being allowed to compete for the Club's specials, although their parents were not on the Club's list of exhibition birds, and, further, in face of the objects of the Club being set out as for the encouragement of "British Birds and their Hybrids." He thought the word "their" should be deleted; also that the aforesaid foreign Goldies and Bullies should be included in the Club list.—It was agreed that this should be done.

In a discussion upon the support accorded various shows, Mr. F. Archer mentioned the case of Bradford National, which he considered was not patronised by the members in the manner its aims and objects merited, and he hoped that at the next show this would be remedied.—Mr. Chittenden supported these remarks.—It was pointed out that possibly the meagre classification offered had something to do with the comparative lack of entries, and it was hoped that this would be brought into line with the Canary sectiou for the 1912 show, when a bumping entry would no doubt be accorded the Bradford enthusiasts.

Before the adjournment of the meeting, Mr. Longden promised a gold medal and Mr. Archer a silver medal, towards the special prizes, while Mr. F. Heal was made a member, on the proposition of Mr. Longden.

The Jackdaw as a House-pet.

By "NIMROD."

The writer has found the Jackdaw a most amusing pet, and one in great favour with children.

As one who has kept a large number of Jackdaws, perhaps a few remarks on these birds will be read with interest. I am advocating the keeping of this bird as a pet by boys, as a great deal of amusement and pleasure can be derived from it.

In the country they can be most easily obtained, as they build in chimneys and roofs, but chiefly in the vicinity of Rookeries, where there are so many holes in the trees, some of the trees having four or five holes in them, each occupied by a Jackdaw. During the breeding season the boys play sad havoc with the eggs, getting large numbers of them. But still there are generally plenty left for young ones. Last season there must have been over 30 boys, mostly schoolboys, and some just left school for work. Each had his pet Jackdaw, which he got from the nest when at the age of from ten to fourteen days. They brought the birds up on soaked bread, worms, etc. After they had got them to peck up they would take them out in the evenings in the fields and on the Church green and let them peck about and amuse themselves and other children. They used to carry them about on sticks, which the birds would readily perch upon. Some would put them down and call them. Sometimes the birds would follow the boys like dogs.

Quite an Amusing Sight.

It was quite an amusing sight to see so many boys with these birds. One incident which came under my notice was as follows: One of the boys who generally kept all kinds of pets, and was never without a Jackdaw or two, was driving his pet home down the street from the fields; a gentleman from London stood and watched him some time, and at last went to the boy and wanted to buy the bird. He first offered one shilling, and as the boy refused it, raised his offer to 5s.; still the boy refused. At last the gent gave the boy 10s. and took the bird. Soon all the boys knew of this purchase, and were quite eager to part with their birds. Generally, the craze does not last long, and the boys soon part with them. Of all the boys who had them last spring, not one has any now; the craze or fashion has gone over until next season. Travellers or visitors generally spot the birds and buy them for a few shillings.

The boys used also to carry them on their shoulders, or heads, about the streets, which caused a good many people to admire them and pet them.

I have never known any juvenile keepers of these birds to keep them long enough to teach them to talk. There are one or two about here in Ramsey that are kept by adults which can talk a little, but most of those who keep Jackdaws have not enough patience to teach them. Not once during the past two years have I had any one come to me about the tongue-cutting business. I do hope that day has now gone by, and the fallacy exploded. If such cruel practices were condemned in schools by the teachers, it would do a lot of good, as such old superstitions take a lot of killing, and are generally handed down from one generation to another. The old shepherds are still believers in it, and advocate it; but, as I have several times said, if I hear of a case I inform the people concerned of it. This has been the means of stopping several cases where it was intended to slit the tongue.

Easy to Keep, and Cheap.

The keeping of these birds is so easy a matter and costs so little that any novice can keep them. They will eat any table scraps, besides mice, small birds, worms, beetles and meat of any kind. But I should not recommend giving much meat, except "lights."

The birds should be allowed as much freedom as possible, and it is best to cut one of the wings and let them run about the yards. That they are full of all kinds of mischief I am well aware, and they will carry things away and hide them; but still they are very amusing pets, and are easily managed. They will live for years.

Another little incident of the boys I may mention, was this: One of the boys' parents had a Collie dog that was well used to children; it would sometimes take two or three "Jacks" on its back to the fields and go quite stately with them, to the excitement of the children, who would follow it.

A Tale that is Told.

A tale which is told by the "know alls" is that the reason the birds do not talk is because they are the wrong kind of Daws. If you want to get talkers, get them from the church steeples, they say, or from chimneys; not from the holes in trees. But that tale will not hold good any more than the tongue-cutting tale. The reason why the boys' birds won't talk is that they so soon get tired of them, and not one in twenty keeps one six months.

As an exhibition bird, it is not much shown; only at large shows occasionally. I see that one got in the "money" at the recent L.C.B.A. show. The reporter's comment was "Shines like ebony," which certainly is the case with an adult bird, especially if you can get the sun's rays on it to show it off. I should like to see a class provided for Jackdaws at the great annual show at the Crystal Palace; it might not fill for a time, but no doubt it would ultimately, and it would then encourage a great many to take up with this bird, as it is less trouble to keep than either Magpies or Jays, and so easily obtained. Perhaps, now that Owls and Hawks are coming on the show bench, a thought may be given to this, the commonest of the larger birds, and one of the most knowing. I hope these few notes may result in more of these birds being kept;

(31) That a sub-committee of seven be appointed, no society to have more than one representative on this committee, to transact any urgent business, and to go through all alterations and additions to rules, so that they shall be as clear as possible when placed upon the ballot paper. 253 for, 65 against. Show rule: (21) That the last two lines of this rule read as follows—"In case of a tie for any Union trophy or special prize, the highest in money awards shall be declared the winner. 125 for, 193 against. (22) That this rule be deleted. 138 for, 146 against. Proposed new rules: (1) That all affiliated societies holding an open show shall make as many novice classes as open classes. 74 for, 233 against. (8) That no society affiliated to the Yorkshire Union, shall elect honorary members at a less subscription than the ordinary members. 136 for, 151 against. Twenty-seven ballot papers sent out, and 24 returned. Unfortunately two of these were sent in on Feb. 27th marked with a cross, instead of recording the number of votes, according to instructions; these are therefore omitted from the above results. A very pleasing feature is that 321 votes in all have been cast, and had the above two papers been marked properly, an increased ballot on previous years, when each member has voted individually, would have resulted.—(The gentlemen against whose names a star appears are elected).—H. Hill, Sec.

It was recently reported that a Bittern had been killed in Leicestershire, and there was some trouble in getting anyone capable of naming the species. This is, of course, one of the now rare birds that at one time were fairly common in the marshy districts of this country. The writer of these notes knew an old fancier who could call to mind the time when a certain marsh near the Thames was seldom without some of these curious birds during the winter months.

Two New Competitions for Our Readers.

One Guinea for an Essay.

WE want our readers to send us helpful and timely hints upon any matters connected with bird keeping—either on the selection of birds, mating or breeding procedure, feeding or general management, fitting cages or aviaries, etc. We will give four half-crown prizes (either cash or books to this value which are published by us) every week to the senders of the four best hints received.

Our only rules are:—(1) That all hints sent in must be written on postcards only and bear the sender's name and address; (2) that the Editor's decision must be accepted as final. We shall divide the four prizes evenly, so far as is possible, amongst hints dealing with Canaries, Hybrids, British, and Foreign birds—two and sixpence to each section; and we reserve the right to publish any hint received, although the same may not be adjudged a prize winner. No drawings (illustrations) must accompany these hints. All postcards for the current week's competition must reach us not later than first post on a Monday; those for next week on March 4.

Think out your "Hint" at once, and post it to reach us on Monday morning. Every reader must know of some little "tip" which would be helpful to a fellow fancier. And it may secure one of our half-crowns.

Half-Crowns for "Timely Hints."

One Guinea for an Essay on the Rearing of Canaries or Other Birds Without the Use of Egg Food.

The subject of the rearing of young birds without the use of egg, either in a fresh or preserved form, is one of great interest, and we are desirous of obtaining the experiences of readers who have tried to rear young birds by giving the parent birds home-made food (i.e., not a preparation now being sold on the market) which contains no egg.

We offer a prize of one guinea (either cash, or books to value) for the best essay on this topic received on or before Monday, March 18 next. It need not necessarily be a lengthy essay so long as it is to the point and gives full details of whatever foods were used, how they were prepared, and the result; also details of the birds and the conditions under which they were kept. Particulars of failures will be eligible equally with particulars of successes.

Our rules are:—(1) That only one side of each sheet of paper used must be written on; (2) that the Editor's decision must be accepted as final; (3) that all essays must reach us on or before March 18; (4) we reserve the right to publish extracts from any article sent in. Competitors should clearly write their names and addresses on the back of their essays.

The 1911 balance sheet of the Liverpool O.S. shows cash in hand of £1 18s. In view of the fact that the annual exhibition resulted in a loss to the society of £6 7s. 11d., this reflects credit on the able secretaries (Messrs. Metcalfe and Hillmen) and their fellow-officials.

An effectively illustrated price list of the Canaries, British and foreign birds, birdroom requisties, etc., supplied by him has been issued by Mr. H. Lewis, of the Zoo, Wellington Road, Handsworth, Birmingham, from whom a copy may be had on receipt of postage.

Will members of the Yorkshire C.B.S. of Ireland please note that the society's closed rings are now ready, and may be obtained from the hon. sec. at 66, Fitzroy Avenue, Dublin. Early application should be made to avoid disappointment.—C. Holley, hon. sec.

The lecture will be all the more interesting by the fact of its being the last time Mr. Wilkinson will be amongst us prior to his sailing for Australia on March 28. Special No. 4 at Launceston Show.

Just as we go to press we receive a letter from the hon. sec. of Launceston Show, Mr. N. H. Reed, from which we extract the following:—"Mr. Bonndy was answered and told in plain English that when he wrote in a proper manner, and not in the way he had done, he would get a reply. Afterwards he wrote more politely, and was told Messrs. G. Rosser and Son (Brixham) had won the special in question. If Mr. Bonndy would like to see the judge's slip, I will forward it to him.'

MORE WONDERFUL RESULTS.

I have had many replies to my advert. in "CAGE BIRDS." I have not time to answer them all. Long live "CAGE BIRDS."—T. Sharp (Uphall).

I had an advt. in "CAGE BIRDS" of February 24th about a Linnet Mule, and I had no less than 14 offers about him.—T. Meadley (Hartlepool).

I have sold a large number of Crests and Crest-breds (about 70) through a few small advertisements in your valuable paper "CAGE BIRDS" this year and have now only a few left.—A. Lister (Gateshead).

Please cancel my advt. under Yorkshires, as I have sold all the birds I have to spare and cannot answer all postcards and letters, as they are pouring in by every post. Thanks to good old "CAGE BIRDS" I have sold about 60 birds all through the small advt. I wish "CAGE BIRDS" every success.—T. Barfe (Pateley Bridge).

I am pleased to say I am making leaps and bounds in my orders by advertising in "CAGE BIRDS"; also pleased to see that it is not only read in the British Isles, for I have received an order from Johannesburg, S. Africa. I wish "CAGE BIRDS" every success.—E. J. Clark (Thornton Heath).

A Real Manx Canary Promised.

I hear, writes Mr. P. McClusky, that an Isle of Man breeder is trying to establish the tail-less Canary (Manx). He has bred a few "stumpys," I understand. They ought to be useful for Norwich crossing! Anyhow, he is going to give us something to stop and gape at next show season—a real Manx Canary!

With reference to the correspondence under the above heading on page 228 this week, we have received a request from Mr. Andrew M. Firth to withdraw his letter from publication, but unfortunately that particular portion of Cage Birds containing the said letter had been printed off before his second communication reached us.

Bird Watching Stations.

Mr. A. Landsborough Thomson, M.A., M.B.O.U., lecturing at a meeting of the Aberdeen Working Men's Natural History and Scientific Society, gave a brief account of the work being done at the bird watching stations, one being in Heligoland and the other on the coast east of the Baltic Sea. Some interesting facts were noted of the migration of birds. A Woodcock that had been marked at Stonehaven was found in the north of Spain, and a Starling marked in Aberdeen was found in Norway. Another case he mentioned was of a Thrush which was marked at Skene, being found at Portugal.

The Railwaymen's Blackbird.

Kirkby Stephen can lay claim to a Blackbird with a white head, while the rest of its plumage is of a uniform deep black. For three years at least the songster has found congenial haunts near the south end of the town, with a special partiality for the N.E.R. station premises and the entrance to the Victoria Park. It is no uncommon sight, in the quiet intervals between trains, for the bird to be hopping about the passenger platforms or picking up food from the line below. The railwaymen show the utmost friendliness towards it, and have come to regard it as a creature of their own, and therefore demanding their protection and support.

A Strange Night-light!

The following little story has blown down South. We are told it is true, but cannot vouch for its accuracy:—A certain merry Mac (whom we will call Mac No. 1) received an invitation to spend the evening at the house of a birdy friend and talk over the happenings of the late show season. The evening was very dark, and the house of his friend, Mac No. 2, was some distance out of the village; so in order to aid him on the return journey Mac No. 1 provided himself with a stable lantern. Mac No. 2 was a very hospitable host, and with the aid of a bottle of the "real stuff" the two spent a "braw nicht." In due course Mac No. 1 picked up what he imagined was his stable lantern, and wended his way as straight as his legs would carry him towards home. Early next morning he was awakened by loud knocking at the front door. He found a messenger from Mac No. 2 bearing the following note: "I am sending back your stable lantern. Please hand the bearer our Parrot and cage, which you took to light you on your way home last night!"

Sixteen Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids in One Season!

By
E. RAPSEY

The "Ups and Downs" of a Cornish enthusiast, which make instructive reading. His luck with two home-bred hen Bullfinches was rather remarkable.

I HAVE been keeping British Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and Linnets, and other kinds of British birds from the time I was a boy of eight years of age up to the present; and I would like to give an account of my experience in trying to get light mules and hybrids. First I tried for six years to get some light mules. I got one light mule, one lightly marked, and one what we call four-pointed bird.

To get hens for muling, I procured a buff Yorkshire cock and two Norwich hens, yellow. The first year I got eight hens from them. The next year I paired two of the hens with their father, and tried two with a cock Goldfinch, two with a Brown Linnet, and two with a Greenfinch. I had a good many mules from them; but they were nothing more than what we in Truro call grey mules that I got from the Goldfinch and Canaries. I got two brown Linnet mules, which I reared and sold, and from the Greenie and Canary I had two nests of young, but I had bad luck with these.

The next season I had good luck from the young hens which I bred from the father and his daughters. I tried these young hens with a cock Goldfinch, which I had had for six years. From the first round with one yellow hen I had one nest of four mules; one was a clear bird, one lightly marked, one an even marked (on each wing and over each eye) and the other a very heavily marked one. But I had bad luck with these. First the lightly marked bird died when four weeks old. A friend called to see them, and I hung them outside of my birds' house in a cage so that he could see them; we went away to see my pigeons and forgot about the three mules outside, and when I went to take them in I found that two of the best had been killed by a cat.

Breeding One's Own Bullfinches.

I will tell you how I used to feed the birds which I intended breeding for mules. I gave a mixture of 1 gallon of hemp, 1 gallon of Spanish canary, ½-pint of rape, ½-pint of teazle, and ¼-pint of maw. A little thistle frequently. For soft-food, 1 yolk of egg, with about 3ozs. of Osborne biscuit and plenty of green stuff, etc., such as watercress, dandelion leaves, groundsel, and plaintain heads.

Now for my experience on getting hybrids from Goldfinch and Bullfinch. First, I will let you know how I got my hen Bullfinches. I had a pair of Bullfinches for call birds in the season of 1907, and in the breeding season of 1908 I turned them into my bird-room to fly about. In the course of a few weeks I lost the hen for a day or two, and when I found her she was in a nest sitting on two eggs; and when I looked a few days later there were five eggs; and within sixteen days there were five young birds! They went on all right, and the hen laid another clutch of five eggs, but she died on them. The five young ones turned out to be four hens and one cock.

In August of the same year I turned the four hens into a flight cage with some Goldfinches and Linnets, and in 1909 I tried to get some Hybrids, but I failed. I only got two eggs from one hen, and they were no good. This past season, however, I tried the same birds again, and got the hens to lay; they laid thirty eggs between them, and I hatched sixteen young Goldfinch-Bullfinch hybrids for them with which I had bad luck in the rearing. I reared five until they were about seven weeks old, when some of the children set a fire going under my birds' house, and the smoke killed twenty of my birds, including the hybrids!

Another pair I tried was a cock Siskin and a hen Goldfinch. I had four eggs from them, which were hatched by the parents. They were in a breeding cage 2ft. by 9ins. wide and 16ins. high, but they were killed by the smoke just referred to.

The next pair was a Brown Linnet, and a hen Goldfinch, but I had no eggs from them.

I also tried a cock Goldfinch and a hen Greenfinch. I had one young one from them, and he died in the smoke with the rest. Next I tried a cock Greenie and a hen Bullie, from which I had seven eggs, and from these I hatched four young.

I also had four pairs of Goldfinihes in my bird-room flying about. I got a small box-tree, and placed it in the centre of the room. I also put some small branches of fir trees round the room for the Finches to build in. One pair constructed a nest, and laid five eggs, hatching out five young ones, which I have now—three cocks and two hens. These I am keeping for hybrid breeding.

The Practical Side.

I will now tell my reader what sort of cages I have in which to breed my birds. My cages were double-breeding cages. The size of each compartment was 18ins. long by 14ins. high by 1ft. deep. All my birds were in the same sized cages. I put sawdust on the bottoms of the cages; I also gave some moss and horse hair, and some wool and small pieces of sticks, with some roots of weeds, dry grass and feathers. For nests I gave them cocoa-nuts cut in half; a hole was cut out in the bottom of the shell, and under the nest I put a small box filled with moss. I used to fix it with a wire to the shell. The box was put under the nest in order to catch the eggs from the hens, so as to keep the cocks from putting their beaks into the eggs.

When the hens had laid their eggs I used to take them away and put them under a hen Canary, which I had kept specially to rear my hybrids. But the hen Canaries were a bad lot of mothers; and if it had not been for the fire referred to above, I should have had over twenty or more hybrids this past season.

Now I will tell how I fed the birds I set apart for, hybrid breeding. I mixed 1 gallon of hemp, 1 gallon of Spanish canary, one pint of teazle, one pint of German rape, ½-pint of linseed, 2ozs. of inga, and 2ozs. of gold of pleasure. Also I gave all the kinds of wild seeds that I could gather for them, viz., charlock, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, dock, plantain, thistle heads, common nettle, poppies, dandelion (heads and leaves), and hard-heads.

With regard to their egg-food, I used 2 yolks of hard-boiled eggs and 4ozs. of Osborne biscuits, with a little castor sugar. This I gave twice a day from the beginning of March up to the time they had finished breeding. I found that the birds would eat the egg-food with a little sugar better than without it. I used to give my birds clean water every day to bathe in, and to drink. I have over 40 birds at present for muling and hybrid breeding with next season if all goes well.

The Most Interesting Foreign Birds.

By
J. YEALLAND
(Havens-treet, Isle-of-Wight.)

The writer "plumps" for the Australian Finches, and in view of the recent arrival of a large consignment his practical hints on their acclimatisation and management will be found most useful.

OF all foreign birds, the most interesting, I think, are to be found amongst the Australian Finches. For beauty and hardiness (when once acclimatised) they cannot, I am sure, be beaten.

Australian Finches arrive in this country from time to time. Large consignments have been imported in the past by Messrs. Payne and Wallace, of Bath, and lately by Mr. Wallace only. Unfortunately these consignments arrive when we are experiencing bad weather and cold winds; if they arrived in May or June the losses would be comparatively few.

The Treatment of a Fresh Consignment.

Two years ago a consignment arrived, and I was sent to London to purchase some of these beautiful Finches. I brought back about seventy, comprising Gouldians, Bichenos, Masked Grass, Long-tailed, Crimson, and Painted Finches. These were all caged off in pairs immediately I got home, and a lamp was kept burning for three hours to enable the birds to feed and drink. This room was fitted up with a radiator, and I endeavoured to keep the temperature at 65 to 70 degrees. I gave the birds no sand or bird grit. I fed them on canary, white and spray millet, and a liberal supply of maw seed. About ten of them looked a little sickly. These I separated, and gave them a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia to two parts water—the next day giving Parrish's Chemical Food (well colouring their drinking water with same). Great care must be taken in giving the latter, as I have known of cases where birds will die of thirst rather than drink it; they fill the beak and throw it out again. You can easily see if they decline it, by looking at the cage; it will be splashed round the drinker, and you will only have to wait a minute to see the bird fill its beak and throw it out again.

The birds were kept caged till the middle of May, the temperature of the room being reduced as the weather became warmer. Then they were turned out in a warm and sheltered aviary. My losses were three only, which I put down to—keeping the room as much as possible at an even temperature, the absence of sand or grit, and the plentiful supply of maw seed.

Now as to the aviary life of these birds. Should anyone be thinking of going in for foreigners, I should advise him to have an aviary in preference to a cage; I mean an outdoor aviary. The cost of a small aviary is very little, especially if you are a rough carpenter.

The Construction of an Aviary.

I will give you a description of a suitable aviary for six pairs of Finches, and something that will be an ornament, and not an eyesore, in a back garden. First pick a sheltered and sunny spot, and put up an aviary as near as possible 16ft. by 10ft., as space allows. Put a course of bricks for the footings, and build your aviary in sections. If you have a high wall as a background, so much the better. Make your framework of 3inch by 2inch quartering; then matchboard it up from the bottom 2ft. 6in. Make the entrance at one end, not in the middle of a section, as the birds will fly the opposite end of the aviary as you enter, and there is less likelihood of a bird escaping. Cover the whole with ½-inch mesh wire netting.

Now for a shelter, you can put one up at the end that gets most sun. Face it, if possible, due south; the birds are then sheltered from cold east winds and S.W. gales. You can make your shelter to suit the aviary, which can be made of slate batten and box-wood from the grocers. Then cover it with felt to make it snug and warm, with a window to open and shut. Plant two shrubs in suitable places in the aviary, and put up a few twig perches. Care, however, must be taken not to put them too near the wire netting, or cats will worry the birds at night.

The Mice Nuisance.

Another nuisance is mice; these will be sure to get in your aviary, and they eat more seed than do the birds, and look well on it; you never see mice in better condition than when fed on canary seed. If you should see a mouse hole, get a can of hot water and pour in the hole, they will soon come up; or better still, get the garden hose and fill up the holes, and when they appear on the surface you can easily kill them with a stick. But if you make a tray for your seed, and stand it on one leg, which has been made very smooth (glass papered or covered with tin); it is then too slippery for the mice to climb. Place this tray in the shelter, or so that the seed cannot get wet with the rain; put in a drinking vessel; one of the best is a large shallow flower-pot saucer, or a photographer's developing dish. Do not fill it too full, or the birds may drown themselves.

The First to Go Into the Aviary.

Next fit up the nest baskets. The best I have seen are those that have two wires at the top. Drive in two wire staples about half-way, and pass the wires through; then by pressing the wires together it can easily be taken down for inspection. While nesting operations are going on, hang these baskets fairly high up, but not too near the roof, for the reason, as I said before, that cats will worry the birds; throw in some dry grass and feathers, also cow hair.

Choose a fine day for turning out your first pair. Say you have pairs each of Gouldians, Bichenos, Long-tailed Grass Finches, Rufous-tails, Masked Grass Finches, and Zebras. Try your Zebras first, and turn out a pair a day. The advantage of this is that you can watch a pair or so, but when it comes to watching a dozen, you cannot do it from the outside. Another thing, aviary life and cage life are two different things. When first you turn out a bird it seems overjoyed.

In turning out birds, the following advice will be found useful: Take them in a travelling or show cage and open the door; put the cage on the ground, get outside and shut the aviary door, and let them come out of the cage by their own free will. They come out more carefully thus; when driven out they go with a bang against the netting, and often stun themselves.

Signs of Nesting.

After turning out all your birds, the exciting time commences. You look day after day for signs of nesting. But don't interfere with them too much. Once a day is plenty to have a look round the nest baskets. Should any pair start nesting operations, watch the hen for egg binding. With cuttlefish-bone or plenty of old mortar at hand, your birds should not be troubled much with this complaint. Place it about in your aviary. Should you have a hen egg-bound (which is easily noticeable) take her indoors and put her in a show-cage in the warm. If she is unable to pass the egg, get a jug of boiling water, place a piece of muslin over the top of the jug; with a feather put a drop of warm salad or sweet oil on the vent, and hold her over the jug, letting her have all the benefit of the steam. Gradually try and work the egg, with the finger and thumb, towards the vent; this requires care, so as not to break the egg; it is, too, a tedious business, but persevere, and you will save your bird and egg as well. When she has passed the egg, put her back in the cage for an hour or so, and feed her, for she may have been hours without food, and naturally very exhausted. After she has picked up, turn her out again, and put the egg in her nest. But keep an eye on her till she has laid her clutch. I have saved several hens in this way.

Should you be troubled with rain at the time the young birds fly, I have found it best to cage the old and young together, but this must not be done till the young are ready to fly, or the old birds will forsake them. Do not put the nest in the cage. The young will keep worrying their parents for food, and they will feed them. You can keep them caged till the young can pick up; then turn out the parents again. It is advisable to keep the old and young separate, or ring the young when they are about ten days old, so that they may be distinguished at any time from the old birds.

HOW TO FIT UP AND MANAGE A BIRD-ROOM

By F. S. MORTON (Bolton.)

This article has been awarded the prize in Section Six of our Essay Competition. It shows how a room may be fitted up at small expense, yet in a practical and adequate manner, for the keeping and breeding of birds.

AS an amateur fancier of ten years' standing, I am making a bold venture on a literary course to describe, to the best of my ability, the principal methods adopted by myself during that period in the fitting up and management in general of a bird room.

To fit up a bird room is one thing, to manage it is another; and if it is not fitted with some degree of neatness, and a system adopted, the management will become more of a toil than a pleasure, if you keep any great number of birds. Being a working man and possessing a limited purse, I have also taken into consideration every detail whereby I could save a little in the building up of my feathered pets' home, but at the same time I have kept it up to date, and have left nothing wanting that would add to the comfort of its inhabitants; and as their environments go a long way towards this point, I will first depict by my pen the room in which my hobby reposes.

The Author's Birdroom Described.

In reality it is a bedroom with a S.E. aspect; and light is conveyed through one double sash window, floor space, 14ft. by 12ft.; height 9ft. The room is fitted at one end with an ordinary fire grate to the front of which I have fixed an iron cover, and I have connected the funnel of my heating apparatus to the flue by means of a piece of stove pipe, which passes through a hole in this cover. The walls are distempered a pale russet green to within twenty-one inches of the ceiling, and the remainder with the ceiling a pure white; this helps very much towards lighting a dull room. The woodwork is also distempered white on the top of the paint, for reasons I will explain further on.

As will be noticed, this is rather a large room to be lighted by one ordinary double-sash window, but since being treated in the above manner, it is as near perfection as possible with regard to light.

All my cages are stained a deep brown and varnished outside; they are enamelled inside a paler shade of green than the walls, and I do not think there can be a neater and prettier effect. These are fixed on a rack or table constructed of two 12 inch boards, secured together by four battens, and then placed on drain pipes, which are enamelled to match the walls; the boards are stained and varnished, as in the case of cages, and all requisites are constructed of wood.

As an idea, I give a pen and ink sketch of the chief rack in my room, which measures 13ft. 6in. in length, and 2ft. deep; on the bottom is a Canary flight, 5ft. 6in. long and 2ft. deep. Next to it on the right is my flight or stock cage for British birds, measuring 8ft. long and 2ft. deep. Between the door and the rack I have fixed a board to form a table; this is secured by a bracket at one end screwed into the door frame; the other end rests on the edge of the rack. On the table will be noticed a kind of a letter rack, which contains my "Nutshell" booklets. I have gathered very useful information from these. Notice also the thermometer. Above the table and fixed on the wall is my general memo and bird room chart for breeding. I keep a pencil suspended from this by means of a string; then it is always handy.

The Decoration of the Room.

Now, I do not think you will improve on the pale russet green for colouring the walls; it is both clean looking and pleasant to the eye. As to the choice of distemper, that is left to the reader, though I have always used the "Sanitary," and this is the one I recommend, as I find that insects of all kinds dislike it decidedly. First commence by doing the ceilings. Using an ordinary whitewash brush, wash off any old loose whitening, and then give a coat of white distemper; when you have finished the ceiling, turn your attention to the walls.

With the aid of an extra pair of hands for a few minutes strike a line all round the room twenty-one inches from the ceiling. This is done with a piece of string, first rubbing it with chalk or any powdered colour, such as washing blue; only take care it is dry. Make a mark at each end of your wall, yourself at one end and your assistant at the other; then hold the line tight to the marks with the left hand and, taking it by the right hand between finger and thumb, you give it a slight but sharp pull outward. This gives you your line. Now distemper this space white, and finish the walls with the green. You can next turn your attention to the door, skirting board and window-frame. The reason for my distempering the window-frame, etc., is, that when you have your annual cleaning you can easily scrub this from the paintwork and recoat it; it is soon dry, and does not smell like paint, which retains a nasty odour for a long time. Though paintwork would not need painting every year, it would need scrubbing, and if it is distempered annually with the rest, it is fresh and clean.

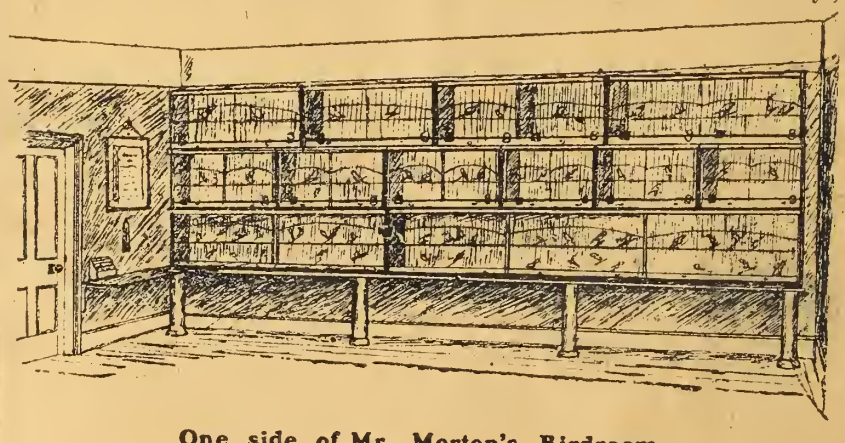
Should the work need another coat, proceed in the same manner, finishing up by scouring the floor with a good stiff brush and soap, using hot water to which has been added a fair quantity of Jeyes' Fluid. This disinfectant I strongly recommend in the bird room, both for cages and the floor.

The Construction of the Racks.

The racks, of course, may be made in short lengths, and this perhaps would be most convenient to those who have not much room in which to construct a lengthy one, but it makes not much difference so long as they are made to make up to the required length. We will suppose you are making a six foot rack; you can use 12 inch by three-quarter inch boards, or you can substitute batten lath. The first-named will be placed together, but the latter you can place one and a half inches apart. In either case the use of battens is required, and the more battens the stronger; in a space of six feet, three should be plenty.

You take your lengths, and place their edges together, choosing the best side for the top, as when fixed the battens will not show, being underneath. Next take your battens, which should be 22 inches long, 1 inch thick, and 2 inches wide; place one at either end, and about 1 inch from either edge; secure these with some stout screws, then treat the remaining batten the same only at an equal distance from the other two. (See Fig. 1.)

Some pieces are now required which you must cut to the same length as your pipes. The same sized stuff as used for the battens will do; these when fixed will each be opposite a pipe, and will be against the wall acting as a support. These are secured by two 4 inch japanned brackets to the rack along the side, that is to face the wall. Here again you use screws. First fix the brackets to the upright (as in



One side of Mr. Morton's Birdroom.

Fig. 2; A B showing the upright in position). The bracket, shown in B, is screwed on the reverse edge of the next upright, and so on; and when these are all fixed you can place it in position on the pipes, and stain and varnish it.

The drain pipes I purchased at threepence each, not a bad speculation; they are glazed, and stand 2ft. high; they are exceptionally firm.

A Home-made Seed-bin.

The next most essential requisite is a cornbin, which it does not need much knowledge of joinery to construct. You require four equal lengths of 10 inch by half-inch board, four pieces of batten lath for the uprights 2ft. 3in. long, and two or three pieces 10 inches long. The lid must be 11 inches wide, and half-an-inch thick, and you must allow a half-inch of the lid to hang over whatever length you decide on having your bin.

I will give my method adopted in its construction. First of all I procured six biscuit tins, and soaked them to get the paper off. These I found measured 8¾ins. by 9¼ ins. round, and 9¾ inches in depth, so I placed them with their 8¾in. side facing me, in one row, and measured up they were 4ft. 4½ inches in length. I therefore decided upon 4ft. 6 inches for the length of my bin. I procured four lengths of board 10 inches wide and ½-inch thick, and cleaned them up. Two of these I treated in the following manner: To either end I screwed a length of batten lath (see Fig. 3). I then screwed on two end pieces; this formed a box frame with the battens on the outside, and measuring 10 inches across inside. Underneath and inside the legs, I screwed a piece of batten lath, and again 3 inches from the bottom of the leg I screwed a similar piece. To the two top pieces the bottom is screwed from the inside, and to the bottom pieces the shelf is screwed to make the whole thing firm. Two pieces 3 inches wide and 16 inches long are nailed or screwed on the outside of the legs at either end (shaped as in Fig. 4). I have also fixed a small shelf with two 4 inch iron brackets; on this is fixed a seed mill. Two tapes keep the lid from going back. On the shelf can be kept tins containing your smaller seed, in the shape of tit-bits; and it is always handy for other things. The lid is fixed with ½ inch brass butt hinges, and the tins just placed in.

Fixing the Cages.

On all my cages I have fixed "domes of silence"; of these there are three sizes. The large size I use for my big flights, and the smaller size for my breeders, etc. I use six on large cages and four on the smaller ones, and this keeps them up from one another, and allows of plenty of air space without taking up much room.

The cages I place on one another, and make three tiers, this being quite high enough on account of any bad air caused by any fumes from your heating apparatus. All the cages should stand at least an inch from the wall; and keep your heavy cages at the bottom. They should all be fitted with removable trays, if possible.

In those corners where you cannot take advantage of the light fix two or three shelves, which are always handy for (what I call) hospital cages, and keep them in perfect cleanliness ready for any ailing birds. Shelves are handy for your nest pans, spare drinkers, etc. A leaf table is also very handy in the bird room, in the drawer of which you can keep rings, labels, etc.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness, so clean your bird cages out—at least once a week. I choose Saturday for my cleaning day, and before I commence I give them all water to bathe in and they enjoy it too, always looking forward to that day. As soon as they finish bathing in the first cage I commence cleaning operations, going along the top, back again with the second row, finishing up with the bottom row. I may mention that I use a little three step ladder for the top row.

Now, as to the cleaning; I have a little pail for the purpose. I remove the drawer and empty the dirt into the pail, scrape the tray well and wipe with a damp chamois leather, rinsing now and again in a pail of water, to which has been added some Jeyes' fluid; and before putting tray back I wipe the bottom of the cage round, put sawdust in the tray and replace it. All grit and sand are put into a grit tray and cuttlebone holder combined which hangs on the inside of the cage. The perches I well scrape and replace. The cages are also fitted with a fruit holder inside; this keeps the front wire from being soiled by the juice of apple, etc.

When the cages are finished with I place all their drinkers and seed tins in a box, and wash them well; then I sweep up and wash the floor. There is never much seed left in the tins, so I do away with what is left; I think it is safest.

The birds should have fresh water every morning, and the window should be open during day and night where artificial heat is used. When I say open, I mean just about an inch during the winter months, taking care to keep the temperature even.

Don't Lose Any Time.

Make it a rule to go round every evening before you retire, and if you detect an ailing bird transfer it to one of your hospital cages at once; don't wait to see if it will get over it, but take it in time, for prevention is better than cure. If you are at all doubtful as to its ailment you cannot do better than seek the advice of Cage Birds.

The winter months should be devoted to the preparation of breeding cages, etc., and at the latter end when you have caged your birds off for breeding, or otherwise, and have your flights clear, give them a thorough doing up, and overhaul them in general; they will need it, and it will pay you.

To get rid of mice, don't encourage them by leaving seed on the floor, if you spill any sweep it up and burn it. Keep a clean floor and see there are no holes in the skirting boards or floor. A very useful and effective article is found in the spring draught board, which is screwed to the bottom of the door; it keeps draught out and stops mice where a door gapes at all. These can be purchased from most ironmongers, and I don't think they are expensive; I bought mine second hand, for a shilling.

There is one more point I should like to impress on the minds of my readers—with regard to heating apparatus. Wherever possible use hot water; failing this, use a coil which is heated by gas; there are plenty on the market at a fairly low price. Don't use an oil stove if you can possibly help it. In any case use a funnel connected with the fireplace (if there be one) by a piece of stove pipe, as I have explained concerning my own—to carry off any fumes caused by the fuel you employ.

By H. C. BROOKS (Horsham).

The author deals at length with the points that go to make up the show-bird of to-day, explains faults to be avoided, and gives his views upon the choice and mating of stock birds.

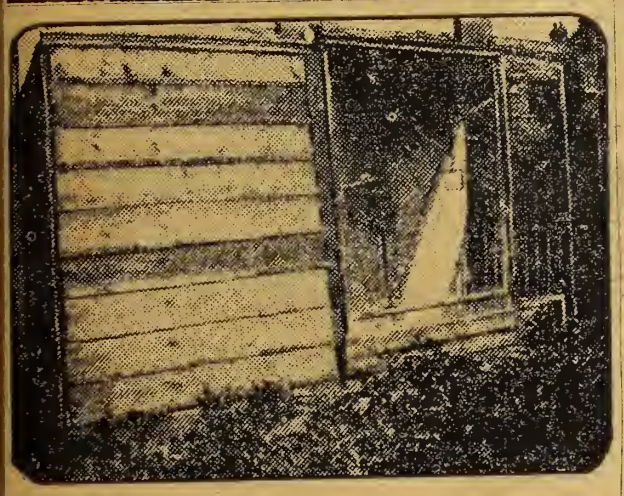
A STUDY of the reports which have appeared in CAGE BIRDS during the past season must convince anyone that a large number of exhibition specimens of the Yorkshire Canary exist at the present day, and yet I suppose there is no variety of Canary which requires more thought and care bestowed upon the selection and mating of stock birds to produce the coveted exhibition specimen. There are so many points which must be constantly borne in mind, that a little slackness or carelessness in selecting or pairing the birds in these days of keen competition would result in the production of mere "wasters" from the exhibitor's point of view, and would reduce one's stock to a very low standard. Yet the task is not an impossible one, and it will be my endeavour in this short article to set forth what I believe to be a common-sense means of attaining the desired goal.

What a Typical Yorkie Should be Like.

It will be apparent that, before one attempts to breed exhibition Yorkshires, he should have some knowledge of what a typical Yorkshire should be like, and as everyone has not the opportunity of attending shows or visiting prominent fanciers' rooms to gain this knowledge, I think I cannot do better at the outset than refer to the standard, as drawn up by the Yorkshire Canary Club and published in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

The standard for clear birds (that is, birds absolutely without any dark feathers) reads thus:—

SHAPE.—Head—small and round; skull, narrow, 5; neck—moderately long and straight, 5; shoulders—narrow, rounded, and well filled, 5; back—long, straight, well filled; wings, long and evenly carried, 5; breast round and smooth, the body long and gradually tapering to a neat waist, 5; legs—long, without being stilty, thighs well clothed, 5; tail, long, straight, and closely folded, 5..... 35



A USEFUL TYPE OF GARDEN AVIARY.

The owner, Mr. A. W. Fullwood (Wolverhampton), has kept many species of British birds therein, and has successfully reared 16 young Redpolls.

SIZE.—Length—6¾ inches, with corresponding symmetrical proportions	10
POSITION.—Attitude erect, with fearless carriage, head, neck, back and tail in straight line	20
FEATHER.—Short, close, tight, compact body feather, and close carriage of wings and tail	20
COLOUR.—Pure body colour; beak, legs, and feet clear	5
CONDITION.—Health, cleanliness, and sound feather	10
Total points	100

It will not be waste of time to study this standard somewhat if one is to learn something from it. It will be observed that—taking 100 points as representing an ideal specimen—35 points are allowed for shape (divided equally between the head, neck, shoulders, back, breast, legs, and tail); 10 for size; 20 for position; 20 for feather; 5 for colour; and 10 for condition.

As to shape.—It will be noticed that the head is required to be "small and round," with a narrow skull. I believe no difference of opinion exists among fanciers as to the head being small and the skull narrow, but I am not so sure about there being so much unanimity as to the correct-shaped head being "round," and I think it is generally agreed that the head should be slightly oval from the root of the beak to the poll, but round (i.e., semi-circular) from eye to eye over the top of the skull. At any rate, this is the shaped head which I should endeavour to get on to my birds, and what I would recommend to others as correct. Nothing is said about the beak or the eye, but the former, to my mind, should be rather small and finely made; and the eye bright and full and well placed in the head (not too near the beak).

After the Manner of a Champagne Bottle.

As regards the neck, this, according to the standard, should be "moderately long and straight." No mention is made as to its being "well filled." As I read the standard, however, the term "straight" implies that the neck should be well filled, i.e., show no hollow from poll to shoulder, or fall away at the sides from the cheeks to the wing-butts, as otherwise it cannot be straight. It should gradually widen from the head to the shoulders, and run into the latter almost imperceptibly, somewhat after the manner of a champagne bottle. But it must be remembered that, the Yorkshire being a slim bird and possessed of narrow shoulders, the neck will naturally not be much wider at its junction with the shoulders than with the head. In keen competition a bird that has not a well-filled neck, in addition to its being moderately long stands very little chance of premier honours.

Some Differences of Opinion.

Coming to the shoulders, here again we find fanciers differ. All agree that the shoulders should be narrow (the narrower the better) and well filled, but some prefer to see them more square than rounded. But if one desires to breed true to standard he must bear in mind that what are wanted in an exhibition specimen are rounded shoulders. My idea of a good pair of shoulders is to have the corners of otherwise square ones slightly rounded off, so that the neck joins them with a nice clean run without showing any angles.

The description of the back, again, is not always interpreted in the same way. The term "well filled" to my mind conveys something more than a flat back, and the back which I have in my mind's eye as the ideal is one which is slightly (very slightly) higher in the centre (from shoulder to tail) than at the sides. If a bird's shoulders are well filled in (as they should be), a nicely rounded back will always accompany them. This is far preferable to the flatness which is by some considered to be the correct thing.

As regards the breast, legs and tail, the standard explains pretty clearly what is required, and I do not think fanciers differ materially in their views on these points.

The next is size. This is important, as 10 points are allowed for it. The length is given as 6¾ inches, but unfortunately the standard does not state where the measurement is to commence. I think a fair interpretation of this is to measure from the top of the head to the tip of the tail, for one should have a high ideal, and it is certainly much more difficult to breed a good bird up to standard length measured from the back of the head, than it is to breed one which is 6¾ inches long, measured from the beak.

On the question of size, the words "with corresponding symmetrical proportions" must not be overlooked, and bulky birds, however long, must not be countenanced at all in the breeding-room if one desires to breed birds conforming to the standard, for a bulky bird is not well proportioned.

More a Matter of Breeding than of Training.

To position are allocated 20 points, and on first thoughts this seems rather a lot to allow, seeing that—according to some—position is pretty much a matter of training. But, is it? I contend it is more a matter of breeding than of training, and so far as my experience goes (limited, I grant) no amount of training will give to a bird the correct Yorkshire position if it has not position bred into it. As is well known, a Yorkshire should stand almost erect on the perch with a bold, defiant air, and if it fails in this important characteristic much of its beauty will be lost.

Feather also is given 20 points, so I need not emphasise the fact that an exhibition Yorkshire must possess feather of the highest possible quality, which, in the words of the standard, should fit the body in a close, tight and compact manner. The flight and tail feathers should be long, and very closely folded.

Colour.—The Yorkshire, being a bird of position, does not require such a rich colour to show off its beauty as some other varieties of Canary do, and 5 points only are allowed for this. But, competition being very keen nowadays, it is necessary not to lose sight of colour, as an extra point or two gained by this may mean all the difference between 1st and special and (say) vhc.

Lastly we have Condition; health, cleanliness and sound feather being given the remaining 10 points. Good health results from the selection of healthy stock birds, with careful management afterwards; and cleanliness and sound feather largely depend on the amount of care bestowed upon the birds, so that if points are lost under this head, the fancier has principally himself to blame.

The standard also deals with evenly and unevenly marked birds, but the type of bird required in those varieties is precisely the same as in the clear bird, the only difference in the standard being the division of the points, which necessarily gives some to markings.

Some Faults that Should be Avoided.

Having gathered what the good points of a true Yorkshire should be, it is equally essential that one should have a knowledge of, at any rate, its chief faults, and I will next treat of these.

Starting again with the head, the first thing to be mentioned is the beak. As I said before, this in a good specimen should have a refined appearance, and should be in proportion to the size of the head. Coarse heavy beaks are generally accompanied by coarse heads, and should be avoided as much as possible.

Flat skulls, whether wide or narrow, also tell against a bird, the former being frequently accompanied by "eyebrows," giving the bird a sullen appearance, while flat narrow skulls take away from the bird its majestic appearance.

Coming to the neck, the chief fault to be found here is thinness. As before mentioned, the neck should show practically no falling away from the head to the shoulders, and thin necks will always count against a bird. It is possible to err on the side of too thick a neck, but this will not happen if the bird's head is small, a "bull-neck" depending on too wide a poll.

Hollow shoulders are bad, as also are broad ones, and both should be avoided. Square shoulders, however, although not in accordance with the standard, are not so objectionable in a stock bird, as they generally denote the presence in a greater or lesser degree of Belgian blood, which gives to a bird its position and "swagger," to which I shall again have to refer.

"Scissor" Wings Not Wanted.

The length of the back is determined pretty much by the length of the flights, so short flighted birds should be rejected. Gutter, or hollow, backs also are rather glaring faults. A gutter back is just the reverse of a well-filled back. An otherwise good bird is seriously handicapped if it has bad wing carriage. The wings should not cross at the tips like a pair of scissors opened; neither should they droop, exposing the rump to view. Well carried wings go a long way towards making a well-filled back.

There are several things in connection with the tail which must be avoided. First in importance is a "hinge" tail, that is, one which does not follow in a straight line with the body. This is a bad fault, and spoils the look of any bird. A short tail also on a long bird (as the Yorkshire is) throws the bird out of proportion, and consequently is opposed to the standard. Wide or open tails are a minor fault, but count against a bird nevertheless.

A HANDSOME AND HARMLESS FALCON.

The Wild Life of the Kestrel or "Wind-hover."

By D. STEWARD.

THE Kestrel (Falco tinnunculus), with the exception of the Sparrow-Hawk, is our commonest Falcon, and is to be found throughout Britain and Europe. That its numbers do not tend steadily to decrease—in common with the Barn and Tawny Owl—is rather to be wondered at, since gamekeepers and farmers wage constant war against it, being in the habit of destroying the bird whenever and wherever they come across it, under the impression that the Sparrow-Hawk and the Kestrel are one and the same, or else that at any rate the one does as much damage as the other. Now the Kestrel is practically harmless; its chief food consists of rats, mice, and insects, and occasionally small birds, such as Sparrows and other Finches, enter into the menu.

An Occasional Lapse.

Unfortunately, now and again a demoralised pair will take advantage of a game preserve and filch a young bird to feed their brood of clamouring youngsters with, but this rarely happens, and at any rate not often enough to justify the indiscriminate slaughter to which these birds are subjected.

The Kestrel is a pretty, compact little bird. Its plumage: head and tail, blueish or slatey grey, the tail also being tipped with white; back, chestnut with black spots; and bright yellow legs. Its length is 14 inches, though this occasionally varies from 13½ to 14½ inches. The female is about 2 inches longer than her mate, in common with the rest of the Falconidae, in which the female is always larger than the male. In plumage she differs in being brown where he is grey, and having a broad brown tip to her tail instead of a white tip, as in his case. But occasionally it is somewhat difficult to distinguish between the sexes, as the female sometimes assumes the plumage of the male.

Hanging in the Air.

The Kestrel at times goes by the name of Wind-hover, and a very appropriate name it is, for the bird may easily be recognised by its peculiar habit of hovering, or, rather, hanging in the air almost motionless against the wind over a particular spot, while it keenly examines the ground immediately beneath for any movement that may betray its unwary prey.

Ruskin in one of his nature studies gives a very interesting account of this habit of the Kestrel. The eggs, which are speckled with reddish brown, vary from four to six in number, and sometimes, as in the case of the Sparrow-Hawk, the old deserted nest of a Crow or Pigeon is utilised, or else a nest is made in a hollow of some cliff or tree, while occasionally its nest has been found in a ruined tower.

The Kestrel is not at all difficult to keep in captivity, and provided he is obtained young, and given his liberty in the garden when old enough, so much the better. I have heard of someone who kept one for several years, which was the pride of its owner's heart.

Special No. 4 at Launceston Show.

Sir,—Mr. Boundy wishes to know who won Special No. 4, which was 10s. for best cage bird in show. Mr. B. dropped us a postcard to know if we won Special No. 4, and I answered "Yes." Our Wryneck won it. The bird has been twice best bird before.

The Welsh C.B.C., Its Rules, and the Coal Strike.

Sir,—I have received from a member the following suggestion as to the alteration of rules to be dealt with at the annual general or such meeting convened for the purpose; and in accordance with Rule 11, I hereby give notice of such proposed alterations, viz.: "The revision of classification to bring same more up to date, and dropping out some classes, which are not patronised in Wales, and the alteration of show and general rules, and ask for suggestions to improve the rules in general." I am sorry to say that in the event of a coal strike it will be impossible for me to call any meetings during such strike.

A Linnet Club Formed for Ossett and District.

Sir,—A meeting was held in the Commercial House, Bank Street, Ossett, when there was a good muster of members. It was pleasing to see so many British bird fanciers from the district, and the society which was formed is sure to be a success, as it has been talked about for two years. We have some fanciers to join us from other towns. There is not a Linnet Club around here for ten miles, and we have plenty of room for members. We have thirty names on the books now—all readers of Cage Birds. We want to make the club one of the best going. Fanciers wishing to join us should send their names to me as secretary at Commercial House, Ossett (entrance fee 3d. to enter, 1d. per week). First members' sing, Easter Monday.

How to Record the Capture of Ringed Birds.

Sir,—In your issue of Feb. 17 Mr. J. Hayter writes that he found a Gull with a ring marked "Museum, Leiden, 644," and also another one with a ring marked "Witherby, High Holborn, London," but he does not, unfortunately, give the number stamped on the latter ring. This number is all-important to trace the history of the bird, and the record as it stands is unfortunately useless. I wonder if your correspondent could give me this number, if he made a note of it? The essential details necessary in these ringed birds when they are recovered are:—Name and number on the ring; the kind of bird; and the date and place where obtained. I should be greatly obliged if your correspondents would note these particulars in recording these birds. I have communicated with the Leiden Museum with regard to the Gull mentioned above, and find that it was marked as a nestling in Zeeland in June, 1911.

No Prize-money; No Replies to Letters.

Sir,—It is nearly twelve months since we exhibited at this show, and our prize-money has not yet come to hand. I have written time after time respecting same, and my letters have been ignored. I did receive a communication in one case saying they would straighten matters up after their prize drawing. I have also put the matter into the hands of an accountant here, but they are rewarded the same as ourselves. In the interest of the Fancy, I warn exhibitors not to support such shows; let us, if we do anything at all, blot them out. I have noticed time after time remarks from exhibitors respecting prize-money, but this is really a very bad case. Had a reasonable explanation been given to us, the matter would have been done with so far as we are concerned, but when one writes a dozen to fifteen letters, one must consider it shabby to be taken no notice of. I believe it is about a fortnight since I sent the last letter, and enclosed a stamped envelope for reply, but it was treated as before. For the exhibitors it is indeed hard lines. They ask for your support; you grant their request, and they get your birds. As for coming home, they take their luck; if they land, well and good; you must consider you are a lucky man. Our birds came home from Wellington in a disgraceful state, cages broken and case broken. Isn't this enough to sicken exhibitors? Should this sort of thing be allowed to go on? The sooner exhibiting at such shows is finished with the better. I should be glad to hear from any other person who is placed in the same position as ourselves. It is not the money we are writing about, but the shabby treatment shown to us.

The Stormy Petrel.

Sir,—A friend of mine recently brought me a fine specimen of the Stormy Petrel, which he had caught in a field in this district. I thought it might interest some of your readers, as it is the first of its kind I have known to be in this quarter.

Roller Canaries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—I have read Dr. Read's appeal to fellow-members of the B.R.C.C. re the decision of the British Roller Club asking him to resign his membership of that Club. I heartily agree with the committee's decision. Here we have a member who was asked not to exhibit his birds at the Palace Show openly setting the committee at defiance and exhibiting his birds there, and securing nearly all the medals and prizes, and openly advertising the fact of his winning them (eight medals), being the only class exhibitor. He is now pleading for our esteemed secretary, Mr. Norris, to bury the hatchet and to work with all in harmony for the good and fellowship of the Roller fraternity. If Rule 13 is any good, it must be enforced, and Dr. Read's conduct comes under Rule 13. Mr. Norris has worked well and hard on behalf of the British Roller Club; no member more so.

Andrew M. Firth.

Sir,—I declined to enter into private correspondence with Dr. Read on these grounds:—that I strongly object to my private correspondence being handed to the Press for publication without my permission, especially when the private letter you have published is "bluff" on his part. But there is one statement which is wrong. He states he was asked to resign on account or showing at the Palace Show. This is wrong; he was asked to resign on account of his general conduct as regards the whole affair. With regard to Mr. Oldroyd, I have nothing further to add to the suggestion I made at the annual general meeting of the B.R.C.C., which you reported. If Mr. Oldroyd does not choose to act on that suggestion, I cannot help it.

J. W. Norris.

[Copy of Letter from Mr. Norris to Dr. Read.] Mr. J. W. Norris begs to acknowledge the receipt of Dr. A. E. Read's letter of the 17th. Mr. Norris is sorry that he cannot enter into correspondence with Dr. A. E. Read on any matter concerning Mr. F. Oldroyd, and cannot, and does not, give permission for Dr. A. E. Read to publish his letter in Cage Birds, or in any other newspaper

[We have received a letter from Mr. F. A. Lester, but as this deals with the accommodation of the Roller Canaries at the Palace Show—a matter which we are informed is now a subject of legal proceedings—we are, of course, unable to give it publication.—Editor.]

THE PICK OF THE NOVICE CINNAMONS.

This bird took First Prize at the last Crystal Palace Show for Mr. J. Wagstaff (Barrow-in-Furness), in what was described by the Judge, Mr. Wones, as the best novice class of Cinnamon Canaries seen for many years.

Does the L. and P.O.S. Need Waking Up?

Sir,—I do not agree with Mr. Bullen inviting "Candid Friend" to join the L. and P.O.S., that he might eventually get on the committee. For my part, I believe he is already a member. What could the L. and P.O.S. do with a man like that—a man who is evidently always looking for the mote in his brother's eye, forgetting what is in his own? Thank you, the L. and P.O.S. wants men, not complainers.

A Member.

The North Wales C.B.S. and Carnarvon (1911) Show.

Sir,—In reply to "A Member, N.W.C.B.S.," re Carnarvon 1912 open show, I beg to state that the show which is to be held at Carnarvon on Bank Holiday is in no way connected with the above society. I also wish to ask "A Member" who he is that the committee should have called a meeting on his bidding? How be can state that a meeting could easily have been held on Boxing Day (day of show) is beyond me, when he knows full well that the judging was not over until after 4 p.m. Will members please note that a general meeting will be held on Saturday next, March 2, at Angel's Temperance, Pool Street, at 6.30 p.m., to select a committee for 1912? Kindly make an effort to attend. I also wish to remind members that their annual subscription becomes due on March 1.

An Offer to Amalgamate the Darlington Societies.

Sir,—A few weeks ago a letter appeared in your columns re the amalgamation of the two Darlington Cage Bird Societies, and I quite agree with the writer's views, although I do not know which (if either) society he is a member of. However, the members of the Darlington C.B.S. took the first step in the matter, and approached the Darlington C. and B.B.F.A. with a view to joining forces, but the secretary of the latter society answered as follows:—

11th February, 1912.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your letter, which was duly laid before the members of the above association at their meeting held last Wednesday, and I am instructed to write and inform you that they cannot see their way to amalgamate as suggested, as we have got all our rules, etc., drawn up for the year, but if any of your members wish to join us, they can do so upon being proposed by any member of our association.

Arthur Walker, Sec.

I was sorry to hear this result of the negotiations, but I think the fact of the rules having been drawn up was a very small obstacle in the way of a good proposition. However, everyone has himself to please, so I suppose we must continue as usual. There is not much difference in the funds of either society, and if they were formed into one there would be more contributions, and more specials towards the show, which would tend to increase the entries. Darlington should then be able to compete with such societies as Newcastle and Gateshead, as there are plenty of enthusiasts in this district, but when one society is pulling against another there cannot be much advancement. I should have thought the best thing would have been to have held a meeting of the members of both societies, and debated the matter, and then put the proposition before their respective members. However, the oldest society has bent the knee, and made a fair offer, with the above result, so I suppose they can do no more, and I think they have done well to make the first offer.

Climbing the Norwich Plainhead Tree.

That well-known old-time fancier and judge, Mr. G. Gardner, has a few words to say to his friend, Mr. Spillman.

Sir,—The article on "Climbing the Norwich Plainhead Tree," written by that able and experienced fancier, my old friend, Mr. W. Spillman, ought to be read and re-read by every novice who wants to succeed in breeding Norwich, and it may be studied with profit by all of us. Mr. Spillman's merry little tilt at the S.N.P. Club's "model" as being minus two outer flights is forgivable, for if I do not quite agree with him, I can realise in the description the zeal of the man to guide the beginner. But Mr. Spillman will forgive me also, I know, when I say that, clever as our artists are, it is extremely difficult for them to delineate the natural quite as Nature does it herself. For my part, while I welcome the presence in our ranks of such a "steadier" as Mr. Spillman, I still think the "model" referred to is as near the ideal he himself paints in words as it is likely we shall get. There is something about friend Spillman's criticism of the judges that I like. We hear of gentle reproofs, don't we? And we are also told that "a soft answer turneth away wrath!" I am sure Mr. Spillman is to be congratulated upon his frankness. Judges cannot claim immunity from mistakes; they do not. But they often find they cannot—and neither can practical idealists—make bricks without straw. Mr. Spillman will understand their position some times when judging a class of so-called Norwich Plainheads. With an aching heart they often give prizes to "the condemned" simply because they cannot find those other chaps. Judges, however, do not always meet with such sensible and kindly "prodding" as Mr. Spillman indulges in. They are sometimes (not frequently, but now and again) raked fore and aft by those who shoot poisonous pellets taken from the wallets of ignorance and personal disappointment. Mr. Spillman's criticism is that of a balanced mind; it is not of the kind that essays, after a very brief portion of this life's experience, to follow judges of acknowledged repute through a Norwich section and fail to find one single correct award. I have seen that sort of thing in my time. Such abuse is not judgment; it is spitefulness. Decent men see it and appraise it at its true value. While I do not quite agree with my friend Mr. Spillman in his little tilt at the model, I can agree to differ, because I am convinced, first of all, that he does know what he is after and what is required; he has a clear and practical conception of what ought to be, for he has more than once produced it. One thing in the article under notice struck me very forcibly. Mr. Spillman begins with the beak of the Norwich. That's the way to go about a thing. He has the bird, as it should be, in his eye. He does not start to breed haphazard. He knows what he wants and begins to delineate it in words from the top end. Few men think of the beak until the last; and not even then—some of them. A proper beak, correctly shaped head, well formed chest, nice back, good neck, wings, tail root, and tail—all these are parts of one harmonious whole—parts to be filled in when the outline is fully fixed; aye, and parts which are filled in by the master builder who studies the antecedents of each bird he uses from a record kept by himself, and does not rely on the mere fact that a bird has won to cause it to appeal to him as being likely to breed winners. All winners do not breed winners; and I have always said that the man who thoroughly masters the principle of how to mate properly is the man to succeed. He will be the man who will be able, by a keen study of antecedents—for that is what Mr. Spillman's article means if it means anything at all—to breed and select such breeding stock as will produce winners. He will know how he got into his harness. He will not be like that Lancashire chap I once saw at a show on a broiling hot summer's day, many years ago, when old friends Stanley Robinson and Abraham Hamer were alive. The chappie had on a collar deep enough for a sleeve cuff. It had got well wrinkled by perspiration, and Robinson exclaimed to the wearer: "How didst get into that collar, Jem? Didst thee go up it or come down it?" What is needed is not for beginners to be told to mate show birds to breed show birds, but helped to study the antecedents of their stock, and each point thereof, and so to master what each antecedent point produces, that the blending may produce, and continue to produce, the ideal. That is skilful, helpful, and it is honest. Thank you, Mr. Spillman.

A Chaffinch Caught Wearing a Marking Ring.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. D. Fraser, of Nairn, regarding the above, I may mention that I have rung Chaffinches, Greenfinches, and Linnets. They were liberated on the first day of January, and the rings were of white metal and numbered one to twelve. Perhaps the inclement weather has something to do with the tarnishing of the ring. I may mention that a paragraph appeared in "The Highland Leader" regarding the marking of the above birds, as I am interested in the migration of same. I shall be grateful to hear from other fanciers, if any caught, and where.

A Scottish Roller Canary Club Formed in Glasgow.

Sir,—A meeting with a view to forming a Scottish Roller Canary Club was held in Neilson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on Saturday, Feb. 24, when thirty gentlemen attended. There was a splendid representation from all parts around Glasgow, and twenty-one members were enrolled. This is certainly a much larger number than was expected, and points to a good future for the club. Mr. Kremner, of Manchester, sent a team of birds, and Mr. Thompson, of Stevenston, brought three birds. The different tours were explained by Mr. Bradfield, who, by the way, was one of the original members of the British Roller C.C. The friends listened attentively to the explanations, which were enjoyed by all. A committee of five gentlemen was formed with power to add to their number, and the secretary was instructed to proceed at once to obtain club rings for the use of the members this year. A vote of thanks was awarded to Mr. Kremner. Thanks are also due to Mr. Proudfoot, of the Glasgow West End C.B.S., for attending and giving the members some good practical advice for their future guidance.

Canary Farming in the Open Air.

Birds that stood the Winter and Thrived when placed Out-of-Doors.

Sir,—I should like to thank "Kittie Clay," a contributor to your valuable paper, for her article on "Canary Farming in the Open," which appeared in your issue of Nov. 18 last. I may say that through this article I took courage and decided to keep mine in the garden through the winter months, without any artificial heating whatsoever, and although we have had a very severe winter my birds are very much alive and doing far better than if I had had them indoors. I would also like to add that I am only a beginner, and that I have found Cage Birds Annual of very great value.

The Clashing of Show Dates in Ireland.

Sir,—In your notes of last week I observe the secretary of Lurgan C.B.S. stating that their annual show had been fixed for Dec. 13 and 14 next. As you, sir, are aware, the committee of this, the Larne and Dist. C.B.A., have a considerable time ago arranged their show for the 12th and 13th, and had these dates inserted into the dates fixed column of your paper. My committee consider that it would be a great mistake if the Lurgau Society persisted in holding their show on the dates mentioned, as, of course, it would affect us and them very materially, as we have had for the past number of years a number of exhibitors from Lurgan and neighbourhood, and it would be impossible for them to show both at Lurgan and at Larne; and, further, there are a considerable number of exhibitors in this district who would, in all probability, show in Lurgan, if that show was arranged for any other date.

How I Caught the "Canary Fever."

Sir,—It is five years ago now since I found myself at a little railway station with half an hour to wait. Having already devoured the contents of my morning's paper, I began a search for something by which to pass the time. I was rewarded by finding a paper in the waiting room; at first glance I decided it was nothing to me, but having nothing better to do I just looked at the pictures and then read an article. My first opinion was rapidly changing. I read on till the train came in, and I read on during the forty minutes' journey to London. The paper was Cage Birds, and I had caught the "Canary Fever"—caught it badly, too, as events turned out. Fate next day ran me up against a fancier, and conversation veered round to the breeding and keeping of Canaries, and he invited me to see his birds. My word! I never thought London held so many. There was a large aviary full and numerous cages holding one's and two's and three's. As you may guess, the fever got rapidly worse and worse. I falteringly asked him if he would sell me one or two of his birds. Mind you, I was as green as the proverbial grass about the management of Canaries, but this man was a true fancier, and I should have been well advised to stick to him instead of thinking I could teach him after a week or two. He advised me, as it was getting late in the breeding season, not to start breeding that year, and anyway not to start with any but the common kind. As, too, I was so "green" (only he put it in kinder words than that), I should have, say, four, five, or six German hens, till I was quite used to their ways and the methods of feeding them. He promised to set me up in the spring with a couple of cocks to go with them. I took that advice, and I am sorry to say that was the last advice I took or, at least, worked on from him. I left his aviary that afternoon with five nice little hen Canaries and a store of information. Then began such a lot of cage making as it seemed never was. The wife was very upset. She had heard that birds brought mice, and then she couldn't have them scattering seeds all over her house, etc. Eventually we compromised, and it was decided that I should keep them in the box room. "Mind you," she said, "you'll have to clear the room out and find proper places for the boxes; and don't expect me to feed the birds when you're late of a morning. And if they bring rats, you'll have to catch 'em." All this I agreed to, after casually remarking that the birds seemed to have brought one lot of "rats" already. A month passed, during which time I became possessed of a lot of birdy literature, and I only lost one bird. Well, I decided it would be fine to start bird breeding at once. The idea struck me as great, and I immediately put it into effect. I took tram at once to where I knew there was a bird shop, and on telling my wishes to the man in charge was shown a cage about 3ft. square with 25 to 30 birds in—"All cocks, singing deafening," he said. For 8s. I could have my pick, or he could pick me one out for 6s. 6d. I was fly enough to get him to pick the 6s. 6d. one first, as I knew it increased my chances on the 8s. stake by one, but I must tell you he had "done" me. Well, I took that "cock" home, with a couple of nest pans. I put "him" with all four hens in a Crystal Palace cage, and after a week, as "he" wasn't "singing deafening," I called on Mr. Bird-dealer, and he seemed very upset. "Of course," he said, "I could have another choice, but sometimes Canaries didn't sing for a fortnight after being removed." He again assured me it was a cock, and inquired as to where I was keeping it. When I told him it was in a Crystal Palace aviary with four hens, a light seemed to come over his face as he said: "Of course, sir, you know cocks never sing when they're breeding?" Very flattered, I admitted I had forgotten the fact for the moment. Again I wended my way home and awaited events. This time I hadn't long to wait. Tuesday morning I found an egg in one of the nest pans I had filled up with a penny nest bag. Joy was rampant within my breast, and I speculated on which of the hens was the fond mother. I left the egg in the nest, and on Wednesday there appeared another, but still no signs of the mother. Thursday I crept in, and to my horror the "cock" was sitting on the nest. Off I went to Mr. Bird-dealer, and told him the facts of the case, and demanded another bird. Then more light seemed to come over his face (or were they smiles?) as he asked me if in all my experience I had not had a cock that sat on the nest while the hen was feeding? Well, I let it go at that, but I didn't know he was "pulling my leg." I then left the eggs for three solid weeks, but I saw no other bird but the "cock" sitting. Then I broke them, one at a time, and examined them; and, needless to say, again visited Mr. Bird-dealer. This time he told me the "cock" wasn't singing because it was moulting. After the moult I visited him again. This time I don't think he was pleased to see me, for he told me somewhat roughly that I couldn't have my money back, and I couldn't have another "pick" (as he termed it) as the "time limit" had expired, and with that I had to be content. But even that bit of bought experience didn't cool the "fever," and as I had all the autumn and winter, I set to work in real earnest to learn all I could, and to get real pals for my hens, and to make proper breeding cages; and when the spring came I had got more knowledge and less pride. Then, as I had been a regular reader of Cage Birds, I took the advice often found between the covers of that excellent little paper, viz., deal only with reliable bird-dealers, and, if necessary, use Cage Birds deposit system, and got two excellent little songsters. At the end of my first season proper I found myself with eighteen youngsters, although I had to feel my way, as it were, with the aid of our penny weekly. I very soon found that the wife was as fond of them as I was, and it was a race who should be up first to feed them. Since then I have set up two other young fellows in the hobby, but I find that the tendency is that they will not take advice till the second year, after they have made a "bloomer" of the first. If anyone profits by my first year's experience I shall be amply rewarded, as I have the love of all birds at heart; and, as every fancier knows, they are much better off with a man who understands them than in their natural conditions, and the birds themselves know this too. Last, but not least, join Cage Birds League, and wear the badge always; and you will be surprised how many interesting little chats you will get with other birdy men. Incidentally, too, you will be helping to right a great wrong that is overshadowing our interesting hobby.

More Early Birds.

Sir,—I am pleased to tell you I have a fine brood of five young Canaries, just a month old, out on the perches. They were hatched on Jan. 28, and are doing well—three yellow and two heavily marked. I sat the same hen on Feb. 22 with five eggs. I had early birds off the same pair of birds on Jan. 10 last year. She reared fourteen young birds in all. She lost three in the first nest, which were hatched on May 6. I have another hen with two young Canaries a fortnight old, also a Linnet and a hen Canary which have made a nest and are doing well. Last season I bred 37 young with two cock birds and three hens. I have the same birds breeding now. I sold all except three pairs, which I intend to breed with this season. I have mentioned Cage Birds to all my customers, and they have told me they wouldn't be without it. My early birds can be seen, if any fancier would like to pay me a visit, at Halkin Street, Flint.

Some Interesting Foreign Birds I Have Kept.

Sir,—Perhaps a few words on foreign birds may interest some of your numerous readers, who may be thinking of furnishing an aviary. I will commence with Japanese Robins, or Pekin Nightingales, the most fascinating of all the small foreigners. I had a pair for five years. These birds are very beautiful; olive green backs, orange, etc., breasts, large eyes and coral beaks, with variegated wings and tail. Baths are their great delight—as many times a day as they can get them. My friends are very fond of seeing the birds bathe. They use their feet to wash their heads like humans using their hands for their faces. They preen each other's feathers, too, and are very devoted to each other. When mine went to roost they were always close together, looking like one bird. The cock always spread his wing over the hen, and I never saw such devotion in any other birds. The cock bird had fits when moulting. I have taken him out of the cage thinking he was dead, and have tried remedies; but I have found him slowly to recover. And when I returned him to the cage the joy of both was wonderful. All foreign bird fanciers should keep Japanese Robins. I never gave them any food except ordinary mixed seed, fruit, and flies; the flies they enjoy alive. My pair of Robins were healthy, and lived five years. The hen died first, and the cock grieved and died a few days after. He would not let a new hen come near him, so he was devoted to the end to his wife. Saffron Finches are pretty, but I do find them uninteresting and difficult to tame. I tame all my birds so that they will eat food from my hand. Virginian Nightingales are very nice birds. Both are handsome—the cock red, and the hen reddish brown. The song at night I enjoyed very much. I had them with small birds, and did not find they did any harm. The Nonpareil is a very handsome bird, and looks well with others, with his lovely feathers. The Indigo bird is a very charming little pet, and a lovely blue in colour—brown in winter. It is interesting watching the bird change into the most lovely blue. It is very fond of ants alive. If earth and ants are put into a basin he will catch them, and it is amusing to watch him do so. Waxbills are very pretty, gentle little birds. The Amaduvades or Avadavats are sweet little creatures, lovely in colour; but they want much care and close wires to the cages, escaping frequently even then. Chestnut Finches are pretty, and the hen lays many eggs, sits for a few days, and then forsakes them. Such, at any rate, was my experience. Mannikins are dear little birds, as also are Cordon Bleus, but they are delicate. Weavers are soon tamed. They are interesting to watch when weaving. I used to give them little balls of cotton, which they soon weaved, either in the bars or anywhere they liked. I have had Parrots of all kinds, but I find that Polly Grey is the best talker, though others talk very well. I have had the King Amazon (wonderful in plumage—mine was a rare bird); Rosellas (charming pets, which talk very sweetly); King Parrot (very handsome with his green back and wings, red head and breast—the hen green); Galahs, grey and pink (very amusing, really Cockatoos, but very affectionate; mine did not talk, but a friend of mine had one that did; all could talk, I expect, if properly taught); and Ring-neck Indians (charming pets; the cock whistled tunes and the hen talked very well). The small Parrots I do not find copy the human voice like Polly Grey, but talk in a little squeaky voice, being small, I suppose. I also had a Myuah that could talk, but though the cage was cleaned twice a day I found the bird a dirty one, though very interesting.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(For Rules, see last week's "Cage Birds.")

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Lite—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SLIPPED THIRD TOE (Anxious).—If the bird is fairly agile on the perches there is nothing whatever to prevent him properly filling eggs. If the slipped toe is of some months standing it is much better left alone. Full details of treatment are given and illustrated in Part VI. of "Our Canaries."

CLOSED MARKING RINGS (G.R.H.).—The Palace show has no definite rule on the subject of Canaries being shown with rings, and the show manager informs me that providing the ring was not of an unusual or conspicuous character he does not think any judge would pass a bird for wearing a ring. As regards the Border Fancy there is a definite rule that no bird wearing a ring shall be allowed to compete at shows held under Border Fancy C.C. rules.

MEDICINE IN BEAK (J.M.W.).—(1) I do not care about giving medicines direct in beak. Possibly you give it too strong in the water. Try 12 or 15 drops in two tablespoonfuls of water. Remove water altogether for two or three hours, and then offer medicated water. If this does not answer the purpose, mix together one teaspoonful of the mixture advised to "Beeston" and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, and give one drop of this in the beak morning and evening. (2) I should be very doubtful of the sex of this bird. Treat for a fortnight as advised to "K.A.I." on February 17th.

SEX AND ACCOMMODATION (Ignoramus).—(1) No, it is not unreasonable to expect an eight months old Yorkshire cock to sing. As he is perfectly healthy I should be doubtful of his sex. He ought to be in full song. Try the treatment advised to "K.A.I." on February 17th for three or four weeks. (2) I assume 6 ft. is the height. If this is correct the aviary will accommodate 20 birds. But if you want them to breed, do not put in more than 12—nine hens and three cocks.

LIMEWASHING (St. Michael).—There is no danger whatever to the birds' eyes from whitewashing the house as you suggest. But I should imagine there will be some risk of the birds taking cold from the damp atmosphere that must prevail during drying. As you cannot move them elsewhere, cover fronts of cages, and keep the place well aired until walls are dry. You may safely add two tablespoonfuls of carbolic fluid to each gallon of whitewash, and keep it well stirred, to destroy any chance insects.

WINGS SORE AND IRRITABLE (M.H.).—Red mites are practically certain to be the cause. Bathing will not remove this pest. You must thoroughly overhaul and disinfect cage and then re-paint and varnish if necessary. Full details for this were given in this column twice at the beginning of February. Give a little bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days in the first week add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece to the drinking water. Anoint the sore wings sparingly about three times a week with boracic ointment.

LOSS OF FEATHERS (Bare Head).—Stop the mixed seed, and do not give apple every day. Treat strictly as follows for a month. Staple diet, plain canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and either a morsel of banana, apple, or a spray of green food. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, slightly dusted twice in each week with flowers of sulphur, and a pinch of maw seed. Once or twice a week give a pinch of mixed seeds. Allow it to bathe freely in nice mild weather. In the drinking water add twenty drops of whiskey, a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, every third day. Slightly anoint the bare skin with Lanocyllin every third day until the new quills are well through.

DIFFICULTY IN PERCHING (K.Y.).—As you have closely examined the bird, I assume you have satisfied yourself that the toes are not deformed. If this is so, also see that the perches are firmly fixed, and do not wobble about, and that they are a proper size for the bird to grip. If the claws seem unable to grip, bathe the feet daily for a few minutes in a warm solution of Wych Hazel, about a small teaspoonful in a saucerful of warm water. Continue this for a week. Give a staple diet of plain canary, a pinch of rape every second day, and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a half teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw. Give the aperient advised to "Puzzled to Know" for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphur acid, every second day for a week or fortnight. If not better in a fortnight write again referring to this reply.

TAKES BAD TURNS (Puzzled to Know).—It would have been helpful had you said whether any struggling occurs during these "bad turns," or whether the bird hangs in the sun sometimes, and the "turns" occur during those periods. When in direct sunlight occasionally, birds often show very alarming symptoms, when in reality they are merely enjoying a sun bath, so to speak—sunning themselves. Still, your dietary is very bad, and may be the cause of some more serious trouble. Give a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape. Once a week on the intervening days give a small teaspoonful of mixed seeds, and on one other day a similar quantity of egg food, or crushed sponge cake well sprinkled with maw seed. Three or four times a week give a spray of watercress or leaf of dandelion. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. Do not overheat it, but keep in a cosy place just away from the quite chilly side.

FEATHERS GROWING (Yorkshire).—You should have enclosed cutting of last reply, or given a reference to it. Stop using the ointment as soon as the new feathers show signs of bursting the quills. Do not be too liberal with bread and milk. Better stop it altogether now, and substitute in its place half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of mixed seeds and morsel of banana. Well mix together a teaspoonful each of cod liver oil emulsion, Fellow's syrup of hypophosphites, and malt extract, and mix three drops of this with the sponge cake each time. Continue it for a month, if necessary, until hen has gained a fair measure of strength.

SORE WING (M.H.)—The symptom is a very common feature of red mite attacks, but as you say this pest is not present, I take it this is not the cause in your case. Still, you should examine cage very carefully. Give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add as much sulphate of soda and chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, to the drinking water. Slightly anoint the sore parts with Lanocyllin three times a week until headed.

AGE FOR BREEDING (C.A.R.).—The age at which a hen ceases to be of use for breeding varies greatly with the individual, and its health and general treatment. But, speaking generally, a hen is certainly not too old to breed at four years old. It is no uncommon thing for them to breed well at six or seven years old. It is very probable that the late breeding in 1910 and spring moult in 1911 was responsible for no breeding results last season, but as the hen is active and healthy, there is no reason why she should not breed successfully this year. It is worth trying.

DISGUSTED WITH SEED (Roller Trio).—(1) See that bird is kept under comfortable and healthy surroundings. Give a staple diet of two parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar, and a spray of watercress, chickweed, or leaf of dandelion, and on the alternate days a morsel of banana and a pinch of maw. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and black rape. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. (2) About equal parts rape and canary is the staple for high-class Rollers, though, personally, I prefer a little more Canary. For full details of Roller feeding get the Nutshell booklet on the "Roller," 2½d. post free. (3) See reply to "B.A.G.," which fully answers this query.

SPRING MOULTING (Silverdale).—The bird was considerably later than it should have been, considering its age, in commencing to moult last autumn. That moult has been suspended, and the bird is simply completing now the moult commenced last autumn. Keep it fairly warm, and in addition to the staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give either a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or a spray of green food. See that it is quite free from draughts and foul air. It will probably soon get all-right on this treatment, but will not commence singing until the moult is quite finished. You should see the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary," for details of feeding.

DAMAGED WING (H.B.).—Is the wing really injured in such a way as to show the seat of injury? It is just possible the wing carriage may be the result of a natural defect and not the outcome of injury. In this case you can do nothing whatever to remedy it in this bird. If the symptoms arose suddenly it is doubtless an injury, and the only course I would advise you to pursue is to put the bird in a small low cage with perches not more than two inches from the floor. Place food and water very easily get-at-able either inside or outside, and keep bird as quiet as possible in order to give the wing absolute rest. Keep it in this condition until it begins to move about freely of its own accord, and preens its wings freely, shaking the flight feathers whilst doing so.

SWELLING ON BACK (Fag).—If there has appeared a distinct "head" on the swelling, by all means prick it carefully with a clean needle, press very gently to remove any contents that come away easily, and then anoint the place daily with Lanocyllin. If no "head" appears, do not operate on it. Bathe it daily for a few days by wringing out a pledget of cotton wool, or morsel of sponge, in fairly hot water—not too hot—in a saucerful of which you have mixed a teaspoonful of extract of wych hazel, and holding this on the swelling for a few moments, then wringing out anew in the water and re-applying, and repeating this for several minutes each day. At the close of bathing each day, dry gently, and anoint with Lanocyllin. Thanks for kind remarks re "Our Canaries."

QUIET SINGERS (X.8.).— (1) A properly trained German, or Roller, is undoubtedly the best and softest singer you can hope to get in the Canary tribe, but as you except this breed from consideration, the Border Fancy comes nearest to it in all points, and has a little better colour, much better markings, but is very little (if any) larger in size. You could get a very nice pair of Borders for the price you name, and I would suggest an even-marked buff green, with rather light points and a light eye-marked yellow, also with green marks, and both birds bred from an even-marked strain. I should prefer the buff to be the hen, but this is not essential. (2) A clear buff Yorkshire from an even-marked green strain would be best for improving appearance of Roller, but it would not make the song any softer. A similar Border hen might do, but the improvement in appearance, apart from markings, would be very small indeed. (3) A good sized clear yellow Yorkshire, preferably rather closely inbred, and from a cinnamon-marked strain. (4) Same as No. 3.

EGGS EXPOSED (A. Harris).—You did right to remove the cock if there was any reasonable ground of suspicion that he was responsible for the disappearing of the eggs. The three that remain will not have been spoilt by the hen leaving them uncovered for an hour.

VERY BARE (Novice, Hanley).—You ought to have said how you treat the bird generally, and to what extent it is bare. It is quite possible the bareness may be due to red mites. Examine cage well and if any mites are discovered, thoroughly overhaul it as advised in several replies during the last week or two. Besides this, feed and treat the bird the same as advised to "Bare Head" in this issue.

IMPROVING SIZE (Enquiring).—You omit all particulars about your hens individually as to colour and markings. Consequently, I can only advise you to get the biggest and stoutest unrelated cocks you can procure, and get them from a strain that has plenty of size running through it. Get mostly buff cocks, so as to mate up about one-half of your stock this season double-buffs, and get them with plenty of chest, good stout necks and heads, and short stout beaks, but avoid birds with long flights and tails, and be very chary of any showing eyebrows. Stick to the Norwich type and aim at getting birds with a massive frame rather than apparent bulk, which is due to a redundancy of feather.

NUMBER OF MATES (F. H. I.).—No, I do not advise you to try mating the Roller with all three hens. It is quite sufficient to run one cock with two hens when you are breeding in cages, as you purpose doing. You should therefore get a second cock, and you might also, if you desired, get another hen and thereby be able to run each cock with two hens. If you get another hen let it be a Roller, as two Norwich hens will put quite enough Norwich blood into your stock. The song of the crossbreds will be very good if trained only under the Roller cocks, but it will not be equal to the pure Roller song.

BURNING COKE (W. F.).—Unless the ventilation is very good and the flue where the coke is burned thoroughly efficient for carrying off the fumes and product of combustion, I should not regard it as perfectly safe to burn coke on a fire immediately underneath the birdroom. But if the birdroom is properly ventilated and is isolated by closed doors, passages, etc., from the room underneath, I see no reason why a coke fire should be harmful. It all resolves itself into a question of ventilation and an efficient flue, which can only be determined by one on the spot.

BREEDING YORKSHIRES (V. A. G.).—The procedure is precisely the same for breeding Yorkshires as any others. As you appear to be inexperienced, you could not do better than get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (which our Manager would send you post free for 7d.), and closely follow the directions therein. Meantime, give a diet of plain canary as staple, and a pinch of summer rape each day separately. Every second day give also about half a teaspoonful of egg food, or any substitute for this which you may use, well sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and linseed. Give a leaf of dandelion, if obtainable, every day. Treat each bird on these lines, and keep them in separate cages, with the hen preferably in the breeding cage, until about the end of March, when you may, if both are in forward breeding condition, place them together. All other details you will find in the handbook recommended.

A TRIO (N. W. S.).—(1) Providing you allow the paint and varnish to get quite dry and hard before introducing the birds, it will be quite safe to put them in cages painted and varnished inside. (2) Sawdust answers very well indeed as a covering for the floors of flights, but a supply of gritty sand should be given in a shallow box or tin in one corner of the cage. (3) During the warm, dry, summer months it is very advisable to allow sitting hens the opportunity of bathing, especially during the last few days of incubation. During the first nests in the early spring it is not so necessary, and they do just as well without them.

CANARIES IN AVIARY (No Nom-de-plume).—The earliest date for moving Canaries from cold room to outdoor aviary depends wholly upon the character of the season. If the aviary is well sheltered from wind and rain you may take advantage of any mild spell of weather about a fortnight hence to make the transfer. Allow plenty of fresh air indoors for a day or two prior to removal, but avoid direct cold draughts. (2) If the birds are intended to fly loose you do not want an equal number of sexes. Nine hens and three cocks will be sufficient stock to allow for breeding.

CANARY QUERISTS,

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

ONE YEAR LINNETS (W. G. Beckett).—Most certainly one-year old Linnets will breed Mules. Why not? They will breed with hens of their own species if they are out in the fields; so why not with hen Canaries when in cages? A big, steady young Linnet, which has never mated with a hen of its own kind, is, as a matter of fact, just the right sort of bird to utilise as a muler.

THE OTHER BIRD (Esperance).—I think you might try keeping a cock Goldfinch with the cock Linnet. He would provide a contrast both in colours and song. As a general rule, it is better to cage birds separately when song alone is desired. Birds kept in small cages don't want "companions"; they resent the presence of another bird in fact, in almost every case.

SEX OF GOLDFINCH-GREENFINCH HYBRID (Hitchin).—The colour is the best guide. If your bird shows the blaze of the Goldfinch plainly, carries pronounced, good-coloured wing-flights, and is warm in colour on the rump, then it is a cock. The hen is pale and washed-out looking by comparison, exhibiting hardly any colour contrasts, and only a trace (by comparison) of the blaze. Almost all hen mules "twitter" and "sing" more or less when in high condition. But the song of the cock is a very different kind of performance.

WITH OR WITHOUT? (H. D. Scott).—I have often stated that if a Linnet has never been used for Mule breeding, it is best to allow him a sight of his future wife before finally putting them together. Let them run together for a day or two now and again, and pair up finally (if both are ready, mind you) towards the end of March. You will soon see why it is advisable to let the Linnet get used to the look of a Canary, and the Canary get used to the look of a Linnet. When the latter is first put with the hen, she will be very nervous, and no doubt dash wildly about: and the Linnet will most likely act in the same way. It is just the same if you introduce a Green Canary into a flight cage of clear or lightly-marked birds—the appearance of a dark relation sends the other birds into a panic (and vice versa). Familiarity breeds contempt—to say nothing of Mules. I always let my young hens spend a few days about now amongst Finches. I am quite convinced it is for the best.

A MATING MATTER (Dot).—A Linnet and Goldfinch need not necessarily be house-moulted before being suitable for mulling. Scores of Mules are bred every year from black-legged (field-moulted) Finches. Mate first whichever bird is in the most forward breeding condition; steadiness is a far less important matter.

"REARING" GOLDFINCHES (Claud Ohmey).—As you speak of Siberians, I presume you mean by "rearing," getting the birds to thrive in a cage. Why you should have any difficulty I can't fathom, seeing that thousands of bird-keepers succeed. If you will give me full particulars of the cages you use and your manner of feeding, etc., I shall be pleased to try and help you over the stile. Judging from one expression you make use of, I should think your food is at fault.

A CASE OF A REDPOLL (Anxious).—Gently anoint the place twice daily with a very light smear of "Lano-Kerol" (from any chemist). I can't tell, of course, but if the bird and its cage are infested with red mites, then these little plagues must be exterminated, or the bird will never be in good plumage. Consult CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for the procedure to follow.

BREEDING CONDITION (Staffe, Knot).—Note the reply given "Goldfinch Food," in this issue. A very good hen is a clear Lancashire Plainhead, preferably a yellow; but these, if large and well bred, are expensive. Next best would be a clear pink-eyed hen of Yorkshire type, as large as possible.

A LINNET'S WING (Fife).—It is very hard luck, but nothing whatever can be done now. You broke the wing whilst handling the bird, and it will always be carried in the "cocked up" position you describe. You should have bandaged up the wing at once (secured it in a natural position), when it is possible the fracture would have healed, so that no trace of the injury was observable. It has set the wrong way, so to speak, now.

HAND-REARING THRUSHES (S. T.).—You will find full instructions given in "Nutshell" booklet No. 4 (post free 2½d.) for the hand-rearing of Thrushes and Blackbirds. You should take the youngsters when 10 or 11 days old.

A SUBSTITUTE (W. Baker).—Surely you must be mistaken? I thought pea-meal could be obtained at any large grocer's shop, or corn and seed stores. It is a very common article. Have another look round.

TWO ITEMS (Novice).—I presume you intend to refer to a "three-by-six" Goldfinch. This is a fanciers' term denoting a bird with each of the three outer feathers on either side of the tail marked with a white "moon" underneath. Most Goldies have only two feathers so marked; some but one. Have heard other explanations of the term; this, however, is the generally accepted one. The "British Bird Manual," by Mr. H. Norman, describes the show points of all the best known British birds. The Hardbill section costs 1s. 1d. post free; the Softbill the same (from CAGE BIRDS offices).

A BULLFINCH AND ANOTHER (Across the Water).—I don't think any harm could come of keeping the Bullfinch in the large cage with the Pekin Robins. If he eats some of their soft food, it won't matter in the least, so far as "hurtling" him goes. Touch the hard lump over two or three times on different days with a stick of caustic (obtainable from any chemist). This should quickly bring about its disappearance. Use the caustic very carefully.

ABOUT A CHAFFINCH (Lover of "C.B.").—The young Canaries would pick up some of the notes of the Chaffinch likely enough, but the old birds would take no notice, neither would they be disturbed by his presence in the breeding room. I keep many British birds along with my own breeding Canaries. Whether the "mixture" of song would be an improvement is purely a matter of taste, and one which you must decide according to your own predilections. Get one ounce of tincture of gentian from a chemist, and stir 10 drops into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; give fresh daily for a week to ten days. This is an excellent tonic. Glad to hear you find "C.B." so very helpful.

GOLDFINCH AND AVIARY (W. W.).—The medicine you want to use in the aviary is citrate of iron and quinine. Get one ounce of the crystals from a chemist, and dissolve as much as will cover a shilling in six tablespoonfuls of water. Give fresh daily for four days, then on alternate days (plain water between) over a period of a fortnight. There is nothing whatever the matter with your Goldfinch. The "feeding of the feet" is simply a sign of the bird's high condition. Some Goldies are always playing this game, so to speak, or else feeding the perch-ends or the cage wires.

COLOUR-FEEDING A LINNET (Intending Exhibitor).—I presume you know that it is useless colour-feeding the bird except during the moult? Use him for mule-breeding, if possible, when he will no doubt acquire a liking for a little soft food. During the moult, give the bird his seeds on a "feeding board," and well rub the colour food amongst them. Make the colour food by mixing one part of tasteless pepper to six parts of egg-bread. About half-a-teaspoonful of the prepared food is all that one needs to rub amongst the seeds daily. The "feeding boards" are sold by most dealers in fancier's specialities.

THE CASE OF A LINNET (F. W. C.).—This Linnet is evidently in a low condition and it seems as though it were in a soft moult. It won't be ready for muling for a long while yet, that is a certainty. Feed it generously, giving a fair amount of good hemp. Let it also have a teaspoonful daily of maw, niger, gold of pleasure, plantain, thistle, dandelion, and white lettuce, mixed (say two ounces of each kind of seed). For medicine, get one ounce of compound syrup of hypophosphites B.P. (Fellow's Syrup) from a chemist, and stir 8 drops into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily, for 10 to 14 days.

FOUR OF THEM (Avis).—(1) The Mules would be just as good as those bred in cages. (2) The Britishers enumerated are good. It would be better to have a large Goldfinch, however (a foreigner). (3) I should certainly try the cock Bullfinch. If you find him doing any damage (it is doubtful), you could soon remove him, I take it. (4) This is a matter for you to decide for yourself, as either plan can be followed, and it is just a matter of personal choice. It is too early yet, anyway, for Canary-Bullfie Hybrids.

WAGTAILS AND ROBINS (T. W. Hnddle).—Get copies of "Nutshell" booklets, Nos. 25 and 26 (post free 5d. from "Cage Birds"). In them you will find all the food-stuffs for insectivorous birds fully explained and the management of the birds dealt with. The aviary you describe would comfortably hold about twenty-four pairs of small birds, but not so many if you want breeding results.

A MIXTURE (A. J. B.).—Pairs of the following: Gold, Bull, Chaff and Green-finches, Linnets, Lesser Redpoll, Mealy Redpoll, Twite, Siskin, Bramblefinch, Chaffinch, and Hawfinch, and Yellow, Snow, Reed and Cirl Buntings. Make your choice. There are also Pine Grosbeak, Tree Sparrow, Black-headed and Lapland Buntings. Seed mixture: Canary four parts, teazle three parts, hemp and sunflower two parts each, summer rape, charlock and linseed one part each, by measure.

SEXING SKYLARKS (T. Lukey).—Cock and hen are alike in plumage. Size is a safe guide; and length of wing. If you always choose a very big bird, you are sure to get a cock. The cock has a longer sweep of wing, and carries himself much more boldly and defiantly in the cage. You would find the "Nutshell" booklet on the Skylark very useful.

IN A LARGE CAGE (O. Goldsmith).—It is hard to say what birds will, and what will not, agree. Individuals of some species are quarrelsome, while others are not. The only thing to do is to remove individuals which persistently molest their companions. Your large cage would hold 14 to 18 birds, and the kinds you name are suitable. I should not keep more than one Chaffinch and one Bramblefinch; and maybe you will find it necessary to keep only one Bullfinch.

FOUR MORE OF THEM (Avis).—Eight questions in one week at the busy season is rather O.T.; what? (1) Bait the trap cage with a fat mealworm or two impaled on a pin (I hope this advice is not contrary to the New Act!). It is the Great Tit (or Ox-eye) which is murderously inclined, as a rule. Don't trust them with smaller birds. (2) The Yellowhammer would not be dangerous. Wagtails must have a high-grade insectile food; also live-food as regularly as possible. (3) Yes; to steady them in a cage for a few weeks is an excellent plan. (4) I have seen a Yellowhammer pair with a hen Canary. But I have never seen a Yellowhammer-Canary Mule. The one thing, you see, does not necessarily follow the other thing.

BRINGING GOLDFINCH INTO BREEDING CONDITION (Goldfinch Food).—I dealt fully with this matter only a week or so ago. If you keep the Finch you mention to one hen, it is probable that a greater percentage of eggs will prove fertile. Feed your bird on the following seed mixture: Teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower, safflower and summer rape half-part each. The sunflower and safflower I crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine. It is no use giving safflower unless it is cracked; leave it out, otherwise. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. For fuller details see CAGE BIRDS of February 17th date.

THE HEDGE ACCENTOR (T.).—Should be most pleased to hear further on the point should you have definite evidence available at any time. You are wrong, in a way, in saying that hens of all kinds are nearly always songless. They may be so when in a state of nature, but hens of the most unexpected species will sometimes develop singing powers when kept in cages and aviaries. Hen Skylarks caged by themselves have been known to sing persistently and really well, yet at the same time they have laid eggs on the cage floor. It is frequently the case that house-moulted hen Linnets, Goldfinches, Greenfinches, etc., "sing" in fine style. It is also equally true that two cock birds will pay each other little attentions usually associated with love-sick couples—cock Linnets, Goldfinches, Greenfinches, Redpolls, etc., will feed one another and fuss about as though in the throes of courtship. A cock Pekin Robin will be a novel mate for a hen Hedge Sparrow; still, I should be the last to try to discourage experiments of this kind. Extremes meet, they say; so possibly the demure and shy hen Accentor might discover her affinity in that noisy "firework," the Pekin Robin.

A QUARTETTE (L. W. E.).—The hen Canary when ready will fly about flapping her wings vigorously, and calling loudly; she will carry bits of nesting stuff in her mouth. The cock Greenie will also dance around quite lively, calling ("breezing," as it is termed) at the top of his voice; he will also feed the hen. Give the old birds canary, teazle, rape and sunflower seeds; early dandelion, chickweed, groundsel and shepherd's purse; egg-food when about ready to nest, and when they have young. At the latter period give the hen also cracked hemp and groats, chickweed and shepherd's purse. I have very seldom found it safe to leave the cock Greenie with the hen whilst rearing the young. Some are perfect brutes. (2) The chances are fairly good if the cage is large. Feed as above, being liberal with the wild plants (chickweed, etc.) should young be hatched. Put some of the eggs under a hen Canary, if possible, to be on the safe side. (3) Chances in this case are unfavourable, though it is not impossible by any means. (4) A suitable branch of a fir tree is the best thing. Glad to hear you find "C.B." so very helpful.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

BIRDS FOR CAGE (Olicana).—I am afraid I cannot offer you songsters as well as breeders for a cage, and at the cash limit of a few shillings per pair, and you really cannot do better than make a start with the birds which have been suggested to you, viz., Zebra Finches (7/6), Silverbills (3/6 to 4/6) per pair in each instance. Get a couple of Hartz travelling cages; take out the perches and all the fittings, Cut away two of the bars for entrance, and hang one at each end of the cage. Push a little hay in each and supply a Canary nest bag and leave them to themselves. Let them fly together unless they disagree. The former are Australians, the latter Africans.

SHOW DISPUTE (M. Thomas).—In a class for birds reading "not larger than and including the Cardinal," the Green Glossy Starling should have been wrong classed as too large. I should, however, add that in these mixed classes the judge often takes a little licence when there is no class for larger species, but I presume there was in this case. Anyway, the Green Glossy Starling, on the strict (correct) reading of the classification, is too large to be eligible for the above class.

SISKIN x CANARY HYBRIDS (Mrs. Jewson).—The Hooded Siskin x Canary Mule has been fairly freely produced in Italy and elsewhere, and occasionally one leaks through to this country, but as there is practically no class for Foreign Finch x Canary Hybrids, it does not find as ready a sale as a rare British Finch x Canary would. A true pair of this cross were offered very cheaply in our advert. columns at the end of last year for 75s., but a good male ought to realise that figure.

FOOD FOR GREEN SINGING FINCH (Greenfinch).—The Green Singing Finch is of the same genus (Serinus) as the domestic Canary, and will thrive on much the same treatment. Give it a mixture of two parts canary and 1 part each while millet and rape seeds, mix and keep a constant supply in cage. It will also require green food, and is very fond of an insect occasionally. A mealworm per bird daily with any spider, smooth caterpillar, etc., you can capture for it will be very beneficial, as will also an occasional teaspoonful of "wild Finch mixture." Of course, during the spring and summer it will get a very varied supply of green food. In the winter you must rely on fresh lettuce and sweet apple. If any young are hatched out, soft food must be supplied.

TO GO WITH BUDGERIGARS AND GREY CARDINALS (A. S.).—Cocks only. Green and Virginian Cardinals, Java Sparrows, Saffron Finch, Grenadier and Orange Weavers, but I am all in the dark. If you will repeat query, giving size of cage, where it is kept, and whether you wish all seedeaters or otherwise, I can give you a definite reply. In the meantime, you could include those named above, providing they are not overcrowded.

PARROT PROBLEM (L. A. H.).—Only patience and kindness will solve it. It should talk, most Amazons do, and many Blue-fronts (I take yours to be a Blue-front) become really talented talkers and excellent mimics. No, its tongue should not be cut. It is a barbarous practice and does harm instead of good. You have got it tame—that is half the battle. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation. Fuss about with it a lot; talk to it, and teach it by constant repetition. Make it "one of the family." Keep it where it can see and hear all that is going on. It will become interested, and sooner or later respond to your efforts. Some individuals are much more teachable than others.

BUDGERIGAR INDISPOSED (R. F. J.).—Not very much wrong with it, I think. Get bottle of Dinneford's Magnesia and give three drops direct to the beak from a quill, and after an interval of four days repeat the dose. Put about one-third of a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in its drinking water daily for about a month to tone it up. Till other green food is available, give a leaf of fresh lettuce occasionally, and keep a slice of sweet apple for it to peck at. See that its seed is sweet and fresh (musty or fusty smelling seed should be refused. It is dear at any price). Diet: Canary and white millet in equal parts, millet sprays, a few crushed oats occasionally. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily seed supply. When obtainable free from frost, give seeding grass ad lib. A piece of clean cuttlebone should be continually in the cage. If the wheezing becomes more pronounced, put 3 drops of glycerine into the drinking water in lieu of the phosphates for a few days, and it should soon pick up.

WILL THEY AGREE? (R. H. Walsh).—You do not make it any too easy for me to give you a definite answer, for you give me no idea of the space in which the birds are confined. I have kept the species named together and they lived together in amity, but they were not crowded; there was ample perching and feeding accommodation for all, and no occasion for hustling. Providing the space is not too confined, you can put a pair of Bronze-wing Mannikins with your Spice Birds, Silverbills, Cordon Bleus and Fire Finches.

BIRDS FOR CONSERVATORY CAGE (W. R. Croply).—Yes, I advise all males, and you could have half-a-dozen in your cage. You do not say which you require—seedeaters or softbills. Here are selections:—Seedeaters: Alario Finch, Green Singing Finch, Cordon Bleu, Cuban Finch, Diamond Sparrow, Lavender Finch, Saffron Finch, Black-headed Siskin, Red-crested Cardinal. Softbills: Pekin Robin, Blue, Scarlet, and Superb Tanagers, White-eyes, etc. Such a cage would make a splendid home for a Gold-fronted Fruitsucker or a Shama, either of which could fly about your conservatory when convenient to the benefit of the plants, if your ventilators were covered with netting. In fact, either or both could be kept perpetually loose there, providing due precautions were taken when entering or leaving the conservatory.

WHAT OTHER PARRAKEET (Namron).—Either Ring-neck or Moustache Parrakeets should be procurable as young birds for about your figure, but you would have to wait for about two years before they would breed, as many Parrakeets mature but slowly. Either would answer your purpose, or you could have Blue-wing Lovebirds 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. pair, or Black-cheek Lovebirds 25s. to 30s. pair. The Ring-neck and Moustache are half as large again as the Cockateels, the Lovebirds only a little larger than Budgerigars. Of course, in accordance with your query, only one pair of the above quartet must be added to your aviary.

BUDGERIGARS, JAVAS AND EGG FOOD (Ego).—Budgerigars only require seed. When feeding young a few pieces of plain dry biscuit may be about, but many pairs will not touch it. Supply plenty of seeding (flowering) grass, also lettuce, as greenfood, and the supply of cuttlebone should never be allowed to run out. Get our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free from our manager, and you cannot go wrong. Java Sparrows rear their young largely on seed, but some kind of soft food (several good mixtures are advertised under "Foods") should be supplied. But egg is not really necessary. I never use it in my birdy menus.

AN AILING SUNBIRD (P.O.).—It is a pity you did not write sooner. 65 degrees F. will be none too much for this bird. Your only chance to save it is to keep up to 60 deg., at any rate. Supply soft banana as well as grapes; also Tangerine orange. Add a little liquid malt to the sop and supply in a separate small vessel a sop of Nestle's Milk, Scott's Emulsion, and a little honey, thinned down with a little boiling water. I am very doubtful of your ability to save it. It is importation troubles which are at the root of its present indisposition I fear. Keep it warm; give the sop fresh, a little at a time about three times or oftener daily, and you may pull it round. If you can procure a small spider or two and offer these at intervals, it will help the bird. Hoping you will pull the bird round.

BUDGERIGARS IN CAGE (P.H.S.).—I should only advise putting in two pairs, as once they start to breed they usually go merrily on, and the cage will be quite full while a couple of broods are being reared, and it will be necessary to remove them (the young) as soon as able to fend for themselves. The conservatory will do providing it is not damp and draughty. Budgies in cages are more liable to egg-binding than when in an outdoor aviary, and I advise you to procure some old mortar rubbish, crush it and mingle with it an equal bulk of gritty sand, and use this for cage bottom; also do not neglect to keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. Our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free, from our manager, would help you greatly.

CORDON BLEUS NOT REARING YOUNG (A.M.B.).—Birds have their own ideas about the fitness of things, and often act as your birds are doing at the present time. You are doing the best you can for them. Let them go on just as they are. A little later, when you can get sprays of rose and fruit trees with green fly on, live ants' cocoons (eggs), and there are plenty of flies about and more sun, you'll have better luck, I think. In the meantime, if they go to nest again keep a constant supply of millet sprays in the cage while they are feeding young. Get half-a-dozen thumb pots, sow Canary seed in them and grow in window till 2 in. high, and then supply them to the birds one at a time. By the time you have run through the six, the first one will have grown sufficiently again to do another turn, and so on. As soon as green food is obtainable from the outside, the pots of growing seed can be discontinued. Try them with a little lettuce also.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

Mother Shipton.—I have put the Grey Parrot at the head of this reply, but your bird is the Australian Roseate Cockatoo. Do not give any more bread and milk. I should keep offering fruit (sweet apple, etc.), it will take it sooner or later. Diet: Seed mixture: One quart each canary seed and white oats one pint each white millet and hemp, half a pint each paddy rice, wheat, maize, sunflower seeds, and grit (not sand). Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply green food (lettuce), ripe fruit, and plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. Use a crock or glass drinking vessel and put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (two or three tablespoonfuls) every fourth day. If the bird becomes very loose, then only once a week. On other days put the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. Continue to wash with the quassia solution once a week, and when the plumage is dry dust it with Keating's insect powder. Lightly anoint the fleshy growth with some cooling ointment. I take it the growth does not contain pus; if so, it must be opened when ripe and it would be better to let a vet. do this for you.

In Bad Plumage.

Thwaites.—You give me very little data to go upon—not sufficient description to recognise the species—and make no mention as to how you are feeding and treating. Moreover, you apply for help very late in the day—over nine months. Almost looks as if it lacked the power constitutionally to renew its plumage. Diet: Canary and white millet seed with a little Fineb mixture (British) added, greenfood (lettuce now), ripe apple if it will eat it, also a couple of mealworms and a spider per diem if it will take them. Use a "mist" sprayer and spray it with quassia solution every other day. Twice a week put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. You must not use a metal drinking vessel. Keep it in a warm but not stuffy atmosphere. Send me a full description of its plumage and how you have been feeding, etc., and I shall then be able to judge if the above treatment fully meets the case.

Building an Aviary.

A. W. A.—Do not confine yourself to hawthorn, put in some evergreen privet alternately with it, and in front of these a common laurel or two—most excellent cover in wet weather. The flight will do as to width. I should put a specimen evergreen bush or two at intervals, and put in a thin standard or two from roof to ground, and put a rambler rose against them. The flight really ought to be high enough for you to walk erect under with 6in. to spare above your head. Now re shed. A to C is the front of the shed, this should have a window (sufficiently large to well light the whole shed), covered with wire netting on the inside, and there should be an open doorway (door not needed) 18in. wide by 4½ft. high. If you wish to have a door then let it be in two halves, the lower portion of which could be open in the day time if severe weather and closed at night. If you can manage it use concrete for shed floor. Re cover flight, C to E. All I need say here is the grass is no use. Take it off and put a couple of inches of gritty sand over this portion, and let the partition E2 be solid matching with wire door E to E2 as in plan, and wire-netting front. The flight you are clear about. Your best course will be to have a span roof, one pitch right through A to G, though from E2 to G it will be only three-quarter span owing to width of flight, and this will give you the required height to flight, the front of which, E2 to G, would be about 6ft. and nearly 7ft. under centre of span. Your proportions are about right. Query me again on points not clear. If you choose to send me a stamped addressed envelope I will send you rough pencil plan. The roof, A to E, will be boarded and felted (no lights necessary), the portion E2 to G all wire netting. Am keeping query by me for reference. Wire netting or sheet zinc ought to be carried 18in. below ground level to keep out rats, mice, etc.

Gouldian Finch and Sore Feet.

M. S.—The swollen foot may only be the result of a wrench, or it may be something akin to rheumatism, or a splinter may have got into it. From yours I take it there is no wound at present, in which case foment with hot water (not hot enough for discomfort). Dry with a cloth and paint with neat whisky daily. If any sore develops, still foment and carefully cleanse away any pus there may be and anoint with a little antiseptic ointment. The perches in cage should not be all one thickness, hence a twig branch is better than artificial perches. Keep the bird's bowels moving freely by an occasional dose (½ teaspoonful) of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (do not use a metal drinker) as required. Two or three times a week the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water will be helpful. Diet: Canary and white millet, millet sprays, with a little paddy rice and crushed oats, say, every other day; green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water. Report progress a fortnight hence.

An Ailing Budgerigar.

Paton.—It is a pity you did not write earlier, and I rather doubt your ability to save it now. It has evidently been subjected to draught, with the disastrous result you describe. Bathe the affected eye with a rose water and zinc solution (from any chemist), slightly diluted with warm water. Also get a box of honey and borax and put a little on its tongue twice daily. It will help to keep the mouth clear. Every fourth day give 3 drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the beak from a quill. On other days give two drops of the following mixture, direct to the beak: equal parts of ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine. Dilute a small portion for use with an equal bulk of water, and give 2 drops twice daily as above. Put 10 drops of Byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. Do not give milk. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Keep a millet spray, also a piece of clean cuttlebone, in the cage, and supply a leaf of fresh lettuce occasionally. While it continues unwell, moisten a piece of plain biscuit with chilled water and keep this in its cage. Use a separate quill for each mixture, and each should be well cleansed each time before being put into the bulk mixture. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Pennants and Rosellas.

T. Webb.—As a rule pairs of Pennants and Rosellas are not safe together in the same aviary during the breeding season, and you may have to wait a little before yours settle down to breeding, possibly till next year if yours are young birds. If you have sufficient space put a pair of Pennants and a pair of Rosellas each in an aviary by themselves and leave your odd birds together in another aviary. The Pennants and Rosellas readily cross, though they will seldom consent to nest together in amity. I am inclined to think a little later you will find them pair off, but if you have three hens, or vice-versa, they will fight for the odd bird; so as soon as you can pick them out, put the pairs into separate aviaries. Few species of Parrakeets nest the year following their birth, and this often causes disappointment to those unaware of this fact, and you may even have to wait another year for results; but your birds must be a glorious sight flying together. Cockatiels may be left with Pennants, and both Budgies and Cockatiels with Rosellas. It is when they start pairing that the crucial time will arrive; and, speaking of adults, sexes must be equal, or there will be ructions! They require no nesting material whatever. If I have missed any point, write again.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. A. Maconochy.—Parrot was suffering from far-advanced disease of the liver. The organ was very much enlarged, hardened, or cirrhotic, and spotted with hemorrhages. The disease was not amenable to treatment, but probably might have been rectified had the condition been earlier recognised, and suitable treatment attempted.

Border Hen.—Capillary hemorrhage from the lungs arising from congestion of these organs, was responsible for death of Canary. It is a condition which comes on very quickly; the period of illness in this case is unusually long, the time elapsing between seizure and death being usually a matter of a few hours only, unless relief is early afforded, when many cases recover.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

The Fancy in the Isle-of-Man (P. McCluskey).—You say far too many harsh things concerning other people's birds—in your view there would seem to be hardly a decent bird in the length and breadth of the Island. We cannot believe it. Anyway, surely between fancier and fancier there is room for that fellow feeling which "makes one wondrous kind"? Think it over.

Fish in a Tank (F. Williamson).—We could not answer without further details. Let us know size of tank; how many fish you try to keep in it, and their average size; particulars of food; whether you have suitable weeds therein, and snails, etc; if the water is frequently changed. We do not think it likely that the brass or the copper is at fault. Read our "Nutshell" booklet on the Aquarium (post free 2½d.).

Press Cuttings (K. Maclean, P. James, E. K., and others).—We are much obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

Returning Thanks (H. Boothman).—We much appreciate the kindly remarks contained in your letter.

A Music Hall Joke (Albert Ormes).—It is a good joke; but, unfortunately, we have already published it.

A Ticked Norwich (G.B.S.).—Most societies now define a "ticked" Norwich as being a bird possessing one dark mark on the surface, not larger than a sixpenny piece.

Wild-Bird Life.

Wild Birds and the Spring

Since the sharp spell of winter at the beginning of February, the weather has been unusually mild, and already one can see indications of the coming spring in the swelling buds of the chestnut trees, and a ruddy tinge of colour at the extremities of the elms. Where the weather is mild enough to influence vegetation in this manner, wild bird life is bound to feel the effects, especially when the weather has been free from long periods of frost, and the birds are naturally in fine condition. Of course, it is a long time yet to the "merry month of May," but we shall soon hear of such early birds as Robins, and Thrushes commencing domestic affairs before we realise Spring is coming.

For the past two or three days the writer has noticed a pair of handsome Starlings searching among the grass for stray bits of rubbish, which they have carried away to an old tree on the side of the hill. They may only be playing at nest-building, and a month or two may elapse before anything of a serious nature is attempted. But still such actions as these are signs of the forwardness of wild birds. The Robin that has haunted the garden all the winter has at last found a companion with which he does not quarrel. His antics before this lady (for a lady it is) are most grotesque. He will drop his wings and throw his head so far backwards, that it is a wonder he does not sometimes lose his balance and turn a somersault. At times he will start and bow like a pigeon, but his partner is quite oblivious to all this parade, and continues insect-hunting in the most unconcerned manner. The cock bird has been a constant singer all the winter, only ceasing for a few days during the hard frost. It is doubtful if he will stay much longer, for although we have plenty of old receptacles about that would be suitable nesting sites, he prefers to make his home in the adjoining park, where there is nothing to disturb his domestic arrangements. But we never quite lose sight of him; he is in and out of the garden all through the summer months. For his small size the Robin is a rather gross feeder, and will eat almost anything that can be found on the rubbish heap. He does not care a lot for fruit, although he will peck at a piece of apple or banana skin that he may find lying about.

A Perch for Tender Feet.
Sent by Mr. J. Little, 154, Abbey Road, West Ham, E.

I send you an idea of a perch, very useful for tender feet of delicate birds. First get some corks, push a piece of stout wire through the centre of them to the required length of perch, as in sketch (fig. 1). Now get a good file and file them down to the usual thickness wanted as in sketch (fig. 2). I think the sketch will explain. The idea will save many a bird from having sore feet.—J. Little.

No. 572.
A Breeding Cage Label Device.
Sent by Mr. J. Gunning, Shinrone, King's Co.

Enclosed is a sketch of a handy device I use in conjunction with Cage Birds breeding cage labels in order to keep them clean. Get a piece of tin, cut it the size of label, leaving it half an inch longer one way to allow for hinged part (A). Then get a piece of cage wire and turn top of tin over wire (see B), leaving the wire to play freely. Bend the ends of wire (C), and drive them into cage front. Turn up the tin flap, and stick "C.B." gummed label to it inside; when you let down the tin flap, it of course covers label. If those flaps be placed in the middle of breeding cages—over turnrail—and enamelled a different colour to cage, they look very neat.—J. Gunning.

Under the White Rose.

FANCIERS are looking forward eagerly to the annual amalgamated prize distribution and social to be held next week-end, on the 9th inst., at the old place, the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford. The affair promises to equal if not to surpass any that have been held previously, and that is saying a lot; but really the array of prizes will be greater and much more valuable than in any previous year, several of the larger ones having been won outright, bringing to an end some very interesting competitions. One cannot pass the list of specials of the various clubs without alluding to the novice section. This section has, during the last few seasons, been extra well catered for, but the support has not reached the expectations of those who have pushed their claims forward, more particularly those who have passed from the novice classes to try their prestige in the open section, several prizes literally going begging. In fact, good substantial prizes could have been won that would have paid even if not a single money prize had been secured. Really, if only they would take the trouble to investigate what is offered them, I am sure such prizes would not have to go a-begging. Join these clubs next year, and have a cut in for some of them.

THE Bradford National Show for next year is already getting into shape. Classification and patronages have been under consideration, and by the time these lines appear probably something will have been done in regard to judges. To get the best it is necessary to be in the field in good time. Do not forget that next year the show will extend over three days. No doubt the "gate" will benefit greatly on the Saturday night. Many at the last shows were greatly disappointed when they could not see the birds after 7 o'c.

BANKFOOT Show held on Feb. 17, did not come up to the expectations of the promoters. About seventy birds were staged, some very smart ones amongst them; but what seemed to be the stumbling block was the place it took in regard to novices. Many thought if they won here that they would be knocked out as novices. But wasn't there a limit on?

SOME heated discussions have taken place lately in regard to members shows, and many and varied are the ideas for and against them. This is over and above the question as to whether they should be held during the hours an open show is in progress, which is under consideration of Union Societies.

"TRAIGHT 'UN."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

*Nested in a Skull.

I think I can give a more curious nesting place than any I have read about. A man's skull found in a graveyard near Dublin had a Robin's nest and five eggs in it. It can be seen in the Dublin Museum.—Sent by C. A. McConnell (aged 12), 2, Merton Villas, S.C. Road, Donore Avenue, Dublin.

*"Mind Your Own Business"

One day an elephant, wandering through a jungle, espied a bird's nest containing four eggs. "Oh, dear," he trumpeted, "how very careless. While the mother is away something may happen to those eggs. I had better keep guard." For some time he did this, and then it occurred to him that he might do even better still. "What a long time the hen is gone; those eggs will get quite cold I will sit on them myself.' So down he sat, with sad results for the eggs If everybody minded his own business there would not be so many accidents.—Taken from "Goole Times" and sent by S. Stubbs (aged 11), High Street, Askern, Doncaster.

A Wise Parrot.

"Polly" is the favourite of a farmer who lives in Montclair. She would ride with the farmer to market in his wagon or on the horse's back. One night not long ago, as they were returning home, the farmer was attacked by a robber, who beat him badly and began to search his pockets. "Polly" was on the horse's back in the dark, but seeing her master's plight, called out loudly: "Hold him, Pop, I'm coming!" Dumbfounded, the robber gave a quick look round him in the dark, and as the words were again repeated, this time closer and more hoarsely, he rose and disappeared. "Polly" is now the wonder of the neighbourhood. Taken from a daily paper, and sent by Arthur Richardson (aged 14 years), Pollington, near Snaith S.O., Yorkshire.

Another Hon. Sec.

Pontefract: Mr. Herbert Dickinson, Tanshelf Drive, Pontefract.

A Reply to Some Enquiries.

I have received several letters from hon. secs. of Societies to the effect that some of the members are not fully cognisant of the Aims and objects of Cage Birds League, and that they desire that information concerning the League should be brought before their notice.

It is to be presumed that while they have had their attention engaged with the many things happening during the show season they have not carefully read these League columns from week to week, for I have done my best to keep members and readers informed of the Aims and Objects of the League, the work it has done, and that which lies before it.

What the Sentimentalists Are Doing.

Only last week I called attention to the activity of the R.S.P.C.A. in bringing into operation the new Act of 1911, and our most immediate object at present is to bring effectively to the notice of all who keep birds that the sentimentalists are out to put an end to the keeping of any kind of bird in captivity. They care nothing as to how they are to do this; the doing of it is their avowed object. For the present they are making use of a clause in the new Act, which declares it penal to do anything which may "cause unnecessary suffering," or to cause such "unnecessary suffering" by omitting to do something or other to any animal of whatsoever kind, "including any bird, fish, or reptile which is in captivity . . . . or subjected to any appliance or contrivance for the purpose of hindering or preventing its escape from captivity or confinement." This wording very clearly covers a bird in a cage.

The Private Owner.

There are many people who keep just a single bird, and who, from lack of experience, do not do all that is necessary to administer to the comfort and well-being of that individual bird. Here again is work for Cage Birds League and its members. Every private owner of a bird or two should be made aware that there is a right and a wrong way of keeping birds in captivity, and if they are in any difficulty as to the proper keeping of their birds Cage Birds League will help them, and the experts attached to the staff of our official organ, Cage Birds, will answer any questions which may arise.

Where the Act Does Not Apply.

The new Act does not apply to wild animals in a state of natural freedom, so that Grouse shooting, Partridge shooting, fox hunting, or deer-stalking may still be indulged in by the well-to-do. Even the hunting of the carted stag or the coursing of a bagged rabbit would seem to be immune, so long as the stag or rabbit is not liberated for the purpose of being hunted or coursed while "in an injured, mutilated or exhausted condition."

All these things may be done with impunity; yet, in the language of the sentimentalists, "it will be a good day for England when the keeping of birds in cages in any circumstances whatever is rendered illegal." This being their doctrine, their one object is to see it brought about. It must be our object to defend our hobby.

What Bird-keepers Must Do.

There is in our country an immense army of bird-keepers: these, individually, are powerless. Combined, their position would be impregnable, and in the Cage Birds League an opportunity is offered for such a combination. The subscription, at present, is only one shilling a year, and if every bird-keeper would join our ranks our very numbers would be sufficient to convince our opponents of the futility of any efforts directed against the existence of our pleasurable and instructive hobby. I shall be glad to furnish to any applicants a copy of our leaflet setting forth the Aims and Objects of Cage Birds League.

What Individual Members Can Do.

A member of Cage Birds League, Mr. R. H. Cotton, of Southampton, is kind enough to send me some letters which appeared in a local paper, together with his replies thereto. The first letter was by a member of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, asking readers to put out during severe weather various kinds of food for the wild birds, and thus "save many a little life." Mr. Cotton wrote in support of this very estimable letter, and at the same time pointed out that birds in captivity were not subjected to the danger of starvation. Mr. Cotton's reference to caged birds brought forth a reply from a Mr. O. Bailey, which was couched in the terms made familiar to us by the writings of other sentimentalists. He said the conditions of a bird in a cage were similar to those of a human prisoner in a seven foot cell. To the misrepresentations of this Mr. Bailey, Mr. Cotton sent a reply, which seems to have silenced that gentleman, for he has not vouchsafed any answer. If members of our League would follow the example of Mr. Cotton, and take the trouble to answer attacks on our hobby written in the unwarrantable terms used by these perfervid opponents of bird-keeping, much would be done to obviate the false impressions which may be conveyed by such fulminations, if allowed to go uncontradicted.

Secretary, Cage Birds League.

I was really delighted to see the magnificent sketch on the front page of our interesting weekly, Cage Birds, of my champion Corn Bunting. It is indeed an exact replica of that fine bird, and I warmly congratulate your artist on his work. I will just say that the two C.B.'s (Cage Birds and the Corn Bunting) are my two ideals, one of which I look forward to every week, while the other I am fortunate to look at every day. I wish to express my best thanks to the numerous writers of letters of congratulation I have received.—J. B. Caunt (Beeston, Notts).

THE DIFFICULTIES OF BIRD-BREEDING: HOW TO OVERCOME THEM.

By Claude St. John.

effect); or a little scalded and crushed rape, added to the food at this time is often invaluable in starting the hens to feed, or re-invigorating them. Green food is also a most valuable ally, and should be given in quite small quantities, fresh at frequent intervals, for a few days until the slackness of the hen has passed off. Do not trouble if the hen appears to feed exclusively on greenstuff; it will keep the young going, and, as a rule, all that is needed in these cases is to keep the hen "on the feed" for a few days until her maternal instinct returns in full vigour.

To assist this happy event it is a good plan to dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda in the drinking water for one half of each day for a few days as soon as any signs of fag are noticed, and to offer daily a bath made slightly saline with the addition of common salt, which has a very good invigorating effect.

Early Desertion.

For the first fortnight of their lives the chicks are usually brooded almost constantly by the hen, who only leaves the nest at short intervals to get a little food or water, and generally a few moments' exercise before going back, and at night sleeps on the nest. This is very necessary for the first fortnight or so, particularly in the early part of the season when the nights are chilly. After the first week the hen will begin to prolong her absence from the nest more and more each day, but a good hen will generally continue to roost on the nest until the young are getting well-feathered and almost ready to leave home. But occasionally one will find a hen which begins to roost on the perch when the young are only a few days old and quite bare of feathers. In the early season this will often mean the loss of the young, who perish with cold, so that every effort should be made to get her to sleep on the nest at this stage. First of all make sure that the nest is not "alive" with red mites at night, nor yet made uninhabitable by any self-respecting hen by too liberal use of odorous insecticides or powders. Supposing the nest is not at fault a hen will sometimes pop on to it and stay there if one only goes near the cage or touches the wires just after she has apparently settled down on a perch. But for a really obstinate hen of this kind I believe the best management is one I have known carried out, with every success. That is, if she refuses to go on the nest when gently coaxed, remove the perch on which she has settled down, and if she goes to another, and another one, repeat the manœuvre each time until every perch is out, and no other roosting place is left but the nest and the floor. In practically every case she will choose the nest. Of course, the perches must be replaced early next morning, or even the same night just as all lights are about being put out. If it is necessary, follow up the same method nightly for a few nights, and the hen's obstinacy will be gradually overcome.

When the hen begins to roost on the perches when her brood is between a week and a fortnight old, there is always a fair chance that she is about to recommence nesting again before the brood in the nest is able to leave it. This is sometimes the result of giving too liberal a diet during incubation, and also one outcome of a too liberal or too early supply of hemp for rearing the young. Where our directions for the early part of the season have been adhered to, these causes, of course, will have been avoided. In other cases it is just the result of excessive vigour, or precocity. For the rest of the season it will be good policy to try moving the cock after the eggs are laid and leave the hen to hatch and rear the brood by herself.

Here again a crystal of sulphate of soda in the water for a portion of each day for a few days may help to cool the hen, but if she is really coming forward towards laying, the only rational course is to give her a fresh nest-pan in another part of the cage when she begins to show signs of being bent on building. New nesting material must be given too, and sometimes things will run quite smoothly, the cock taking over the chief work of feeding the young when the hen begins nesting again. But you

Plymouth.

Dear Sir,
I must thank you for the copy of "Our Canaries" duly received. After having a good look through the book I must congratulate you on producing such an up-to-date publication. From past experience I have learnt to expect good illustrations from Mr. Norman, but he has excelled himself in illustrating "Our Canaries." Every bird portrayed is a show specimen, with all the good points of the breed well brought out. The matter of the book is also remarkable for its accuracy, and is helpful both to novices and experienced fanciers. THOS. POPE.

Glasgow.

Dear Sir,
I very much appreciate "Our Canaries." It is really a masterpiece, and quite beyond my expectations. The plates of the various breeds of Canaries are perfect models of their class, and the colouring true to life. The greatest credit is due to your artists and Mr. Claude St. John for helping in the way he did to place such an excellent work on the market and at such a moderate figure. It is indeed a standard work of the Canary, and ought to be in the hands of every breeder; and to those about to begin the hobby of Canary breeding it is simply invaluable and ought to adorn the bookshelf of every lover of the Canary bird. I wish it every success.
R. G. JOLIFFE.

Oldham.

Dear Sir,
I received "Our Canaries" and can safely say that it is the best work that I have seen in all my life. I think no fancier can do very well without it, as if he happens to be a bit puzzled in any shape or form, all he has to do is to refer to the book and he finds it at once, whether it be what is needed in the birdroom or on the exhibition benches. I must say I never thought "Our Canaries" would be such a work of art.
GEORGE FITTON.

Gloucester.

Dear Sir,
It is with great pleasure I received the book, "Our Canaries," and I have carefully looked through the unique volume. Its magnificent coloured plates are of great credit to our famous artist, Mr. H. Norman. The way in which so many practical fanciers' experiences, ideas, and methods are compiled in such a volume is simply wonderful, and I feel it my duty to say that great praise is due to our esteemed and experienced friend, Mr. Claude St. John for the great ability he has displayed in its compilation, as it is the most wonderful volume ever produced on Canaries, and should be in the hands of every fancier, young or old.

Resolved, that three tankards be offered for competition during 1912: Young Can. tankard, for most points gained by member during year, for young birds bred and exhibited during 1912; champion young Canary tankard, to member who wins first prize in cham. class at Dec. show; and a British bird tankard for most points. An adult Canary competition will be arranged, and a valuable special presented to member making most points during year with old birds only, Feb. show excepted. Champion class will also be provided in December for old birds, and a valuable special given.—J. T. Greenslade, Vice-chairman.

DENTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At our last meeting we had a washing exhibition by Mr. T. Rowbotham. A good muster turned up, and about twelve birds were washed. Everybody seemed interested. He told the novices washing was the final thing. A good bird poorly washed and staged stood little chance against a poor bird well staged throughout. One novice asked him if he believed in putting birds in a drying cage directly after they were washed, or did he believe in using cloths? His reply was: He believed in using cloths, putting the birds in front of a fire for about a quarter of an hour, continually turning them. He said he had three basins, "milkwarm" water. In the first he put a little borax, clean water in second, and a drop of glycerine in the last, as this killed the soap teft. He used Sunlight soap, having tried several.—W. Hopwood, sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Meeting held Grey Horse Tavern, Feb. 24th, Mr. A. Moffat (President) in chair, supported by Vice-President (Mr. J. Smeaton), and a splendid gathering. After the usual business, proposed open show claimed our attention. Secretary read reports of Aberdeen and Brechin societies, kindly sent by secretaries (Messrs. Bryson and Mitchell). Decided to adopt rules of the Brechin society with a few alterations. A motion by Mr. Smeaton "That members pay 2s. 6d. per annum, and that membership be confined to Musselburgh and district," carried. Show finally settled for 14th Dec. Secretaries please note. Agreed to hold show in the Town hall, a large and well lighted place in the main thoroughfare. Mr. J. Smeaton elected show manager, with Mr. J. Lawson assistant. SALFORD LINNET CLUB.

First annual social held February 19th, Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, when 36 members and friends sat down to a splendid dinner. After the many courses had been served, a start was made on a long and varied programme. President (Mr. H. Cootes) gave the toast "The Salford Linnet Club," and said he was very pleased such a large number were rallying round the club, which had started at the bottom of the ladder. Mr. W. Wilson gave his toast of "The Company," and said he hoped at next social we should have a larger number. Mr. H. Murray, Miss J. Cootes, Mr. W. Murray sang songs, which were greatly appreciated. The sketch, entitled "The Brothers Malone," by the Bros. Murray, was a great surprise, and Mr. W. Wilson gave his speciality and illustration, entitled "Bailing Out." The event of the evening was then given by the Brothers Murray in sketch, entitled "Pa and Ma."—B. Wharton, Sec.

DULWICH & PECKHAM C.B.S.

The Annual Dinner a Great Success.

A dinner was held at headquarters, the Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, on February 20th. It is hoped this will be made an annual fixture. Some 40 ladies sat down to an excellent repast, provided by our worthy host, Mr. A. Laing. Great credit is reflected on the sub-committee appointed to carry out the arrangements, viz., Messrs. H. W. Tomsett, F. Cole and W. Hodson (hon. sec.). The President (Mr. J. Bright Crowe) was in the chair, and Mr. F. Cole, vice-chair. The dinner, which consisted of six courses, was served in excellent style, and was thoroughly enjoyed. Dinner over, Mr. Scott opened the proceedings with a pianoforte solo. The Chairman proposed the toast of the "Society," and briefly ran through its history. He congratulated members on being free from all debt; it was something to be proud of, for he could assure them there were many societies of different kinds in London, who, although much older established, could not boast of such a happy state of affairs. He had much pleasure in coupling the names of Mr. Hodson, their worthy secretary, and also of Mrs. Hodson. The toast was received with musical honours. Mr. Hodson, in reply, thanked the company for the enthusiastic manner in which they had received the toast. He was quite sure all felt proud that the society had come safely through the dark clouds, which had hung over them for the past three years. This happy state of affairs had only been made possible by the hard-working committees, which had controlled affairs, and by the hard work of the assistant secretary, Mr. H. W. Tomsett, who had given much attention to the social side of the society's work. In the near future we should be again holding our open shows, and he felt certain fanciers both North and South, would give us their confidence and send their birds. Mr. H. W. Tomsett, in a few well-chosen words, proposed the toast, "The Ladies." Madam Feist Madewell replied in a charming little speech, which delighted all present. The Vice-Chairman (Mr. F. Cole) proposed a double toast, that of the Visitors and the Artistes, who had so kindly contributed to the evening's enjoyment. With his usual tact and wit he made an excellent speech, the toast being enthusiastically received. Mr. L. J. Richardson replied. Mr. D. Reeks proposed a vote of thanks to the President. The society was, he said, proud to have a real live president, not merely a figurehead. Mr. H. E. Tringham seconded. The health of our President was toasted with musical honours, and Mr. Crowe briefly replied. The musical programme was one long to be remembered. Among the contributors were: Mr. J. Butler (baritone), of the well-known St. James' part singers; Miss D. Swain, Mr. M. Lee (tenor), Mr. E. May (soprano), and Mr. Reeks. A most enjoyable evening closed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and God Save the King. Amongst those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Tomsett, Mr. and Mrs. W. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. D. Reeks, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hodson, Mr. and Madame Feist Madewell, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Stephen, Mr. and Mrs. Grahame, Miss Swain, Mr. and Mrs. Fairman, Mr. J. Bright Crowe (president), Messrs. F. Cole, R. Jay, H. E. Tringham, H. Lee, F. J. Martin, F. Tebbs, J. Carpenter, J. Hazell, Hy. Cornish and friend, J. Groombridge, F. Hocking, A. Spillman, Master Richardson, and several others whose names we did not get.

CLITHEROE & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual gathering held Bennett's Rooms, Moor Lane, February 17th. An appetising repast was provided by Mrs. Bennett and thoroughly appreciated. The evening was spent in convivial fashion, songs being contributed by Messrs. J. Cook, R. Lambert, and A. James. Mr. James also gave a selection on the gramophone. Mr. R. Calvert presided at the piano—J. Southworth, Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

At meeting held Feb. 21st, our president (Mr. T. R. Trower), on behalf of the members, presented a testimonial to Mr. R. P. Harper upon his retirement from the position of honorary secretary, a position he has held for the past eight years. He has undoubtedly been instrumental in bringing this association to its present high position in the Fancy. The present consisted of a barometer inscribed: "Presented to Robert P. Harper, Esq., in grateful recognition of his invaluable and untiring services for eight years as honorary secretary of the North London Cage Bird Association, February, 1912." Mr. Harper tenders his sincerest thanks to donors who were unable to be present.—P. W. Jefferies, Hon. Sec.

COCKERMOUTH F.S.

Annual meeting held Feb. 15, Redmond's Rooms, Mr. Oglethorpe in chair. Committee, in their report, stated they had had to face a large deficit for two successive years, and their first duty had been to pay off debts and place the society on a clear financial basis. That had been accomplished, and the position to-day was a very satisfactory one. They had decided to abandon the poultry section, which would enable them to secure a show room at less cost and warrant them holding a show in 1912. Balance sheet shows that after paying off a deficit of £7 15s. 2d. for 1910, and sundry expenses in 1911, there was a balance of 18s. 3d. The election of officers:—President, Mr. H. B. Dykes; chairman, Mr. G. Oglethorpe; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Simon; hon. treasurer, Mr. J. Ellwood; hon., secretary, Mr. John Jackson; committee, Messrs. W. Deacon, W. Gorley, E. Tiffen, W. M. Walker, J. Little, Jos. Jackson, and Jos. Sewell; auditors, Messrs. R. Litt and A. J Rea; hon. auctioneer, Mr. R. Mitchelt. Rules were slightly revised, and it was decided to hold a show during the present year.—G. Oglethorpe.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Dinner held Feb. 22nd, Hudson's Restaurant, and it proved a success in every way. Messrs. T. Dawn and Dr. Jones (presidents of the Sheffield O.S. and Walkley C.B.S. respectively) wrote regretting their inability to be present, and in the absence of our hon. President (Mr. H. Barber), through illness, our President, Mr. F. Jones presided. Altogether 64 members and their wives sat down to dinner. Mr. Jones welcomed amongst us the ladies and visitors. After dinner the time was all too short for the presentation of the cups and special prizes, which made a very fine show. The winners were delighted, and expressed their determination to try and win again this year. The toast of "The King" was honoured on the call of Mr. J. Thorpe, also that to "The Ladies," by Mr. J. G. Cowley. "Success to the Sheffield C.B.S." was toasted on the call of Mr. T. Hemming, who urged every member to do his best to keep our society in its right place —at the top; also of the elevating influence the Fancy has upon the people who take it up. The President responded, and the toast of "Kindred Societies" was proposed by Mr. J. Woolhouse. Mr. L. Havenhand (president of the Attercliffe C.B.S.) replied in a neat speech. The Helio Troupe were responsible for the entertainment, and acquitted themselves creditably.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

ULSTER O.A.

Balance sheet adopted as read, showing the association in a good financial position with a balance of £15 in hand. Proposed and passed that secretary be allowed full commission as before. Balance, less commission (about £2), and amount to be retained in secretary's hands for working expenses to be lodged in bank. Election of office-bearers:—President, Mr. Stewart; secretary and treasurer, Mr. R. Trimble; committee, Messrs. J. Ronaldson, W. Gray, W. Connell, M. Fleming, S. Scott, J. Barclay, J. Lavery, J. Thomson, D. McBride, W. Teasy, D. E. Alexander, J. Carson, T. H. Smyth, J. Niell, J. Montgomery, J. Wilson; trustees, Messrs. W. Connell, J. Thompson; auditors, Messrs. J. Ronaldson, T. H. Smyth. Suggested, that an effort be made to get a number of prominent citizens as vice-presidents, and some one occupying an exalted position as president; all members present agreed to approach anyone they knew with this object, while a small committee was appointed to deal with this matter, consisting of Messrs. Stewart, Fleming, Barclay, Smyth, and Ronaldson. Proposed, and passed, that there be only two judges this season, one for Scotch Fancy and British sections, and one for Norwich and Yorkshires. Judges were nominated and elected. Next annual show fixed for 6th and 7th December, and, judging by the interest of the members present, it will most likely be the best yet held.—R. Trimble, Sec.

HETTON-LE-HOLE C.B.S.

"Smoker" held Crown Inn, Feb. 24th, Councillor F. Piper (president) in chair, ably supported by Mr. W. Holmes. A most enjoyable evening was spent. After the toasts of "The Chairman and Officials," and "The Host and Hostess," songs (both comic and sentimental) were given by Messrs. Brown, High, and Tonks; gramophone selections by the host (Mr. E. McCabe). At the interval our president, in a very nice little speech, promised even better support in the future than in the past, which was greatly appreciated; the whole company, rising to their feet, "drank a bumper to the president." Great praise is due to our host and hostess for the able manner in which they catered for the "inner man." Everyone expressed the hope that we would have many more such gatherings.—A. J. Notley, Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 24th. Decided to hold annual open show Oct. 11th and 12th, and in due course we shall announce name of judges. A very encouraging part of our correspondence was a letter from a staunch supporter, presenting us with one guinea towards meeting our debt on last open show, and a further half-guinea should be succeed in clearing debt off by end of April. We shall succeed. Will members who have not at present rushed to our aid please make a note, as we have still something to do before the time expires. Five new members made; not bad, but let us see if we cannot double the membership. We were very glad to hear that our old and well-known member, Mr. J. Bexson, is gradually recovering from a long and severe illness; taken seriously ill last December, he has had to keep to his bed since. He takes a great interest in the club's welfare, and fanciers will join us in wishing him a speedy recovery.—Wharam and Bamsey, Secs.

WEST FIFE C.B. LEAGUE.

Successful smoking concert held in Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, February 17th, for the purpose of presenting the League Cup. Mr. J. Stenhouse (president) in chair; over 40 members present from the various societies in the League. Secretary read report of League competition, showing Kelty and Blairadam C.B.S. to be the winners, Lochgelly C.B.S. being runners-up. Mr. J. Rankine (Dunfermline), in presenting the cup, congratulated them on their success. Mr. J. Stenhouse, in accepting the cup on behalf of Kelty, made the remark that the other societies would need to be "up early in the morning" to win the cup from them. Later on the chairman proposed the health and prosperity of the League, coupling with this toast the names of Mr. D. Grant (Lochore) and Mr. J. R. Reed (Cowdenbeath) the promoters of the League in this district, also making reference to the object of the League—to encourage the breeding and exhibiting of all kinds of cage birds and the furthering of the Fancy in general. Mr. Reid expressed the hope that the League would be the means of encouraging the young members in the Fancy, and by next season it would do more good still. Mr. T. Wildridge (president Lochgelly C.B.S.) said he wasn't so sure about having to be up so early, as there had been some fresh arrivals in Lochgelly who would be heard of next season. A lengthy programme was carried out by members of the various societies.—W. Duff, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Preparing Birds for the Breeding Season

Meeting held Feb. 26th, Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Mr. W. Shepherd in chair; Mr. W. Dickinson, hon. sec., and 20 members present. One new member elected. An egg food competition had been arranged for, but was postponed till next meeting night. Members please note. Mr. A. W. Curtis then gave a "Few Hints as to Preparing Birds for the Breeding Season." He first denounced the cramming of birds with egg food to force them to go to nest, as if birds were kept in a healthy condition the plainer the food the better. Egg food made them sluggish, and if cocks wanted bracing up give cod liver oil or Parrish's Food once or twice a week. He recommended when hens were sitting removing the cock—for two reasons, one being they often torment the hens, the other, the cock was keeping himself in condition to help feed the young and prepare for the second nest. For feeding young birds, he always gave them yolk of egg and Osborne biscuit pounded very fine in a mortar, to start with, and gradually increased the proportion of biscuit. He strongly deprecated mixing maw seed with the egg food, as the old birds swallowed the seed whole, and when feeding gave it to the young birds in the same condition, which could not do them any good. He also advised giving the young best hemp crushed, as it was quite seven weeks before they could crack hard seed. A little watercress might be given in the morning, but he preferred German rape soaked for 36 hours, so that the seed had just sprouted. If 8 to 10 drops of tincture of gentian were added to their water it was too bitter for them to drink too much, and acted as a tonic. To prevent hens becoming egg-bound, he found crushed eggshell and cuttlefish a good remedy. Several questions were then asked, which Mr. Curtis readily replied to, and at the close a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to him for imparting such useful hints that his long experience had gained.—Fred. Thynne, Assistant hon. secretary.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Third annual general meeting, held Feb. 20th, a very large attendance of members Mr. Fry was unanimously voted to the chair. Minutes of previous annual meeting were signed. Correspondence from Mr. Lansey (Belfast) in reference to Cinnamon Yorkshire classes, etc., was referred to the incoming Council. A letter under registered post from Mr. Dowling, in reference to the handling of ballot papers by the secretary, was considered by the chairman out of place; Mr. Dowling assured the chairman he had no intention to insult anyone, and apologised. Mr. Holley next dealt with accusations in reference to co-option of members on the Council, and proved the matter, by minutes, to be groundless. The secretary's report was next considered and passed. The treasurer's statement of accounts called forth criticism, and much time was lost in probing for details by one or two present, who appeared in good fighting form, and intent on retarding its passage. On a vote being taken, 13 voted for and 17 against its passing. The next business on the agenda was date of show; this was left to incoming Council. The following additions to rules, and new rules were passed. Proposed by Mr. J. R. Hyland, seconded by J. Dowling.—Add to Rule VI.: "The seal of any envelope marked 'Ballot Paper' received by the hon. secretary or other person or persons authorised by the Council to receive same, can only be broken by the scrutineers appointed at the annual general meeting."—Passed. Proposed by Mr. J. R. Hyland, and seconded by J. Dowling.—Add (to rule XXII. (after member): "No alteration or addition can be made to these rules at any other than the annual general meeting."—Passed. New rule.—Proposed by J. R. Hyland and seconded by J. Dowling: "That the hon. secretary, when giving receipts to members for their annual subscription, use a duplicate numbered carbon receipt book, the receipt to be dated the day each subscription is paid. This receipt book to be produced for the auditor's inspection when auditing the accounts, or at any time the hon. secretary is requested by the Council, or by a general meeting of members to do so."—Passed. Messrs. Dowling, Carroll, Hyland, and Birse were appointed scrutineers to count votes for incoming officers. When the list of members who were entitled to vote came on, the secretary was challenged and admitted having sent a ballot paper to a member who had not fully complied with rules. A scene of unparalleled excitement ensued. The chairman left the meeting, with others; the secretary's and treasurer's suspension was demanded, and everything pointed to a general break-up, when Mr. Birse, with coolness, slipped into the breach. The ballot was declared illegal, and the following gentlemen were appointed to act as a provisional committee: Chairman, Mr. Hyland; hon. sec., C. Holley; hon. treas., Mr. S. Stewart; Committee, Messrs. Power, Dowling, Birse, Mulcahy, Lattimore, Briggs, Gilten, Sholedice, Carroll, Callaghan, McKenzie and Furley. After voting a sum to the secretary for his past services, the meeting adjourned without bloodshed. —C. Holley, hon. sec.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 24, Mr. W. Butler (chairman). Mr. F. Marwood elected to judge British, mule and foreign bird classes. After a very close poll for Canaries, Mr. A. Brown defeated Mr. W. Reid by a vote. During the evening we enrolled four new members. By another meeting our membership will reach three figures.—W. Elliott, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting, held Feb. 21st, Mr. J. C. Murrey (president) in chair. A report of club show finances submitted showing a total income of £7 12s. 6d., and an expenditure of £3 3s. 9d.; balance, £4 8s. 9d. Members were highly pleased with the success of the venture, and are confident we can improve on it another year. Decided, to add £3 to our bank account. As the Masonic Hall, where the open show was held last year, was considered too small, secretary was instructed to get terms of the larger halls, and submit to next meeting. Delegate gave report of West Fife C.B. League, which was approved. Agreed, that secretary communicate with a gentleman and try and fix up a washing exhibition for next meeting; if successful, all members to be postcarded. Next meeting, March 16th, Areade Temperance Hotel, 6 p.m., exhibitors at 7. Five new members joined, viz., Messrs. C. Clayton, J. Holms, J. Robertson, R. Johnstone, and J. Cook. Many more are coming in, and a large increase in membership is certain.—R. Reid, Secretary.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S

Twenty-fourth annual general meeting, held Feb. 22nd, Mr. W. Collings in chair. A good muster of members present. Secretary produced balance sheet of the monthly young stock, and the annual show, showing a profit on each. He promised to have general account ready for next meeting, March 14th, and to send a copy along with show accounts to all members before meeting. The H. Day subscription list: Secretary reported he had sent 25s. to Mrs. Day—21s. collected at meeting, Feb. 8th, 2s. 6d. Mr. S. Sheldrick, and 1s. 6d. Mr. J. Watson, subscribed after meeting. Secretary read a letter of thanks for same received from Mrs. Day. Mr. T. H. Harrison gave 2s. 6d., making a total of 27s. 6d. If any other friend wishes to send a small donation the Hon. Sec. will be pleased to hear from him. Remember, that many can help one. A vote of thanks was accorded the retiring officers. New ones elected as follows: Chairman, W. H. Collings, Esq.; vice, A. Sears, Esq.; committee, Messrs. J. Sykes, H. Day, M. Austin, A. H. Huggins, A. Ware, A. Lovejoy, G. Porter, H. Graves, A. Wasey, D. Stoll, G. Eves, G. Hall, A. Sears, S. Ruggles, G. Stanton, C. G. Hodder, G. A. Parker, S. Terrill; auditors, Messrs. Mason and Lambert; hon. auctioneer, J. Bussey, Esq.; hon. solicitor, F. A. S. Stern, Esq.; hon. treasurer, J. Reed, Esq.; hon. secretary, W. Maxey; hon. assistant secretary, A. E. Baker. Several important propositions were put. Time of meetings altered to 8.30 p.m.; yearly subs. raised to 3s. in lieu of 2s. 6d. New member elected, Mr. P. Lafbury (Manor Park). All committeemen requested to attend March 14th, as all fixtures must be arranged then.—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec., 16, James Place, Poplar, E.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Result of competitions for cups, medals, and cash specials, 1911-12.—Members are requested to check same immediately, and notify secretary (in the event of there being any discrepancies) on or before March 9, after which no claims will be entertained: —Norwich Champions: Cup won outright by E. Lawson, 135; gold medal, J. Walker, 102; 10s., F. Handley, 32. Yorkshire Champions: Cup, J. McDermott, 85; gold medal, F. Rowlands, 139; 10s., S. McNulty, 65. Borders: Cup, J. Johnston, 125; gold medal, J. McQuillan, 68; 10s., J. Walker, 48; case of pipes, most points Border Section (novice), R. Gentleman, 25. Norwich Novices: Gold medal, R. Brotherton, 12; 5s., H. Morement, 2; 5s., E. Peake, 2. Yorks Novices: Cup, E. Hickson, 19; gold medal, A. Mockridge, 14; 10s., W. Davidson, 4. The Yorks and Norwich novices competed for one cup, but the competition was very poor; finally the former section came out on top, as last year. The Yorks Champion Cup is still in competition, having changed hands. Mr. Rowlands scored by far the most points, but elected to stand down, as regards the cup, at the beginning of the season, so that the honours could be distributed; hence he takes the medal, this being the condition laid down and accepted by the general body. The Norwich Champion Cup is lost to the society, it having become the property of Mr. E. Lawson by virtue of his having won it two years in succession. Annual dinner and distribution of prizes will be held at the Star and Garter Hotel, St. John's Lane, Liverpool, on March 20, at 7.15 p.m., when all fanciers and friends will receive a warm welcome; we have a good musical programme arranged, and the function will be well worth visiting. Tickets (2s. 6d. each) may be obtained from Messrs. Metcalfe, Deacon, Lloyd, Benson, Parsons, J. Walker, Handley, Abbott, Isaac, or of the hon. sec., Geo. Green, 36, Lord Nelson-street, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH (Open) O.A.

Annual general meetings now concluded, members present in large numbers. The interest taken as to show, etc., augers well for the success of the Association. The financial statement showed income, £97 5s. 9½d.; expenditure, £69 4s. 6½d.; balance in hand, £28 1s. 3d.; the net surplus from last show amounting to £3 7s. 0½d. Office bearers:—President, Mr. J. B. Kerr; hon. vice-president, Mr. J. McLennan; secretary and treasurer, J. R. Meikle, 51, Lothian Road, Edinburgh; committee, Messrs. G. C. T. Hope, R. Menzies, W. Carson, M. Petrie, J. Stewart, P. McNiven, J. Robertson, J. Hendry, D. Campbell, P. Farrell, J. Sinclair, and A. Begbie; auditors, Messrs. A. Stavert and J. Sinclair. Judges elected, names to be published later. Classification: Scotch Fancy, 21 classes (4 Selling); Belg. 3. Prize money: 1st, 12/-, 2nd 9/-, 3rd 6/-, 4th 3/-, 5th 2/-. Agreed, again to purchase the very fine prize cards put out by Mr. Garrioch (Edinburgh) and to charge these at the rate of 1s. each. We would call exhibitors' special attention to the following important recommendations, which have been adopted:—That full prize money is guaranteed in each class, thus abolishing payment of half prize money; that a competition will be given for novices, for which medals and other specials will be allocated; a novice to be one who has not won a first in any open competition previous to our show in 1913; young birds only to be shown and bred by exhibitor; there are no separate classes for novices, they entering their exhibits in the open classes, having thus the privilege of competing for usual prize money and specials in addition to that awarded for novices; that show be held Jan. 1st and 2nd, 1913; that Grindley Street Hall has been rented for this purpose (the return to this hall has delighted many fanciers, where so many notable exhibitions under the auspices of the "Auld Edinburgh," have taken place); and that a provincial committee will be appointed, representative of different districts in Scotland, with a view to keeping our association before the fanciers and so rendering assistance in securing entries for exhibition. We wish all fanciers a profitable season.—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

The Windsor and Dis. C.B.A. have arranged to hold their next annual show on Oct. 30, 1912, writes the sec., Mr. E. A. Stickland. Mr. H. Norman has accepted the office of judge, and we hope fanciers will patronise the above show and make it a great success.

Your coloured plates in the Birthday Number were great; in fact, nothing better could be produced. Your calendar is grand, and the purple clematis and thistle heads are, I am sure, drawn from nature. The Goldfinch seems to think the same, as he appears to be well pleased with himself.—J. B. Clarke (Rothesay).

I was pleased to see your excellent account of Cage Birds Christmas painting competition, writes Mr. I. Heatherington (Greenhead, Northumberland), and that the exhibits on the whole were of a high standard. I congratulate Mr. Hunt on his success; his effort must have been excellent. I note my own picture got a good way up, which, considering the time spent on it, was more than I had dared to hope for, as I started and finished it hurriedly in one short day. No doubt if I had had time to put more work into it, I might have given the winner a tight pull for first place.

The Shows.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD, C.B.S

The Highgate, Hampstead and Dis. C.B.S. held a very good show of matched pairs in the Spencer Hall on Feb. 24, when Mr. J. Robson officiated as judge. Entries in number were down a little, but the quality was very high in all sections, some really excellent stock being on view, which was much admired by the numerous visitors. The new secretary, Mr. G. T. Clark, proved himself a most able official by the first-rate arrangements he made, and by the smoothness with which the show was worked. Valuable help was rendered him by an efficient band of stewards, including Messrs. Shakespeare, Oldaker, and Law (the late sec.). The society continues to make excellent progress.

CLAPHAM & DIS. C.B.S.

Annual pair show, held Feb. 24th, at the Clock House Hotel, Clapham Park Road, S.W., when a capital collection of 105 exhibits faced the judge, Mr. J. Robson. The room in which the show was held for the first time is an exceptionally well lighted one of good dimensions, and eminently suited for the purpose. The offer of medals to be won for most points throughout season no doubt brought out more entries than last year. Special for best pair of Yorks. in champion section won by Mr. Fraser, while Mr. Morris secured special for best Yorks. The show was well attended by members and friends. Mr. Priest had all the arrangements well in hand, and was supported by Messrs. Sandy, Wildbore and Brighty as stewards. Prize cards were up promptly.

LLANELLY.

Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S. first annual show (open to County of Carmarthen), held Feb. 17th. Entries did not come up to expectations, but quality was of the best, and we must congratulate the society on their first venture, as they were very well patronised by the Fancy. The committee worked hard to make the show a success, under the able management of that good old sport and show manager, Mr. T. J. Gregory. The chairman (Mr. T. Jenkins), W. H. Reynolds, Ben Evans, Harry Gregory T. Bennett, D. R. Jones, and our able president, Jos. Holmes, Esq., together with their popular secretary, Mr. Daniel John, who does not do things by halves. Judging was in the able hands of Mr. W. R. Morgans, late of Morriston (Canaries), and the evergreen Welsh full-back, Mr. W. J. Baucroft (British), whose decisions gave general satisfaction. Mr. R. B. Sampson won special for best Canary the third show held here at which Mr. Sampson gained this position. Special for British, won by Mr Ben Evans's Yellowhammer.

The Critique.

NOR. CK. (5): D. R. Jones takes all prizes, 1, 2, 3, rightly placed, first, well-known winner. HENS (4): Mr. Jones here again takes 1 and 2 with a pair of lovely birds, first excels in col. and type; 3, 4, Lewis, nice non fed, loses only in type. YORKS. CK. MENAI BRIDGE.

Sixth annual show (open to North Wales), held Pier Pavilion, Feb. 24. Close on 200 birds staged. Norwich (three classes) were a fine lot, Mr. Williams' 1st being a fine cl. yell. In the buffs and A.V. classes Mr. E. D. Owens won both 1sts, his buff bird being a topper. Mr. Pike had a couple entered in classes 1 and 2, but both were wrong-classed, being too heavy in markings for ticked class—should have been entered in class 3, A.O.V. Nor. Yorks had five classes, and Mr. Pike came out at the top, taking four 1sts—a grand team; the yellow hen being much admired. Mr. T. Owen took 1st in the A.O.V. Yorks. Mules and Hybrids were a nice lot. Mr. Jones taking 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in Light Mules and Mr. Griffiths 1st in dark. Goldfinches were a grand lot, Mr. Jones' 1st having plenty of blaze, fine bars, and buttons. In the 1911 Goldfinch Mr. Williams staged a good one, winning 1st in its class, also standing 2nd with it in the old bird class. Bullfinches, too, were a capital lot, 1st and 3rd going to Mr. Williams, a couple of gems; the 2nd (Aitken) was a real good bird. We heard that 1st and 2nd stood 1st and 2nd at the late Manchester Show. The A.O.S. British class was won by a fine Hawfinch of rich col., grand, big, and full of condition, staged by Mr. Williams. We venture to advise the committee to make the show an open one, and advertise it in "Cage Birds." We feel sure the entries would increase. Mr. O. Owens is an ideal secretary, and has round him a fine lot of fanciers on the committee. With such a staff the Menai Bridge Society should make a great name in North Wales. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) placed the cards.

AN EXCELLENT CONTINENTAL EXHIBITION

Novel Features in the Catalogue.

The Société Ornithologique de l'est de la Belgique held their 6th annual exhibition of cage birds in the Rue de Palais, Verviers, on Jan. 13th, 14th, 15th, and considering the society is young, it was a most magnificent display—comparing well in many respects with our English shows. In a conversation I had with the President d' honneur, M. Emile Ruhl, I learned that five years ago this enthusiastic fancier started the society's show with eight entries—all his own birds. True, other influences have been at work since then, but I have only to say that at this, their sixth exhibition, 436 entries were made in cage birds alone, to give my readers some idea that the true fanciers' spirit is here.

The room was kept beautifully warm, and was well lighted, giving full opportunity for each exhibit to be thoroughly scrutinised. The staging was as good as circumstances would allow—four tier system down the sides, and two tier, back to back, down the centre of room. A well assorted display of palms and other plants lent a very pleasing effect. That the management hardly expected such a large entry is evident, for I heard many comments that for next year a much larger hall must be found. The advent of a rope barrier fixed about two feet away from the exhibits seemed to me a capital idea, and in view of the great crowd of visitors, it was a very wise precaution.

I was at the show on the 15th with the intentions of making a detailed inspection, criticism, and report, but to do so I had to remain inside the barrier—the place was thronged. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon of last day of show, I was informed that over 2,300 spectators had visited the exhibition, each paying the entrance fee of 50 centimes (fivepence). I was also told that during the previous day the doors had to be periodically closed and re-opened to allow in a fresh batch, and the outside much resembled the queue system outside our theatres. Does this not make some of the English secretaries envious?

The officials and stewards were industrious, enthusiastic, and courteous. It was indeed a pleasure to be among them. I have great hopes of the future of this society. It is going to be the "Crystal Palace of the Continent."

All exhibits were amazingly well looked after. Excellent as some of our English shows are managed, there were little details to be gleaned here. Even the tit-bits were not forgotten, for each exhibit had its portion of green food and fruit, and judging by the manner in which it was eaten, the birds fully appreciated such thoughtfulness.

The judging was not altogether ideal, but realising the youth of any cage bird society on the Continent, it could hardly be expected to be otherwise. But, bless you, there was little or no grumbling; if a bird held premier honours, it was quite sufficient! In this respect experience will bring improvement. Many of the winners changed hands, sometimes greatly to the exhibitor's advantage, for in two instances, the owners assured me, it was not the bird but the card that had been claimed.

The "Gerfant" challenge cup, value 300 francs (£12), offered by the Societe Ornithologique du centre de la Belgique (of which I have the pleasure of being a member) was won for the first round by a foreign Goldfinch. This win was rather surprising, in my opinion, considering there were staged in faultless condition such exhibits as a true pair of Bee-eaters, Swallows, fine specimens of Treecreepers, Wryneck, Gold-crests, Rainbow Bunting, Hawkheaded Caique, and some grand Hybrids.

The principal exhibitor was Monsieur R. Pauwels, of Everberg Aviaries, and amongst his exhibits were many rare and beautiful birds. The class for Greenfinches was absolutely the finest I have ever seen. Some of the specimens would be eye-openers for the Palace. All birds were in natural plumage, and as I gazed at these striking exhibits I thought what a pity it is English exhibitors prefer the unnatural method of colour-feeding. Certain it is, no colour-fed specimen I have ever seen compares with these, staged in the garb with which nature endowed them. —O. Millsum.

A very interesting feature of the catalogue, and one, we should think, much appreciated by the visitors, are the brief notes given upon the wild life of the birds, in many cases hints upon them as cage pets being added. Class 20, for instance, comprises the Blackbird, Redwing, and Song Thrush. These species are grouped separately under "A," "B," and "C," with notes upon each kind of bird. A translation of those concerning the Green Woodpecker reads: "A restless bird, fearing man, the Green Woodpecker leads a solitary and little-observed existence. It spends most of its time hunting for insects and their larvae. It climbs spirally round the trunks of trees, searching the bark everywhere. If it alights on the ground it is to go and drink, or to hunt ants, of which it is very fond." —Editor.

THE YORKSHIRE BREEDERS

Society do not claim to have won more prizes than others, but we do claim that a large percentage of the winners for which others get the credit have been bred by us or from our strains, which have been supplied to the leading exhibitors and dealers of Bradford and district. We intend these strains, which are of 40 years standing, to be distributed world-wide, instead of allowing two or three to monopolise the winners, which are bred from them year by year. Breeders who wish to breed their own winners will be well advised to take advantage of this genuine offer, and secure some of this blood at an early date, as not being dealers our stocks are limited. Breeding sets (1 cock and 2 hens), 12/6, 15/-, 20/- up; pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-, hens from 4/-; approval, cash or deposit: Address, "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

WE HAVE THEM, WE BREED THEM, WE SELL THEM.

It is absolutely ridiculous for those wanting first class specimens thinking they can get them from the men with the small quantities, the three or four winners they have cannot be bought at any price, as they must keep them to sell their surplus on their reputation. We have the largest and most wonderful stock of winners that has ever been in one room; over 40 first prize winners this season, and 20 o' them for sale, reasonable. We have shown more winners that we have bred this season than any other six exhibitors put together. For proof see our winnings this season. Winning Carl's Trophy, the G.M.Y.C.C. Trophy outright with birds bred by exhibitor; both Y.C.C. competitions; the Yorkshire challenge trophy, Ramsden 6-guinea cup, £10 Yorkshire Union trophy 5 years in succession, which now becomes our own property with an aggregate of 1,418 points, only 3 birds to count, nearly 200 more points than any exhibitor; another world's record, champion diploma at Crystal Palace, 1911; also we have bred and sold four of the first prize winners at Palace, 1912; four years in succession winning the C.M.Y.C.C. Our strain has won more competitions and trophies than any other; so write direct to the breeders who breed their own winners and can give an honest pedigree and all details how bred. Cocks or hens 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-, 30/- each. We guarantee the best value in England. Inspection invited, all birds sent on approval; deposit: Ogden Bros., Dudley Hill, Bradford.

Ambler's Champion Yorkshires.

NEED NO PUFF OR BOUNCE. There are none better. The oldest, purest, and most reliable strain of Yorkshires in the Fancy. During these last 30 years our birds have won thousands of prizes, cups, bowls, medals, etc., both for us and our customers, at the leading shows, three times winning special for best in show Crystal Palace, winning 4 1sts, 3 2nds, 3rd, 4th, and championship for best Yorkshire in show Crystal Palace, 1910-1911. As we are not exhibiting this season, we have for disposal some real gems, perfect type, wonderful length, and full of quality, including some long, stylish hens, feathered like silk, the sort that do breed champions. This is a chance seldom met with to secure such high-class Yorkshires, as we are offering birds that are seldom for sale at any price. Pairs from 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/-. Cocks or Hens from 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- each. All cold-room bred, and on approval. Satisfaction guaranteed, or money returned in full.—MESSRS. AMBLER, Langton Lodge, Scotton, Knaresborough, Yorkshire.

Purchased Mr. S. Drake (Halifax) noted strain of Yorkshires.

Winners of hundreds of prizes, gold and silver medals, cups, etc. Some real beauties on approval; also strains which won at Crystal Palace these last 20 years. Some direct from strain that won 2 firsts, 1 second Crystal Palace 1912. Mr. Redfern, Pentre, Hawarden Feb. 1st, 1912.—Sir,—Yellow Yorkshire cock you sent me won 1st and spl Hawarden on Saturday last in strong class of 18. I have supplied scores of winners and can do so yet, not exhibiting this variety myself; some grand yellow and buff cocks, 6/-, 7/-, 8/-, 10/-, 12/-, 15/-, 20/- each; hens, yellows or buffs, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, 8/-, 10/-; matched pairs to breed winners, 12/-, 15/-, 16/-, 18/-, 20/-, 25/- pair: any on approval; full guarantee given; breeder 30 years this address: SANDIFORD, Canary Breeder, PRESTON, LANCS.

SOLID INDISPUTABLE FACTS.

No rigmarole of misleading imaginary successes that cannot be substantiated by honest facts. I bred and exhibited "Paragon Perfection," the biggest champion ever staged, winning the championship for best Yorkshire at Crystal Palace three times in succession; also "Paragon Eclipse," winner at the Palace five years in succession. My birds have had more firsts and special prizes awarded (29) in two successive years at Crystal Palace than the self-styled champions have had during the whole of their careers. I have also won the Cinnamon marked championship on two occasions at the Palace, also championship for first Yorkshire hen in show at Palace. My birds have also won the premier award in every class provided for Yorkshires (bar Greens) at the Palace, a feat that no other living fancier has yet accomplished. During the season at Yorkshire Union shows I made 106 entries, securing 20 first prizes; the self-styled champions made 251 entries and secured 22 first prizes. At the Bradford National, with 12 entries I secured 3 firsts and championship for best Yorkshire hen in show. The self-styled champions made 36 entries and secured 1 first; further comment is needless. To those requiring birds of the highest type and quality, send to the old reliable firm who can supply you with the best that money can buy, either cocks or hens, type, position, quality and length, a combination of properties possessed by the birds seldom, if ever, equalled; approval, cash or deposit: stamp for particulars: W. THE CHEAPEST HOUSE IN THE TRADE FOR

BIRD-ROOM APPLIANCES.

Reg. No. 379671.

Acknowledged by the leading experts to be the Finest Mill ever introduced to the Fancy. The Mill advertised in 1910 is a mere toy in comparison with the "Eclipse."

Read particulars—

The "Eclipse" Mill has the following advantages over other Mills. It can be entirely turned inside out, taken to pieces, thoroughly cleaned and overhauled, and put back into action ready for grinding either coarse, medium, or fine grades. By using this Mill you do not harbour waste seed, which, in a few hours would turn sour, thereby being injurious to birds.

Another advantage in this Mill is that the bottom part of the mill being closed, it acts as a receptacle for the fresh ground seed. This Mill is made of Metal throughout, and the above illustration is an actual photograph of same.

It contains ingredients unknown in any other foods, and the last grain is eagerly eaten and enjoyed by the birds. THE HALL MARK of quality in Roller Canaries is the name "Weber." If you get a Weber's Leipzig Roller you may depend upon having a bird that is absolutely "top notch." For years past I have publicly stated that for quality of song, variety and number of changes, and lowness of price, no other Roller on the market can approach the Leipzig Roller, of which I am sole importer. Won't you test the truth of this statement by having one on week's trial, and test it side by side against any other higher priced one from elsewhere. It does not matter if you have no intention of buying the bird, I shall be pleased to send it just the same. I now have about 1,500 genuine Leipzig Roller cocks, all 1911 bred birds, and guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, flute, and gong notes, etc., etc., and warranted entirely free from titlark, chopping, or other objectionable notes whatever, price 8/- and 9/- each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell tours, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 3/- each, two 5/6. I also have a few extra special contest Roller cocks, in glorious song, at 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are guaranteed of the original Seifert blood; their song is exceptionally soft and mellow, which is like a cascade of ever-flowing melody. Hens of same strain as contest cocks, 4/- each, two 7/6. I also hold a very large stock of loud free singing Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song day and gaslight, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where plenty of loud song is required, price 6/- each. Hartz hens, 2/6 each, two 4/-; singing-box cages, 1/6 each. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. Following few letters are entirely unsolicited, and will give an idea of quality of Leipzig Rollers. "16, Thomas St., Tonypandy, Feb. 19.—Sir, I am quite satisfied with Leipzig Roller you sent on Dec. 1st. He is a grand songster, singing all day and every day. Thanking you for splendid bird and straightforward dealing with strangers.—Yours, D. Davies." "Victoria St., Stockbridge, nr. Sheffield, Feb. 16.—Sir, Please send another Roller as good as one you sent a year ago. He has turned out a splendid songster, and all who have heard him say so.—Yours, W. Rodgers." "Chester-le-Street, Feb. 16.—Sir, Roller and cage arrived safe, and am quite satisfied. Bird gives every satisfaction. Unpacked 9 in morning, and singing grandly in afternoon. Thank you very much.—Yours, J. Sewell, senr." "Phyllis St., Barry Island, Feb. 17.—Sir, I am more than satisfied with Roller. You will take some beating with Rollers, as I have paid £2 for one and not near as good as yours at 12/6.—Yours, Fred Westall." "65, Balfour Rd., Normanton, Feb. 17.—Sir, Contest Roller doing splendidly. I am highly satisfied; he is a gem. I again thank you for such a beautiful songster. It's the best I've heard lately.—Yours, G. Taylor." "Beech View, Whaley Bridge, Feb. 14.—Sir, Roller I had from you on Dec. 13th is singing splendidly and I am very pleased, as it sings night and day. Please send two hens.—Yours, F. Wyld." "87, Connshrook Avenue, Belfast, Feb. 7.—Sir, Please send following. I may say Roller I had 4 years ago is still singing hard every day.—Yours, T. McCaughan." "17, Durham St., Scarborough, Feb. 5th.—Sir, Please send following. I must tell you I got a cock Roller from you last season, and he gives us more than satisfaction. Grand songster.—Yours, C. Youngman." Please note.—Every genuine Weber's Leipzig Roller is stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and I am the only importer of this strain. They cannot be obtained only from me. All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages, and sent on full week's trial at my risk immediately on receipt of cash, if same is deposited with Editor, and unless you get perfect satisfaction and your every expectation realised, your money is refunded in full.

Society do not claim to have won more prizes than others, but we do claim that a large percentage of the winners for which others get the credit have been bred by us or from our strains, which have been supplied to the leading exhibitors and dealers of Bradford and district. We intend these strains, which are of 40 years standing, to be distributed world-wide, instead of allowing two or three to monopolise the winners, which are bred from them year by year. Breeders who wish to breed their own winners will be well advised to take advantage of this genuine offer, and secure some of this blood at an early date, as not being dealers our stocks are limited. Breeding sets (1 cock and 2 hens), 12/6, 15/-, 20/- up; pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards; cocks from 4/-, hens from 4/-; approval, cash or deposit: Address, "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

Still Another 1st & Special

Etc.

Read the following:—From Wandsworth Common, London, March 4th, 1912. The pair of Yorkshires arrived safely at 3 o'clock, and were at the show at 4 o'clock, none the worse for their journey. I am pleased to say the pair took 1st and special in a class of 11 entries, and were picked out for some special remarks from the judge as being a very promising pair.—H. A. Freeman to Joe Thomas. These birds were bred by me. The above is one of a very large number of similar letters recently received by me, all of which are filed for inspection.

My Yorkshires and Norwich have maintained a consistent reputation all through this season. They have won Firsts and Specials every week at the leading Championship Shows, and have finished up with a grand record at the Crystal Palace. (See reports of Norwich and Yorkshire Sections.) During this season they have won over 300 prizes, also Gold and Silver Medals, Challenge Cups, etc., etc. Please Note.—All my wins are at open championship shows in hottest competition. I have not exhibited a single bird at members' shows where the competition is limited. My customers also have done well with birds supplied by me and with youngsters bred from my stock. I have a few real clinkers now in stock in both varieties.

I am now offering a few pairs Yorkshires bred from and related to my winners, and specially matched by me with a view to breeding winners, at the above prices. This is a unique opportunity for fanciere to introduce new blood (and that the finest in the country) into their bird rooms at a reasonable price. I have also a few grand lengthy birds at the following prices:—Cocks, in full song, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 16/-, 20/-, each. Grand racy hens, feathered to perfection, at 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6 each. Matched pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6 per pair. Clears, Ticks, Marked or Greens.

GRAND LARGE COBBY NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN,

It is a simple fact that I am now offering a few pairs of grand Norwich, bred from my own winners at the above prices, which do not represent anything like their real value. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and this is a splendid opportunity for fanciers to start on the highway to success in breeding their own winners.

I have also a few good birds at any of the prices quoted for Yorkshires.

PURE SEIFERT ROLLERS,

ATTRACTING NESTING BIRDS TO OUR GARDENS.

I have recently come across a very excellent suggestion for attracting birds to nest in our gardens, etc., writes Mr. H. E. Forrest in the "Shrewsbury Chronicle." Like most other good ideas, it is very simple, and founded on the observation of the habits of birds which are familiar to all of us. Amongst my notes for the year 1904 I find records of no less than three nests of the Robin built inside old kettles, all within a mile or so of one another—one by Betton Pool, another at Bomere, and the third close to a farm-house at Lower Pulley. The Bomere example I took after the young had flown, and it may now be seen in the Museum, Shrewsbury.

Now this fondness for building in old kettles, etc, is well known, but, until now, it does not seem to have occurred to anyone to provide such receptacles with the express object of attracting birds to use them for nesting purposes. Yet our friend tells us that the plan is most successful in operation, the kettles and cans proving decidedly more attractive to many species than the ordinary type of wooden nesting-boxes, whilst they cost practically nothing. Any old or discarded kettles will do. If small the lids can be taken off and the kettle placed on its side. If large, the lid must be fastened down with solder or wire, and the spout knocked off, so as to leave a hole where it was attached.

Old crockery, teapots, or empty fruit-tins will do equally well, care being taken to so place them that the entrance-hole is on one side, and pointing (preferably) slightly downwards, so that the rain cannot get into the interior. These may be thrust into a hawthorn hedge, or fastened with wire amongst the branches of any tree or shrub, whilst others may be attached beneath the eaves of houses or outbuildings. They should be put up now before the breeding season, so that the birds may become accustomed to seeing them. It will be found that the majority of them will be occupied during the ensuing spring, those with large openings and capacity by Blackbirds and Thrushes, whilst those with small apertures will be preferred by the Tits.

A tin can placed against a wall amongst the branches of a fruit-tree or creeper is an almost irresistible attraction to the Spotted Flycatcher. Of course, the ubiquitous Sparrow will take possession of some of them, especially those under the eaves, but it is good policy to let them do so, because they are easily accessible, and it gives an opportunity to keep these pests down without any cruelty or actual killing.

The Successful Breeding of Norwich Canaries.

By E. BROUGHTON.

I am a Norwich man by birth, although at present resident in London. This may account for my taking up the hobby of my native City, viz., Canary breeding. It is now several years since I first commenced breeding the Norwich Plainhead, and then it was not until I came to London that the "Canary Fever" broke out in real earnest in my case, although all my life I have been a lover of the "feathered mite." Since then I have become more and more enthusiastic year by year. No doubt the love of Canaries is bred in me, seeing that my father, my mother's father, my brother, and, in fact, the great majority of my relations, have been, if they are not still, breeders and exhibitors of Canaries.

I have had a lot of disappointments. We all have a fair share of these in the Canary Fancy. The most troublesome time I have had with my birds is when they are from six to ten weeks old, and then the trouble is inflammation.

The Importance of Cleanliness.

Cleanliness, in my opinion, is one of the chief items in Canary breeding if you wish to keep your stock healthy and vigorous; and I do not think there is anything worse than seeing cages, as I have often noticed them in the cases of some fanciers, dirty with seed-husks and excrement, because the owners think cleaning out disturbs the hens while they are rearing the young. It stands to reason that birds, like human beings, if they are not properly attended to, will sicken and die. Keep the fittings, bottoms of cages, egg drawers, perches, etc., well cleaned, and the sand trays well covered with shell grit. Don't, above all, forget to give fresh water frequently.

I much prefer the Norwich breeding cage to the London breeding cage, it being much better for sanitary purposes and general utility.

As to feeding, during the time when my birds are not breeding I give them as a staple food good Spanish Canary seed (the best, as it is always the cheapest in the end), with a little hemp and rape seed for a change about once a week, and an occasional pinch of maw seed.

Running the Pairs Together.

About the third week in March (the recognised time in Norwich) I ran the pairs together, and a day or two after I gave them nesting material and scrubs, hanging a piece of cuttlefish bone on to the wires of the breeders. About a week after this, sometimes a day or so earlier, according to the condition of the hen when run with the cock, eggs may be expected. When the eggs appear I take them away until the night before the fourth egg should be laid, when I replace them. About fourteen days from this the eggs are hatched, providing, of course, they are fertile.

This is presuming that everything goes off as it should do. Some hens, however, lay a single egg, and then miss a week or so; others lay one day and then miss a day before going on until the full clutch is completed. When a hen misses about a week after the first egg I count that as the first round, and try her again. Should she repeat this I give her another trial; then if she is no good I discard her. But usually I have no difficulty after the first round. This is most likely to occur in hens laying their first egg, and I do not think it advisable to discard any hen without giving her a fair trial.

The Question of Size.

Although size is of great importance in Norwich Canaries I find that I have had best results from birds medium in this respect, they being much quicker feeders and altogether livelier in going about their parental duties.

A very important thing is to get birds of a good feeding strain, or, should you breed your stock birds yourself, always make a point of keeping for stock those which you have bred from good parents. You will then stand a better chance of a good season; at least, I have found this to be so. When breeding, I feed the birds rather more generously. I give hard-boiled egg chopped finely and mixed with a like amount of bread crumbs; I also supply a liberal amount of whole hemp seed and scalded rape in addition to the ordinary seed. Whole hemp I think is much better than crushed hemp, as it keeps the birds occupied in cracking the shell; it also keeps the hen off the young longer, which goes a long way towards preventing "sweating."

When the chicks are three days old I keep the parents well supplied with watercress, first rinsing it well in water.

Up to the present I have never had occasion to remove the cocks, keeping them with the hens all the breeding season. I find this is a great help in the matter of the rearing of the young, and should the hen flag in feeding for a day or two, as is often the case, there is still the cock bird to keep them going.

I keep the youngsters with their parents as long as possible, and do not remove them until I am quite sure they can do for themselves. If, however, the old birds begin to get spiteful, as some do, I remove them at once to the other side of the double-breeder, putting in the wire slide to separate them from the young until the latter are placed in flight, which, as a rule, is when they reach the age of six or seven weeks.

Moping Youngsters.

This is the age when trouble begins. Directly I notice any youngsters moping, I place them in a special cage, take all the seed away, and then put them on a diet of bread and milk with a little maw seed sprinkled on top. I also give them about six drops of tincture of steel and gentian in the drinking water, and refrain from supplying any green food during their illness. This treatment I keep up until an improvement is seen. I may say that I have lost but very few which have been on the "sick list." After the patients have recovered I gradually get them on to seed again.

The Eradication of Red Mite.

A great pest during warm summer weather is red-mite. I keep a good look-out for these, and whenever any signs of their unwelcome appearance is seen, I immediately resort to Keating's powder, sprinkling the nest (of course, after giving a clean nest and box) and youngsters well with it. I have never fonnd it to do any harm to the birds, but it fairly upsets the red mite. A favourite place for the insects seems to be between the nest box and the back of the inside of cage; so I make a point of looking in these haunts every day when the hen is off the nest. Should the cage be infested in the joints, etc., by these vermin, the best thing to do is, if at all possible, to remove the birds to a clean cage; then well scrub out the old one, and liberally do out the nooks and corners with either turpentine or paraffin.

When giving the birds a fresh nest I burn the old material, and well wash out the scrub; then I place the cage in an oven for an hour or so. This process soon cleans out any "mite" which may still be lurking in the cracks.

You will note that I use the old Norwich scrubs for nesting purposes. I like these much better than the earthenware pans now on the market. The reason for this is that I find the birds can better bind the nesting material in the square boxes than in the round pans, and there is not so much chance of the nest and contents being dragged out when the hen comes off to feed.

Treatment of Egg-bound Hens.

I have only twice been troubled in the matter of having egg-bound hens. I was then able to get them over the crisis by holding them over a basin of steaming water, and inserting a little olive oil in the vent by means of a feather. In a very short time in each case the egg was passed and the danger over.

The bath is very important, and should be given every other day in the summer. But in the winter I do not allow the birds to bathe more frequently than once a week, and sometimes once a fortnight, according to the state of the weather. Even then it is advisable to take the chill off the bathing water. My usual utensil for the bath is a small earthenware pan which I place inside the cage so that my birds can get right into it and have a "good old refresher"; and they certainly look the better for it afterwards.

When Warmth is Useful.

When moulting my birds I have never had much trouble, being very careful. I keep my stock bird as warm as possible without overheating them, and I keep them well away from any draughts. During the long winter evenings I have a small lamp in the room for an hour or so, as this allows the birds to have a feed; it also takes the chill out of the air. The method related above of keeping the Norwich Canary has been very successful in my own case.

Our Membership Still Going Up.

I have this week to announce, as under, a substantial addition to our list of members. I had hoped, now that the show season is over, that the list would have been a larger one. Still, it shows that the interest in our League and its doings is maintained and increasing. Further, there is evidence that its influence is widespread, for among our new members is Mr. Godry, of Lantheuil, France. Cage Birds League is now represented on the Continent as well as in our Colonies of Canada, S. Africa, New Zealand, and Australia. I shall be glad to forward full particulars of the Aims and Objects of the League to any readers who are not yet members.

Only a few more days are to elapse before the closing, on 12th March, of our competition for prizes for most introductions to the League, and many Societies and members are running so closely that a very few extra introductions may make the difference between losing and winning. All introductions received up to first post on Wednesday, 13th, will count in the competitions.

Messrs. Merrington, New Cross; Hasler, Rainham; Penlington, Walthamstow; Meadows, Luton; Mash, East Greenwich; Uzzell, King's Heath; Holley, Dover; Charles, Barnsbury; Collins, East Lisse; Hunt, Rotherhithe; Barns, Peckham; Rice, Wexford; Matthews, Hendon; Nelson, Larkhall; Alexander, Larkhall; Rhodes, Blackburn; Baab, Belfast; Rhodes, Bradford; Jones, Bradford; Wince, Yeovil; Drowley, Woking; Soames, Bromley; Woodhouse, S. Shields; Grundy, Leytonstone; Kirby, Liverpool; Godry, Lantheuil, France.

Another Hon. Sec.

Bath: Mr. E. Mead, Belvedere House, Lansdown Road.

I should be glad to hear from a resident in every town in Great Britain and Ireland not already represented in the list of local hon. secs. published in Cage Birds Annual that he or she would be willing to accept office, and do the best to make Cage Birds League and its objects known to all bird-keepers in the particular district. A number of our leaflets, setting forth our Aims and Objects will willingly be sent post free, on application.

I deeply regret to hear from Mr. Jas. Stevenson, our Hon. Sec. for Glasgow, of the death of his only son, who passed away on Friday last. I am sure that all Cage Birds League members will join with me in deeply sympathising with Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson in the bereavement they have sustained.

Fraudulent Practices in the Fancy.

Mr. Jas. Pollock, Hon. Sec. for Larkhall to our League, in sending the names of two new members, writes as follows:—

Pleased to see the League progressing so favourably. I have been asked several times if fanciers found guilty of exhibiting faked birds and expelled from a society or even disqualified at a show would be eligible for membership of Cage Birds League. If this faking is allowed to continue it will drive honest exhibitors from the Fancy. If the judges passed birds shown dishonestly and the Press upheld their action it would benefit both exhibitions and the Fancy generally. I would like to see Cage Birds League making a bold stand in this by refusing membership to persons found guilty of the dishonest practices to which I refer.

In reply: Fanciers who had been proved guilty of dishonest practices would not be eligible for membership of Cage Birds League. If they had been expelled from a Society or disqualified for frand at a show, and were already members, the case would be fully enquired into, and dealt with on its merits. Members proved to be guilty would be liable to suspension or to cancellation of their membership. We have no power to deal with non-members of the League, much as we should wish to see an end put to all dishonest practices in connection with our hobby of bird-keeping.

The Official Organ of the Paris Zoo: Its Views on Bird-keeping.

"Le Chenil," the organ of the Paris Jardin d'Acclimatation, publishes a well-considered article on the subject of bird-keeping and the efforts of the professional Humanitarians to put an end to our hobby. I am sure it will be perused with interest by everyone of our readers, and I am therefore glad to have the opportunity of reproducing it in another column of our organ. I commend it to the study of the "Humanitarian League."

What an R.S.P.C.A. Member Thinks.

As instancing the fact that all members of the R.S.P.C.A. are not in sympathy with the methods adopted by the Society in its opposition to cage-bird keeping, the following extract from a letter from a lady member will be read with interest:—

"I have been a member of the R.S.P.C.A. for five years, but shall discontinue my subscription if the Society persists in its dead set against bird-keeping, regardless of the condition under which the birds are kept."

The Animals Act, 1911: Are Railway Companies Liable to Prosecution?

A case of considerable interest has come to my knowledge through the experience of a member of our League. This member, Mr. J. Broxup, writes that two cases of birds consigned to him reached his station on a particular morning, and that it was only due to the fact that he had occasion to be at the railway station at 8.40 p.m. upon other business, that he found the birds there still awaiting delivery. No notice had been given him of their arrival, and the consequence of the delay was that a number of birds were dead before he ultimately got delivery, and ten more died on the following morning. If the facts are as stated, it would certainly appear that the railway company had caused "unnecessary suffering" within the meaning of the Act, and if the R.S.P.C.A. would like further particulars, I should be glad to furnish these.

A Continental View of the Keeping of Pet Birds.

A Translation of an Article in the French Journal "Le Chenil."

The movement for the protection of birds which has been so energetically shown in England for some years threatens to overreach its object, and to alienate by its exaggeration the goodwill of many people who have sympathised with it. Thus the "humanitarian" societies have now the intention of prohibiting the taking of a single wild bird, and to prevent the keeping of any bird in a cage. This is going against all good feelings, and would destroy a passion inherent in human nature from time immemorial. We have not been the last to protest against the massacre of the innocents, of which the Paris market has long given us the spectacle when in the spring are put up for sale hundreds and thousands of nests stolen from the woods in the environs of Paris, and containing unhappy little birds hardly covered with down, and which it was practically impossible to feed and rear. We also think it lamentable that trappers should in all seasons carry on their business and put on sale in cramped cages the victims of their nets before they are reconciled to captivity and accustomed to the change of food. It is this continued poaching which has certainly depleted the woods in the environs of Paris. If a well drawn up regulation had not prohibited the sale of singing birds in the market which is held every week in the square of the city, one would soon have no longer heard the song of a single Nightingale or a single Linnet in the suburban shades.

A Happier Condition.

But there is a great deal of difference between disorganised destruction and the keeping of birds in cages, and the reproach of cruelty which a puerile sentimentality makes against lovers of birds is far from being justified from the humanitarian point of view. One would say on the contrary, that the care and affection with which man surrounds his little winged captives must develop in him all the qualities of the heart—gentleness, patience, and the spirit of order. Further, the birds become so well accustomed to the kind of life they have to lead that the majority refuse to take their liberty when the opportunity is given them, and prefer their comfortable captivity to the wild life so fertile in dangers and privations of all kinds.

"It would be easy," says Louis Bourdeau, in the book which he has devoted to "The Conquest of the Animal World," "to show that the condition of animals is much happier under the regime of domesticity, in spite of the constraint imposed upon them, than in their natural freedom. In passing under the domination of an intelligent and humane master their condition is improved; they have fewer privations to endure, fewer dangers to fear. Man takes almost as much care of them as of himself, shares with them the welfare which he has acquired by his industry, shows forethought for those who have none for themselves, prepares food for them during the bad season, and provides abundantly for them at all times. To shelter them against inclement weather he builds them shelters far superior to their nooks and holes. He protects them against their enemies, and defends them better than they could alone defend themselves; he cares for them when ill. In a word, he applies himself to supply all their needs, and watches that they want for nothing, and if they were capable of reasoning, they would, like the little bird of Montaigne, maintain by irrefutable arguments that the world has been created for them, and that the destiny of man is to work for their welfare."

The Care of the Bird-keeper.

What M. Bourdeau says of domestic animals can be applied equally well to birds in cages. No doubt there are good and bad masters, and it is against the latter that the protestations of well-advised leagues should be raised. Against barbarous proceedings and old-fashioned cruelties they should wage war, but many excellent works on the treatment of cage birds show with what care a bird-keeper surrounds his favourites, and to what extent the latter accommodate themselves to the new kind of life, even to reproducing their kind in the cage as in liberty, and many continue to sing the whole year as in a perpetual spring. Therefore, and in order to combat the propaganda of the "humanitarian" league who exploit the sentimentality of ill-informed persons, the bird-lovers of England have just formed a contra-league for the defence of their interests. This League will also have the object of spreading healthy ideas of bird-keeping, and of making known the best methods of accustoming the bird to the cage, to nourish it and augment its welfare. The headquarters of this new Association are in London, 154, Fleet St. The League appeals to everyone, and to societies as well as individuals.

The taste for cage birds dates from all times and all countries. In China they celebrate the fête of bats and lanterns, of tops and flowers. On this anniversary people walk along the streets with a bird on their hand, or carried on a little stick covered with cloth so that the bird may not hurt its feet. This custom of carrying a bird on a perch in the hand does not seem to have been peculiar to the Far East, although it has never been with us the object of a fête. Rubens has left us a large portrait of his first wife and her children playing with a Goldfinch attached by a thread to a little perch exactly like the Chinese birds, and we possess a portrait of the eighteenth century which represents a young man holding, on a bird perch in his hand a Thrush held by a ribbon to the perch adorned with streamers.

Wild-Bird Life.

The First Bird to Nest.

As a result of the unusually mild weather, our resident birds are in such fine condition, that the nesting season will be some weeks earlier than usual, unless we get a decided check. In the ordinary course the list of British birds nesting in the early spring months is not a large one. Vegetation has to be somewhat advanced before the ordinary inmates of the hedgerows and woods commence domestic arrangement. Birds like seclusion during incubation, and to obtain it they must wait until the buds have turned to leaves, and each warm day promotes the growth and increases the thickness of the screen. Early nesters have many enemies to contend with, and the average of nestlings hatched and reared must be far lower than in the month of May, when the homes are more securely hidden behind the leaves and flowers of the woods and fields.

That fast disappearing species, the Raven, is probably the first once more to "set its house in order," and frequently the cold month of February will be selected for a commencement. In times past some giant tree in the park or wood was used annually as a site, but now it is the inaccessible cliffs of the rock coast that alone give the security needed to rear to maturity the hungry young ones. One early nest seen by the writer was lodged on a ledge of a tall cliff, and could only be seen from the overhanging brow above. It was a rough affair. Sticks and branches of heather, moss and bits of turf formed the outer portion, the interior being snugly lined with quantities of sheep's wool gathered from the adjacent moors.

In the early days the birds will soar to a great height until they are mere specks in the blue, although their harsh croak can be plainly heard, so well does the sound carry in the clear air of the moors. The flight of the Raven is powerful, and performed with regular beats of the wings. In the early spring they often indulge in various erratic movements when in the air, two birds sometimes toying and buffeting each other as they fly. The Raven's is a varied diet. He lives upon almost anything eatable. Weakly lambs are attacked and killed. Small birds and animals and the eggs of more weakly species are devoured in all stages of incubation.

The Fieldfare at Home.

The Fieldfares have now left us for their Northern homes, where their nature appears to undergo an entire change. Instead of being shy and difficult of approach, they are bold and venturesome, and fly round one with fierce cries of alarm.

In the Courts.

The Use of Brace Birds.

John Baker and George Simants, of Erith, were charged at Erith Petty Sessions on Feb. 28 with "cruelly torturing" two wild birds whilst in captivity.

P.C.'s Britchfield and Alderman were on duty in Whitehall Lane, Slades Green, when they saw the accused in charge of snaring nets and two birds, which acted as decoys. According to the police evidence, the birds were attached to a stick which, when lifted, turned them upside down.—Baker said they were not ill-treating the birds, which were trained to stand on the stick when it was raised, and they were provided with seed and water.

Mr. Ling thought that the men were "only aping their betters," and so long as hunting and other so-called sport was allowed to take place, he thought the men ought not to be proceeded against.—Mr. Salmon said he did not think the bracing of the birds was cruel if they were properly trained.

The Bench, after consulting in private, came to the conclusion that the men probably did not know that they were breaking the law to the extent they were doing, but in future they would know, and they would be fined 1s. each, the costs to be remitted. No order was made for the confiscation of the nets.

It was stated by Baker that the birds were caught to be trained, and the Chairman added he supposed the men stayed at home training the birds at night instead of going to the public-house.—"Erith Observer."

To Circumvent Plucking Hens.

If a hen starts plucking her young and you have only a wooden slide for the centre of your breeding cage, make four ¾-in. round holes in this, three inches from the bottom and about an inch apart. Then when you put the young into the second compartment of the cage, the hen can feed them through these holes. When not in use, the slide can be turned, so that the holes are towards the top of the cage.—H. Gray (Sunderland).

Paraffin versus Red Mite.

Now that the breeding season is upon us, a lot of working-men fanciers will be buying second-hand breeding cages. They should see that there are no red mites about them. If they find any, get a small cup of paraffin oil; take a sponge and dip it in the paraffin, and rub it well around the inside and outside of the cages. Do this for at least three days before you put the birds in it, and you will have no red mites this coming season.—W. H. Furlong (Waterford).

Cleansing Breeding Cages.

Dissolve 2ozs. of napthaline in 1 pint of paraffin, and well brush the cage all over inside and out. Let it stand a day, then well wash with soap and water; and if you have a garden syringe, set your cage outside and give it a good syringing with the soapy water. This drives it into every crevice of the wood. Finally rinse off with the syringe, and clean water. After it is dry, re-paint the inside. This is the best remedy and preventive I know for mites of all kinds, and is one I have not seen mentioned before.—J. A. Halhead, St. Helier, Foxley Hill Road, Purley, Surrey.

A Substitute for Cuttlefish Bone.

Save all bones from meat, soup, etc., and place them on a red hot fire last thing at night. In the morning they will be quite white and porous like a sponge. Very small pieces can be crushed along with the household egg-shells, and scattered on the flight-cage floor, while larger pieces are greedily pecked at, and help to keep the beak in good condition. Young Canaries are particularly fond of these burnt bones, and they are appreciated by their parents, and also British and foreign birds. The idea is not popular with the family dog however.—Mrs. Edwards, 433, Grafton Street, Dingle, Liverpool.

Humouring Untried Hens.

Young untried hens will often persist in building a nest anywhere but in the nest-pan. To prevent this, when giving the nesting material to "play about with," before serious building operations are evident, place it in the nest pan and not (as is usual) on the wire rack on the cage front. Many a young hen has been "brought to reason" by this method, as instinct seems to give them the connecting idea between the pan and material, whereas, in many cases, the natural instinct seems only to build, irrespective of position.—H. P. Hobbs, 76, Amner Rd., Clapham Common, West Side, S.W.

March Muling Hints.

If you are pairing two British Finches, or with Canary mates, run them together now and so get them used to each other. When a nest of Canaries is being taken from the hen, the Finch should be kept away and out of sight; and he will be more vigorous if kept in the fresh air and sunshine. If the hen and the Finch are known mulers, previous introductions are unnecessary, as the Finch will fertilise all the eggs straight away. All Finches for breeding should be given egg and biscuit mixed with soaked ant eggs; and also plenty of green food. A few mealworms, gentles, or blight from beans are exceedingly good. Maw seed, also dandelion and ripened groundsel are good, while watercress is handy when nothing else is obtainable.—C. Bruce Taberner, Myrtle Bank, Tyldesley, near Manchester.

Ungainly Water Birds.

Many water birds are most graceful in their natural element, but when upon land have a decidedly awkward appearance. Notice our common Swan and Duck; see how they sway and waddle when walking. Again, the little Dabchick is most ungainly; its legs are situated almost at the end of the body, but nine-tenths of its life are spent in the water.

Under the White Rose.

TO-DAY (Saturday) we have the annual amalgamated social and prize distribution at the Market Taveru, Godwin Street, Bradford, and all fanciers and friends are cordially invited. The tea is at 4.30 prompt, and the evening's programme will be started at six o'clock, under the chairmanship of Mr. H. H. Towers. There are no less than seven different clubs' prizes to distribute, the rotation of which, having been decided by ballot, will keep all going merrily until somewhere near eleven, the intervals between each presentation being filled with music and song. The talent engaged is quite up to the usual standard, and all that remains now to fulfil the hopes of those who have had the arrangements in hand is a bumping attendance. It is not often that such a good entertainment can be had at the price. It's free to all, except tea, which is 1s. 3d., and what we want to see is a big lot of fanciers from outside districts.

ADVANTAGE of the occasion is being taken by the Open Norwich P.C. to hold their general meeting. They are hoping to have a good attendance of members. Many, they think, will come to the double event. From what I gather the prospects are brighter from a financial standpoint than last year. There will be a little balance in hand. Sorry to say there is no prospect of the secretary, Mr. O. Mitchell, being able to attend. He has had a long spell of illness of a very serious nature. All his fellow-members wish him a speedy recovery, and it is hoped his robust constitution will pull him through his trying times.

YORKSHIRE County British Bird and Mule Club at their last meeting also decided to have their "general" on this date. They have a lot of members from outside, and it is not often they are able to come to Bradford, but they may be tempted to visit the social, and thus will be able to kill two (British) birds with one stone. Some will, no doubt, clash with the O.N.P.C., but it gives them a chance to attend and see how things are going.

SPECIALIST Clubs are all wishing to wind up the year's affairs as early as possible after the social, but most of them have the same cry—a large number of subs. are still unpaid. When a club gives prizes to the fullest amount of its assets, and members do not pay up to time it makes it very disheartening to the secretary and looks bad on the balance sheet. So please, ye erring ones, kindly look up your secretary on Saturday and make his heart glad by the sight of a few outstanding contributions.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS this last six years, and the information I have got from it has been a great help to me both for British birds and Canaries. I hope the circulation of CAGE BIRDS will get larger every week.—R. Plows (sec. of the Kippax and Dis. Linnet Club).

I am only a starter in the breeding of birds, last season witnessing my first attempt, writes Mr. E. Gosling (Reading), but I did fairly well, and owe at least two nests of youngsters to valuable tips I received from CAGE BIRDS. I might mention that it was chiefly through your paper that I started breeding, and so long as my pocket will allow it you will always number "your humble" amongst your readers.

OBITUARY.

MISS ROSE SHEPHARD.

It is with profound sorrow, writes Mr. C. Prior, that I have to chronicle the death of Miss Rose Shephard, which sad event occurred on Feb. 27, at the home of her parents in Shere, near Guildford (where the family have resided for many generations), after a lingering and painful illness, endured with wonderful fortitude, and ending finally in a peaceful slumber which resolved itself into the long, long sleep. Miss Shephard was the fiancee of Mr. V. Wynn, the respected and esteemed late hon. sec. of the City and Suburban A.C.B. Her charming personality secured for her a popularity amongst the members of the association second only—if indeed even second—to that enjoyed by Mr. Wynn himself. Her character was the embodiment of all that is truly lovable in woman. Her goodness of heart was inexhaustible. The assistance she rendered Mr. Wynn in the association's affairs was incalculable, and to it must be attributed much of the splendid success he achieved. Mr. Wynn's loss is indeed irreparable; and to him and the bereaved relatives our hearts go out in sincere and respectful sympathy. The mortal remains of our dear friend were laid to rest in the quiet old graveyard on Friday last. May her soul rest in peace, and may her gentle spirit and the remembrance of her self-sacrificing qualities shed their kindly and inspiring influence over us always. [We tender our deepest sympathy to Mr. Wynn and the relatives of Miss Shephard in the sad loss that has befallen them.—Editor.]

MRS. ROYLE.

Mr. Alfred Royle, the well known and respected secretary of the Sale and Dist. C.B.S., has sustained a sad bereavement in the death of his aged mother on March 3, writes Mr. C. Wood, assist. sec. of the Sale and Dist. C.B.S. His numerous circle of friends will join in according him their deepest sympathy.

The principal article in the March issue of the Avicultural Magazine is a most entertaining accouut of the Kokla or Wedge-tailed Green Pigeon in captivity, with notes on the habits of this bird in freedom. The article is by Mr. Pelham T. L. Dodsworth, and is illustrated by a beautiful coloured drawing by Mr. Goodchild. Mrs. K. Currey contributes an account of a tame Bullfinch which we commend to the attention of the humanitarians who contend that cage-bird keeping is "an acted blasphemy." Mr. J. W. Ainley writes of the Tui or Parson -Bird. The series, "Practical Bird-keeping," is continued this month by Mr. Johnstone, who treats of the keeping of Touracous, Bower Birds, and Birds of Paradise, "Foreign Birds at the Crystal Palace," "Bird Notes from the Zoological Gardens" (both by Mr. Seth-Smith), and the usual reviews and correspoudence complete a very interesting number.

The Dipper—A Misrepresentation.

In some parts of the North the Dipper or Water Ouzel is called the "Water Crow." Such a name is almost absurd, for the bird has no resemblance to the Crow nor any affinity to the Crow family. At one time these charming birds were greatly prosecuted, as it was thought they destroyed salmon spawn, but Hancock and Macgillivray both declare that it does nothing of the kind.

Frivolity at Peckham.

The dance arranged by Mr. H. W. Tomsett for the members and friends of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. will take place at the Reindeer Hotel (headquarters), Rye Lane, Peckham, on Mar. 19th, and promises, we are given to understand, to be one of the most brilliant gatherings that have been organised. All correspondence should be addressed to Mr. Tomsett, 34, Endwell Road, Brockley.

Not So Black as They Look.

To ordinary observers the Magpie is simply a study in black and white, but if we examine him closely we shall find that there is really very little black about him. His wing and tail, for instance, are shaded with the most lovely purple, green, and blue tints, which in the sunlight become quite iridescent. Even our black-looking Crows and Rooks are not so black as they appear, but have coloured reflections.

Habits of the Crested Grebe.

According to Seebohm, the food of the Crested Grebe is entirely procured in the water, and consists of water beetles and other aquatic insects, small fish, small frogs, and molluscs. The seeds and tender shoots of aquatic plants are also often found in its stomach; but instead of small stones or gravel, numbers of its own feathers, plucked from the ventral region, are mixed with its food. It is not known if this curious habit is intended to assist digestion.

The Age of Birds.

An interesting correspondence has recently been running in the "Daily Mail" concerning the ages attained by pet birds. Among others have been noted two Bullfinches twelve years old, a Skylark of twenty-four, and a Turtle Dove of twenty-three; but everything is capped by the statement of Mr. F. Williams, of Kidlington Vicarage, Oxfordshire, who states that he has a Magpie aged fifty-seven years! This is a marvellous record, if it can be well substantiated.

A New Scottish Finch.

A new Scottish bird, the Serin Finch, was shown at a meeting of the Royal Physical Society, held in Edinburgh on Feb. 26. Mr. Oliver Hilton Wild, who exhibited the bird, said that it had been taken on Nov. 9, 1911, near Edinburgh, in company with Lesser Redpolls. Though new to Scotland, the Serin has been recorded on eight occasions in England, and has also been seen in Ireland. The bird breeds on the Continent, but has never been known to breed in Britain.

A Valuable Order from Egypt.

We hear from Messrs. De Von and Co., the noted importers, of Bethnal Green Road, London, E., that they have had a splendid sale of their recent record importation of Australian birds, the stock now being very nearly all sold. A large number of orders have come from the Continent, and other places abroad, the majority as a result of the firm's advertisements in Cage Birds, including an order value close upon £22 from Mr. P. N. Caridia, of Alexandria, Egypt. Bicheno, Zebra, Grass, and Black and Red Gouldian Finches have been sent out to this gentleman.

South London's Luck.

Mr. Sam Harris, one of the oldest and most esteemed members of the South London Col. and F.A., has presented to the club a very handsome silver challenge cup for the best unflighted Yorkshire, to be competed for at our next annual show on Nov. 21, writes Mr. G. F. Crawford, hon. sec. I have also to record another Points Cup for the second most points during year. Altogether we have five cups for annual competition in the Cage Bird Section. The club is badly off for Yorkshire exhibitors, and the new cup will, I hope, do much towards encouraging the breeding of the Yorkshire in South London.

The R.S.P.C.A. Defeated.

In the first prosecution in London brought under the new Protection of Animals Act (1911), by the above society, a bird-dealer, Chas. Stapleton, of Rotherhithe, was charged with "causing unnecessary suffering," by neglect, to sundry birds in his possession. The result was a very distinct set-back to the society, for the magistrate, Mr. Cecil Chapman, stopped the case in the middle of the defence, dismissed the summons, and ordered the society to pay five guineas towards the costs of the defendant. A full report of the case will appear next week, the hearing only concluding late on Wednesday evening last.

An Unexpected Mule.

I had a Canary hen, writes Mr. W. Bennett (Bearsted), rearing two Redpoll-Greenfinch hybrids in one compartment of a large flight. In the next compartment I had a twice aviary-moulted cock Goldfinch. As soon as the two hybrids left the nest I drew the partition to let them and the hen Canary run with the Goldfinch, and the hen went to nest at once. Thinking that the eggs she laid would be clear I took no further notice of them at the time, but one morning I was surprised to hear the well-known chirrup of the Goldie-Canary Mule. The hybrids had succeeded in pulling all the nest-lining out and had left the Mule struggling on the bottom of the nest-pan. This shows that "you never know your luck."

ONE GUINEA FOR AN ESSAY.

The Rearing of Canaries or Other Birds Without the Use of Egg Food.

The subject of the rearing of young birds without the use of egg, either in a fresh or preserved form, is one of great interest, and we are desirous of obtaining the experiences of readers who have tried to rear young birds by giving the parent birds home-made food (i.e., not a preparation now being sold on the market) which contains no egg.

We offer a prize of one guinea (either cash or books to value) for the best essay on this topic received on or before Monday, March 18 next. It need not necessarily be a lengthy essay so long as it is to the point and gives full details of whatever foods were used, how they were prepared, and the result; also details of the birds and the conditions under which they were kept. Particulars of failures will be eligible equally with particulars of successes.

Our rules are:—(1) That only one side of each sheet of paper used must be written on; (2) that the Editor's decision must be accepted as final; (3) that all essays must reach us on or before March 18; (4) we reserve the right to publish extracts from any article sent in. Competitors should clearly write their names and addresses on the back of their essays.

From Field to Show Bench.

One of the best Lectures ever delivered.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

A very valuable and instructive discourse, upon what the writer terms "Vari-vorous" British birds, which was recently delivered before the members of the Edinburgh C.B.S.

WHEN I look round and see among you so many who have already attained no small measure of fame as keepers and exhibitors of British birds, my feelings are akin to those of an Irish crofter who was called to give evidence before that most learned body, the Board of Agriculture—an experience which he described as being like introducing a lion to a den of Daniels. A lecturer on birds is now confronted with a two-fold difficulty, which increases in magnitude with every occasion, viz., the necessity of giving his audience something which has the merit of being, if not quite new, at least, little known, and the advisability of adapting his subject to the level of the novice, and yet not bore the expert. Knowing that both classes are represented here to-night, I will steer a middle course.

The term, "Vari-Vorous birds," I may state, is a word I adopted not to describe a few species which have a varied dietary, but as an abbreviation of those terms employed in classing the various species according to the food they eat, viz., granivorous (grain-eating), frugivorous (fruit-eating), carnivorous (flesh-eating), insectivorous (insect-eating), piscivorous (fish-eating), etc. As the diet of some—I may say most—species exhibits a combination of two or more of these sections, we find that the attempt to embrace all under the elastic terms, "hardbilled" and "softbilled," produces confusion. Of course those terms are a misnomer.

Even Judges Disagree.

I have found that a difference of opinion exists, even among judges, as to the proper classification of certain mixed feeders. Thus I have seen Buntings marked "wrong class" in a hardbilled class, and Larks receiving similar treatment in a class for softbills. And a further attempt to combine dietary and bulk as a scale must, I feel sure, produce confusion worse confounded. I have a few schedules at home in which the attempt at classification is indicative of the ignorance I have mentioned, and which must have had an adverse influence on the entry, as it was impossible to know in which class to enter many species. But when I am limited to a "softbellied class—not larger than a cough(!)" I keep my birds at home. Such schedules give rise to apprehension as to whether the management may be as liable to mix the food as the species! I have, for instance, had a Flycatcher returned with a supply of seed in his cage.

While I would welcome the adoption of some proper terms (which could be abbreviated), I think the Fancy Press could with the aid of experts arrange a system of classification to suit the various species, and also the various shows. This could be accepted as the standard classification, and a reference to the list would dispel all doubts as to the class in which any exhibit should be entered, as all questions of size, food, migration, or residence, etc., would be settled, and "wrong classing" reduced to a minimum.

A Difficult Problem to Solve.

I will not go further into the question of classification, as such would of itself take more time than I have at my disposal to-night in which to describe a few of the different species, and which must for that reason be brief. I hope such necessary brevity, however, will not give rise to the complaint of the old lady who received Chamber's "Pronouncing Dictionary" by mistake for some other book by that eminent author and townsman of ours, and which she dutifully read from A to Z, remarking as she closed—"a grand writer, but changes the subject too often."

My first species is the Gold-crest, the smallest of our British birds. In illustration of my previous remarks the species might be described as "Res.. ent. ins. (Resident, entirely insectivorous), as it stays with us throughout the year, and eats insects only. This bird presents us with a problem: How can such a delicate atom withstand the rigour of winter, in even the northern parts of Britain, and eke out existence, while other species apparently much more robust and not entirely insectivorous, seek a warmer clime? I confess my inability to solve that problem.

Two Tiny Relations.

I had always regarded the Gold-crest as the reverse of a gregarious species, occurring singly or in pairs; but an intimation which I received during the early part of this winter, that a host were occupying an old quarry at Mayfield, near Dalkeith (a statement which was corroborated by quite a few persons, who saw them and recognised the species) convinces me that a partially migratory movement takes place, during which time the species are gregarious. I greatly regretted my inability to visit the place, as I should have liked to ascertain if the flock included any members of that similar species, the Fire-crowned Wren (or Fire-crest). This species has similar habits, and closely resembles the former, but is regarded by the best authorities as a winter visitor to our shores. The difference in colouration is not great, and to aid you in distinguishing between these species, I will convert this coloured illustration of a Gold-crest into a Fire-crest; with vermilion I change the bright narcissus-yellow of the crest into a fiery red, and with light ochre I make two streaks over and under the eyes extending same back towards the base of the occiput.

This species is slightly larger than the Gold-crest, and is much rarer, and my further remarks on the latter species may be taken as including both species. But as I have promised to trace it from the field to the show bench, I will copy Mrs. Beaton's recipe for jugged hare, and first catch my Gold-crest.

A Very Effective and Humane Instrument.

The apparatus I shall describe, if properly used, forms a very effective and humane instrument for the taking of various birds. I have seen the use of bird-lime condemned by different writers as being cruel, and have seen it, too often, used in a manner which justified the assertion, both from the method of its application, and the nature of its composition; but, like everything else, it has its uses and abuses. I will therefore describe first how not to use bird-lime.

By H. C. BROOKS (Horsham).

The second instalment of an instructive article dealing with the points that go to make up the show-bird of to-day, and the choice and mating of stock birds.

TURNING to the under-side, the throat should fall away but little from the beak, as otherwise it has a tendency to make the neck appear thin, giving undue prominence to the breast. A sharp-pointed breast should be avoided, as also should too full a breast. The feathers at the throat should show no twist, as this is a difficult fault to remedy, once it gets into one's stock. To my mind, a frill is a great eyesore, and I have found that if only one of a pair of birds has much of a frill, a big percentage of the youngsters inherit the same fault.

"Trousers" Not Wanted.

Loose feathers at the thighs ("trousers" they are sometimes called) give a bird at once a slovenly appearance, and are a bad fault. The body of a Yorkshire should not finish off abruptly at the waist, but should taper well away from the shoulders to the tip of the tail, giving the bird a long drawn-out appearance. There should be a clean straight run from shoulder to tail on the upper side, and a long gentle curve from the breast to the tail on the under side. Long, loose or coarse body feather is opposed to the standard, and always counts against a bird.

Short legs also must not be tolerated. They give a bird a squatty appearance, and prevent it showing off to the fullest extent whatever good properties it may have. Short-legged birds also generally fail in position.

I have gone into the standard at greater length than I at first intended, and I have also dealt somewhat fully with the faults of a Yorkshire; but it seemed to me quite necessary to do this so as to make it clear what sort of a bird is wanted, and what is not, as it is so essential to know this when mating up the birds, and I will now pass on to this part of the business.

The Question of Correct Mating.

Now, in mating up birds to breed the ideal specimen, the line I recommend is to see that both birds of a pair come as near to the standard as practicable, rather than adopt the method sometimes advocated of relying almost entirely on the hen for the good points (other than length). I have found that the young birds invariably inherit the faults of both parents just as much as they do the good points, and I am quite convinced that, broadly speaking, "like begets like." Of course, the same end is frequently obtained by different ways, and I do not for one moment suppose that the best birds of the day are all bred in exactly the same way, or that the breeders of them have all worked on the same lines. But I do believe that they have not been bred in a haphazard manner, but are the result of systematic breeding, and that the parents of them (whether coming of pedigree stock or not) have been selected for the good points which they possessed, and not for the bad ones.

To those who are just beginning in the Fancy, and who are desirous of "going in for" Yorkshires, I would say, Don't buy moderately good birds, for they will not breed "tip toppers," and (as I have myself found) it takes a long time, however careful one may be in the selection of stock birds, to breed birds fit to win—even in moderate company—if one's original stock birds are not really good. But, rather, let the beginner buy the very best birds his means will allow, and he will find the produce of these will be much more likely to do honour on the show bench than those born of less aristocratic parents.

No Bird Entirely Free from Faults.

Coming to the actual selection of the stock birds, let me say at once that no bird is entirely free from faults, and in mating up birds the rule generally regarded as the correct one is to "match the points," that is, what one bird of a pair fails in, the other should excel in.

The first and general rule with regard to the pairing of Yorkshires is to pair yellow to buff. Good results may have been obtained occasionally by pairing yellow to yellow or buff to buff, but the rule of pairing yellow to buff (it does not matter, in my opinion, whether the cock or the hen be the yellow bird) has stood the test of time, and is almost universally adopted by all breeders of repute.

I have said before that I like both birds of a pair to be pretty near to the standard; but knowing that it is well nigh impossible in any ordinary room to find many birds answering this requirement, I will confine my remarks to the mating of the more ordinary specimens to be found in the average fancier's room, and which, while possessing many of the desired characteristics of a true Yorkshire, yet fall short of the standard in some respects, and consequently are not exhibition specimens.

Short Legs Should be Avoided.

The type of bird which I recommend for the stock cock is one having abundance of length, narrow shoulders (with just a suspicion of squareness), and with a good straight run from shoulder to the tip of the tail. It should also be slim in body, standing erect on high legs, and carrying good feather. The standard says the bird's legs should be long "without being stilty"; but I would never, when mating up throw a bird out for having too long legs, and I do not recollect ever having in reading show reports seen a bird adversely criticised for being "stilty." Length of leg enables a bird to show off its good points to the best advantage. Short-legged birds never look well, and should not be used unless they possess some other particularly valuable property, and then be paired only to long-legged partners.

CANARY QUERIES.

SCRAPPY SONG AND SLEEPY (W.W.).—The bird is probably suffering from a disordered digestion. See that all your seeds and foods are sound and sweet, keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and give it a leaf of crisp young dandelion every day. In addition to this treat as advised to "Printer" for a fortnight, and if not well then write again, referring to this reply.

MATE FOR YORKSHIRE (J.A.C.).—The colour you call cinnamon is, as I suspected, not cinnamon colour, but merely bronzing, which is often met with in green variegated or greens. There is probably a dash of cinnamon blood in the bird, so you may if you have no known cinnamon-bred cock available, take the risk of pairing this hird to the clear yellow pink-eyed hen. A dark-eyed hen would certainly be a more suitable mate. The pink-eyed hen, being bred from cinnamon marks, would be far more suitably mated with a cinnamon-marked or ticked cock. Without knowing the history of the cock No. 2 more intimately it is impossible to say what the result of mating him with No. 1 hen will he.

MATING NORWICH (First Year).—(1) Yes, the two birds bred in last April and July will breed this year. They should be quite ready for mating at the end of this month or first week in April. (2) If the buff Norwich is pure green-bred—no cinnamon blood in him—the young will be practically all green and heavily variegated green. (3) No, the young would not be pink-eyed unless the cock had a large amount of cinnamon blood in him. The mating in such case is in no way suitable to get muling hens, if you want any light mules. (4) There is no reason at all why you should not mate this hen with the cock, if she is suited to him in other points. Why destroy her at four years old? She may be good for a successful season's work yet. You could run the cock with both hens alternately. It's always wise to have a second hen breeding whenever possible to fall back upon in case one proves a non-feeder.

DIRTY PLUMAGE (Trembled).—The dirty appearance of the plumage is probably grimy dirt. It does not matter about his being worse than all your other birds—some birds have quite a forte for getting grimy, and bathing does not seem to hinder it much. Only handwashing will remove this condition. Possibly the bird is in an older cage, or a dustier place than the rest, which would largely account for him looking worse. The naked patch on breast may be a very plump full chest. Of course, you know that feathers really never grow on a Canary's breast. The feather tracts are down each side, but spread over and cover the breast. If the feather growth is really faulty, treat bird as advised to "Bare Head."

AVIARY AND INMATES (Novice).—Your aviary seems excellent for your purpose, and if you can set it up with a South-east aspect from the front of inner section it should prove an ideal one as an all-the-year-round abode for your Canaries. (1) If you can get some nice turf composed of fine dwarf lawn grasses I would certainly advise you to cover the flight with this material. Work the top spit of soil into a friable state, level the surface, and then lay down the turf, rolling or beating it solid at the finish. You might put in a few such shrubs as guelder rose, golden privet, syringa, ribes, and box—the former-named will need clipping after a time to keep them within bounds. A border of mignonette, Virginian stocks, along the front of main structure, and nasturtiums and sweet peas trained up the front would not only be attractive, but, when flying about, the birds would appreciate them in a practical sense. (2) It would be a very good plan to breed in cages this season and give young liberty to fly about when old enough. The experience will stand you in good stead another season. (3) You should take advantage of the first spell of nice mild weather now to transfer birds to the aviary; am assuming they have already been accustomed to a normal temperature. (4) You can work up a very good singing strain from either pure Rollers (none better) or crosses with these and Borders, Yorkshires, or Norwich, in the order named. I would advise you to mate up mostly Roller cocks. If you mate up any Norwich cocks, it would be a good plan to remove them at the end of the breeding season, so that the young may have pure Roller training, or nearly so.

BREEDING ROLLERS (Woodbine).—(1) It is not advisable to breed Norwich and Rollers in the same room, particularly if you wish to keep the song of the Rollers pure. (2) The vocal abilities of Rollers (Seifert or otherwise) is undoubtedly inherited to a considerable degree, but notwithstanding this all classes require training. (3) Selferts are just as easy or difficult to breed as any other class of Roller. As a whole, Rollers are among the very hardiest and easiest to manage and breed. (4) Silver sand might do very well to assist in keeping the floor of cage clean, but it is quite useless to the birds as an aid to digestion.

SEED SAMPLES (C. H. D.).—A small proportion of the hemp is quite on the verge of staleness, but the bulk is still very good. It has been an A1 sample, and will be good for some time to come, but it will be as well to keep an eye on it from the middle of summer onwards, and discard it as soon as you find a large proportion of the kernels turning brown. All the other seeds are very excellent samples. It would be difficult to get a better lot; the samples are quite fit for the very best exhibition stock. You mention no price, so I cannot say whether they are cheap or not, but considering the quality, they can scarcely be really dear.

OUT OF CONDITION (A Brighton Starter).—It is quite useless mating the bird for breeding until it is in good forward condition. For full details of procuring this and avoiding many other troubles you should see my article in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Also see reply to "V.A.G." last week, and feed the bird as therein described. Give six drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for three consecutive days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together in the water every second day for a week.

ABNORMAL FEATHER (G. Brown).—The substance you sent is an abnormality of feather growth which is not infrequently met with, and the actual cause of which is very obscure. If the growth has not restarted, touch the spot once with tincture of iodine, using a small feather, such as a bird's tail or flight feather, for the purpose, and afterwards touch it with a little Lanocyllin three times a week until ready to break through the quill. You may give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw three times a week for two or three weeks, and twice a week on interveuing days add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece to the drinking water.

A BLACK AND A NORWICH (F.J.F.).—(1) Am not aware of any black Canary having ever been produced, much less exhibited. Possibly you are thinking of a black Bullfinch which has been exhibited a number of times, and is merely a freak of melanism. (2) Treat the bird for a fortnight the same as advised to "Printer," and iu addition stick a piece of the following paste in the wires for bird to peck at when it likes. Paste: Place a tablespoonful of honey in a small warmed glass or galipot, add a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, and the same quantity of grains of paradise. Mix all thoroughly together, and add just enough finely powdered biscuit to make a soft but firm paste. When cold it can be cut into cubes to stick in wires as required.

NO SONG, LITTLE FLIGHTS (Verb. sap.).—(1) I am inclined to think this bird is a hen. Treat for a fortnight the same as advised to "F.J.F. (2)," and if there is still no more attempt at singing you had better deal with it as a hen. (2) See that this bird—also the other one for that matter—is quite free from insect pests, and in a comfortable and equable place, free from draughts. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day add separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with soft sugar, and also a pinch of maw. Give a little mixed seed twice a week, and a spray of green food on each of the other days. In the drinking water give as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day. Continue treatment for a fortnight. Offer the bath occasionally in fine weather, and just prior to doing so flick a few drops of water over her with the thumb and finger, or give her a slight puff from a sprayer.

BREATHES HEAVILY (White Star).—A tonic is very useless for the bird unless it is first put under good and healthful conditions, and kept quite free from draughts. Get the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary" and see if you are feeding and treating the bird correctly. Having seen to this, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar three times a week for a fortnight, and add a saline aperient to the water for two days. After this give 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipacac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a week, or a fortnight if necessary. If not well in that time write again, referring to this reply.

A TRIO (Griffo).—(1) Certainly you can ring the birds if you wish to do so, but I am not sure whether the B.R.C.C. rings are supplied to non-members. I should say probably not, but a line to the Secretary of the Club would settle the matter for you. (2) Yes, the usual way of mating Lizards is a Gold to Silver. It is not essential for the cock to be the Gold. It may be either Gold cock and Silver hen or Silver cock and Gold hen. (3) Certainly you could pair a Gold Lizard cock to a Norwich hen, but the result would be only cross-breds of no value save for singing or further crossing. The cross was formerly used to improve colour of Norwich, but would be of little or no value in these days.

NOT MATING WELL (Beginner).—(1) You mated the birds too early, And probably neither of them was in breeding condition. Separate them now, and treat cock as advised to "V. A. G." last week. You need CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL to help you over all these little difficulties. (2) I really don't know any definite age at which a cock Canary is past breeding. So long as they remain healthy and active and in song, I take it they will always be capable of filling eggs, more or less. I have myself bred with one between nine and ten years old, and others, I believe, can beat this. (3) The fact of the hen losing feathers is sufficient proof that she is in no sense fit for mating. Keep her fairly warm and quite away from draughts in order to get the moult through as rapidly as possible. In addition to the staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana every second day, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of mixed seed the same as the cock, and on each of the remaining days a leaf of dandelion. In the drinking water give a mild aperient for one day, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel two days in every three until the feathers have ceased dropping. It will be useless mating her until she has quite got over the moulting.

WHAT IS WRONG (E. Berry).—Putting the birds together is, I am sure, all that is wrong in this case. The cock appears to be in quite good condition for the season, especially if he is singing, or was doing so when put with the hen. The probability is that the hen is not equally forward, and it is utterly useless putting a pair together unless both are in breeding condition. If the hen shows no signs at all of settling down to business, separate the birds again for a fortnight. Meantime feed them both as fully detailed in my article on feeding up backward birds in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. Briefly, a little egg or other soft food every second day, mixed seeds ditto, and a leaf or two of dandelion daily.

SITS PUFFED UP (Printer).—Give only plain canary for staple diet. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternating days a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar, and also a pinch of maw seed, and either a leaf of dandelion or a spray of watercress. Twice a week give a pinch of seed mixture as advised to "Staff Sergt." In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. See the bird is kept under healthful conditions, and keep cage strewn with clean, gritty sand.

BREEDING FOR PROFIT (Roller).—If you have a good prospect for easily disposing of your young stock locally as song birds, you could not do better than start with Rollers, which are quite the best songsters and generally in good demand; and they are, except very highly-trained songsters, quite moderate in price. Next to Rollers, Borders would be best to begin with, as these, too, are quite moderate in price, very hardy, and very popular. You should start with two trios—a cock and two hens in each—and have a clear buff cock and two lightly wing-marked or ticked yellow hens in one trio, and a lightly variegated yellow cock and two clear buff hens in the other. Keep each hen in a single breeding cage, and when all are quite ready to mate, pair a cock with each of the two most forward hens, and when these hens have gone to nest, remove cocks and mate them with the other two hens. When these have commenced to sit, remove cocks and cage them alone until the first hens are again ready for them. Then repeat the procedure. For further details get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (post free for 7d.). The B.R.C.C. is a society of Roller fanciers, whose aims and objects are to foster and encourage the breeding of Rollers, etc.

HEN CANARY WITH FITS (Galen).—(1) Feed a little more generously for a few weeks. In addition to staple of plain canary, and a little summer rape every second day, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed on the alternate days, a pinch of mixed seeds twice a week, and a scrap of green food four times a week. When a fit occurs add five grains of bromide of potassium and 10 grains of bromide of soda to the drinking water for three consecutive days, and afterwards a few doses of the gentian tonic you have been using. Also try to anticipate the fits by giving the bromides at the end of each alternate week, and a few doses of tonic in the following week. (2) I would advise you not to attempt breeding any more pure Canaries from this hen. If you wish to perpetuate the strain on account of the light muling powers, work it up from her sisters and brothers, or parents, which are not afflicted in the same way as this one. You might use her for breeding Mules, but must provide yourself with feeders to take charge of the eggs for hatching and rearing young, as you cannot trust this hen to perform these duties.

A SLEEPY HEAD (Staff Sergt.).—If you are keeping the bird under proper conditions, in a comfortable and equable temperature, but not overheated, and quite free from draughts, it is probable that it has left the best part of its youth behind. Does it appear to have had its claws cut, and has it large, coarse scales on its legs and feet? Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not better write again and repeat details, and give the above information. Keep under above-named conditions. Give a staple of plain canary only. Once a week give a small teaspoonful of seed mixture—hemp, inga, summer and black rape, and millet, one part each, a half part each of linseed and teazle, and a sprinkling of maw, gold of pleasure, and yellow mustard. On one other day each week a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a spray of watercress or leaf or dandelion every second day. Allow it to bathe freely if it will do so in mild weather. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week dissolve in the water every second day a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

MAGPIE MANNIKINS (L.H.).—I and many other aviculturists have bred the Magpie Mannikin in the aviary, and it has also crossed with the Bronze Mannikin when lacking a mate of its own kind. The beak of the hen is narrower and more pointed than that of the male, and the chestnut patches on the sides of her body are smaller and less intense than those of her mate. The white on the head is merely a few foul feathers.

EPSOM SALTS (New Year).—About one teaspoonful, but not heaped, should be just about right for half a pint of water, but for Waxbills I much prefer Dinneford's magnesia, half a teaspoonful to each fluid ounce of water—two tablespoonfuls as near as possible equals one fluid ounce. Only china, crock or glass drinkers should be used to contain the above.

HOW MANY SHALL I KEEP? (Manzanito).—You could keep the following, providing the cage has a daily clean: Orange-cheek, Grey (common), St. Helena, and Golden-breasted Waxbills, with a pair each of Common (Red) and Green Avadavats. Our Nutshells, "Avadavats" and "Waxbills," 2½d. each post free, from our Manager, would tell you all about them. All are seed-eaters, and once settled down should thrive and do well with you. The twiggy branches for perches at each side of the cage, leaving the centre open for flight.

AVIARY QUERIES (A.W.A.).—I am enclosing you the rough pencil plans, as to your other remarks—all standards and inside portions bordering on outside flight should have climbers trained up them, ivy, hops, Virginian creeper and wild clematis are excellent and also highly ornamental. I should also advise that the division between covered and open flights be wood and glass, so that during the exceptionally severe periods the birds could be confined under cover; it is a great advantage to arrange for this control. I think the even span, except where the width of flight alters it to three-quarter span, would look the better, but plans will give all details.

BUDGERIGARS ("Punch," Chelsea).—Our Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½ post free, from our Manager would tell you all about these birds. The cere (over nostril) of the male is blue, that of the female ruddy brown when in breeding condition. They do not require any nesting material. The husk is all they require; when ready to nest they will clear out the interior to their liking, and duly deposit their eggs. Diet: Canary, white millet, millet sprays, and occasionally a few crushed oats. Also supply green food (lettuce now, but when obtainable, supply flowering and seeding grass, as much as they will eat), grit, cuttlebone and water. Do not be too curious as to what is in the husk, and in due time young birds should appear.

WHAT PARROT? (Anxious, D. L. P.).—It is an Indian Ring-necked Parraket. Most individuals talk more or less, some most excellently, but they take more teaching than either a Grey or an Amazon. Newly-imported young birds are often obtainable at 5s. each, an adult in good feather, say, 20s. to 25s., and the value would increase according to talking capacity—anything up to 60s. or 70s. If the bird is tame and fond of you, I think the regurgitation of its food is merely a natural habit; if it had a mate it would feed it after doing so. As to diet, this is given fully in our reply to "C. C. M.," in this issue, but your bird does not require drugs.

CRIMSON FINCH, ETC. (Villavicencis).—(1) The Crimson Finch is a very quarrelsome Australian species, and a single pair or cock should be caged separately, or its weaker companions will suffer sooner or later; its colouration is various shades of rich crimson, with some white spots. The Zebra Finch is a charming little chap, clad in grey, white, black and chestnut, a free breeder, and can be kept with other birds. It has a "penny trumpet" sort of song. The Budgerigar is a small Parrakeet, and must not be kept with finchlike birds. It is principally of a bright grass green colour, with dusky black and yellow markings; there is also a yellow variety, they breed freely in captivity, and you can learn all about them from our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free, from our Manager. (2) No cage is immune from red mite; dressing with some strong insecticide twice a year—early spring and autumn—is the only remedy. A little quassia solution in the birds' bath helps to keep them down, and also the use of the specially prepared bags of nesting material. (3) Your description is rather general, but I think the bird you refer to is the Pintail Nonpareil.

AN AILING GREY PARROT (G.P.).—I expect if anything happened to the bird your source of supply would allege that changed treatment was the cause of loss, however absurd this might be, and the conditions of importation are such that the life of a Grey Parrot for the first few months after landing is a precarious one indeed. If the bird were my own I should treat as follows: Get it as quickly as possible on to the dietary given in the Grey Parrot Nutshell booklet which you have; but continue boiled maize till the bird was well established—except as a medicine in severe cases of internal inflammation milk sops are very bad indeed for Grey Parrots. It must be kept warm, yet not in an unveutilated (stagnant) portion of the room; give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia once a week, and on the other days half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water (you must not use a metal drinker) and continue this till the bird is well established. It is impossible to say whether the bird is dying or not, but moping, going off its food, and tucking its head under its wing for long spells during day time are all signs of ill-health, but so far as I can gather from you, the trouble should yield to the above treatment. If the symptoms become more acute write again at once, or if it's on approval write the seller and get another bird, and ask him for details as to packing for return.

GREEN PARROT IN BAD PLUMAGE (C.C.M.).—Your bird is a hen Ring-necked Parrakeet. A confirmed feather puller is almost impossible to cure, and your seed mixture does not help matters. However, if you treat and diet as below the trouble should be mitigated if not cured, but it will not be a quick recovery, and the treatment must be persevered with. Diet: Seed mixture—one quart each canary seed and white oats; one pint each paddy rice, hemp and white millet; and half a pint each of grit (not sand), maize, wheat, dari and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit (apple, banana, etc.), green food (lettuce, etc.), nuts, plain biscuit, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Give it pieces of tree branches and empty cotton reels to chew up and play with. Treatment: Give every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls) and on other days half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the same quantity of water—you must only use crock, china or glass drinking vessels when giving drugs. Spray the birds twice weekly (choosing warm days and guarding against draught till dry) with a solution of firtree oil (procurable from any large nurseryman or florist)—one teaspoonful in a quart of chilled water. Use a "Mist" sprayer, and get as little in the bird's eyes as possible. If the bird's voidings should become and keep watery-loose, you must cease the magnesia for a time, and not resume till the condition of the bowels becomes normal again. Possibly the bird missed the company of the other parrots, and if it is not too noisy it would be best kept in the ordinary living room, where it could be frequently petted, talked to, and see plenty to attract its attention from itself. Try the above treatment for a month, and then report progress; of course, if trouble becomes more acute write again at once. After the spraying you could also annoint the bare places with Spratts' "Pennakura."

ZEBRA FINCHES (A. G., South Kens.).—This species are indefatigable breeders once they get fairly under weigh, and the moult does not always check them. If you have taken out the perches and fittings from the Hartz cage, and cut away a bar to make an entrance, they need nothing more, save loose hay and a canary nestbag as building material. I should not trouble about the two eggs you refer to; remove these, and let them make a fresh start, when they have got the nest entirely to their liking you will not be troubled with dropped eggs, and two or three broods should be reared in the course of the year. Your diet is about right, but give plenty of green food (lettuce, seeding grass, etc.), also a little soft food when young are hatched, but Zebras mostly rear on seed. I do not care for Giant Canary seed for foreign species, a smaller seed, if sweet and plump, is far better.

FOR A DOUBLE BREEDING CAGE (R. A. G.).—For brilliant colour you cannot very well surpass Gouldian Finches; these are on the market at the present time, and there should be a probability of them breeding, but I rather advise your taking out the partition and letting them enjoy the whole cage; it is none too large to keep them fit and well, and give them a chance. Our Nutshell

"Gouldian Finches," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, will tell you all about them. An alternative would be either pair of Zebra or Ribbon Finches, and one of these (the former for preference) would perhaps be the best for you to commence with if you are a novice, as they are hardy and fairly cheap, 7s. 6d. per pair, at present time. Let me know your choice, and I will tell you how to feed—all are seedeaters.

RED-NAPED LORIKEETS (T. H.).—Red-naped, or Red-collared Lorikeets have bred in a cage in the Parrot House at the London Zoo, one young bird being successfully reared, and there have been other all but successful atempts in the aviaries of private individuals. I fear you'll have difficulty to find a mate—practically no difference in the sexes—the hen is a wee bit smaller, and slightly less intense in colour, but the distinctions are practically infinitesimal—the best way is to pick them out by their demeanour. They come mostly from Australia and New Guinea. Australians are, I fear, now barred by the law, and the New Guinea species are all very rare on the market. If you see Scaly or Blue Mountain Lorikeets offered, I should advise you to secure a pair, a hen of the latter would mate with your Red-collar, if you cannot get one of its own kind. Send me a stamped addressed envelope, and I will see if I can put you on a pair.

Ailing Black-cheeked Lovebirds.

P. H. S.—You cannot do much beyond fomenting, if it can be handled, or steaming with a hot decoction of camomile flowers, and keeping the bowels moving freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—three drops from a quill direct to the beak, the state of the voidings regulating the frequency of the doses. Also add ten drops daily of Bynophosphates to the drinking water (china or glass drinker) for a time. Keep a small supply of crushed oats in the cage, and also supply a leaf of fresh lettuce or other green food fairly often. Make a weak solution of fir tree oil, and spray the bird (use a "mist" sprayer) occasionally. If the bird does not improve in, say, three weeks to a month, let a vet. (one with some experience of birds) examine her and state whether the trouble is amenable to treatment.

Sunbirds, Quail Finches, etc.

P. O.—(1 and 2). The condition of the bird must guide you. There should not be any abrupt termination of the treatment; this should be gradual, and in case of any relapse the full treatment reverted to again at once. Adult male Sunbirds will not agree together for any length of time. A pair would agree all right, and possibly a cock each of Purple and Amethyst-rumped might agree for a while. (3). Watch the Quail Finch closely, and if its cage mates are continually "preening" its head and neck you must cage it separately till the plumage is renewed. Rub in a little vaseline occasionally, not sufficient to run among and grease the plumage. In addition to your present treatment, put ten drops of Bynophosphates in its drinking water (not a metal vessel) for a time, and offer one or two mealworms daily. (4) There is nothing for the Crimson Finch but solitary confinement. He will not always agree with his wife, and I fear his toleration of the Mexican Siskin is but a temporary mood!

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Rearing Young Jays.

Scholastic.—I am afraid there is no chance of your Ring Doves incubating the eggs of a Jay and successfully rearing the young. Doves have a peculiar way of conveying the food to their progeny, and whether the young Jays would appreciate this I am puzzled to say. Nor can I suggest any other likely foster-mother. They may easily be brought up by hand. Briefly, when hand-rearing, if you mix finely-minced hard-boiled egg with an equal quantity of very stale bread crumb and moisten it with new milk when feeding, you should get along all right. If you get several young ones, however, you will find it cheaper to use scalded and mashed-up puppy biscuits (of best quality), with which you can mix the egg in the proportion of three parts biscuit to one of egg. You can give the youngsters mealworms, and smalish garden worms, cut into suitable pieces, should also certainly be supplied. Also you can frequently chop up a piece of lean mutton or beef (mince up finely) and give amongst the food; or a little tender cooked meat can be given. Personally, however, I fight shy of meat as much as possible (especially so for very young birds). I prefer boiled or stewed rabbit flesh to all other, when obtainable. Mix a good big pinch of fine grit amongst the food now and again, or about half a teaspoonful of powdered cuttlefish bone. You can give the birds a drink of plain water after each meal, if you like. If any nestling should get a touch of diarrhœa (which is unlikely if you give the cuttlefish or grit), well mix a saltspoonful of prepared chalk powder (from any good chemist) amongst a portion of the food fed to it. Repeat after an interval if it seems necessary.

Breeding Light Muling Hens.

P. McKinney.—I hope I have got your name aright. It is not easy to get "real big hens" cheaply; or to breed them cheaply. Large hens are always worth a good figure; further, the Sib (or "in") breeding tends to reduce size when carried very far. It is not easy to get big, well-built hens likely to throw light Mules, unless you know a place where you can get clear-bred Norwich Plainheads (free as possible from green blood). You should obtain a yellow Norwich cock and a buff Lancashire Plainhead hen as one pair; a buff pink-eyed Yorkshire cock (a stock bird, on the heavy side), and a yellow Norwich hen as a second pair. The young from these pairs (and the old birds, too, if desirable) should be mated afterwards to secure the best results as regards large, well-built hens, as free as possible from markings. The original stock birds should be clears, and bred from clears as far back as possible, with bold, broad heads, and plenty of "timber" generally. They will cost a decent sum, if really good in these respects. When mating up after the first year, avoid breeding with birds which have come small, or thin in head, or heavily marked (a tick, or small mark, doesn't matter), and utilise the yellow Norwich type youngsters for preference. You are pretty certain to breed a pink-eyed yellow hen from pair No. 2, and she should be paired back to her father; take care of any suitable pink-eyed yellow cocks which come from this union, and cross one or other of them into the progeny of pair No. 1. Test the hens, of course, with suitable muling Finches from time to time; and stick to those which may throw Mules with light plumage for future stock purposes.

Keeping a Tree Creeper.

Sunnyside.—The stock cage should be a large one (say, 24ins. long by 20in. high by 14 wide), and the back and sides must be lined with bark (called "virginian cork" at shops where it is sold), for the bird to run about on. Perches are not necessary, though I generally have one in my own cages. The wire front must be of half-inch gauge, not more, and the best feeding vessels are those which swing in through openings in the front rail of the cage. If the sides and top of the cage are not bark lined (the back must be), they should be lined with a thick material—such as good quality haize (glued on). For food the bird must have an insectivorous mixture of the finest quality (containing plenty of good ants' eggs) prepared in the usual way with finely grated raw carrot or minced green-food, a little minced hard-boiled egg being frequently added. Live food is essential to the bird's continued well-being—flies, aphides, wasp-grub, small scoured geutles, small (or cut-up) mealworms, live ants' eggs, and the like. Unless you can cater for the bird properly, don't attempt to keep it. If already "well on food," however, a Tree Creeper will survive the winter on a really good insectivorous mixture; mealworms should never be given at all freely once the bird is eating soft-food well. You will find much valuable information concerning the food-stuffs, etc., in our "Nutshell" booklet on the small insectivorous species.

Mating Redpolls.

A. Bain.—There does not seem much object in mating a Lesser Redpoll to a Mealy, unless you have an eye to getting house-bred Redpolls for Hybrid-breeding purposes. The progeny in themselves would not be "Hybrids" of any value. Redpolls are among the easiest of British birds to breed in captivity. As one sings and feeds the other, it is fairly certain you have a true pair. Feed them as recommended for Linnets in this issue. When breeding, you can add a little egg and biscuit, well sprinkled with maw seed, to the usual seeds given. But if you can get a free supply of shepherd's purse, cuttiug it close to the ground and throwing it to them wholesale (it swarms in summer with tiny insect life), they will rear the young without the assistance of egg, giving a little coarsely crushed sweet biscuit (damped), and maw seed only. Flowering groundsel and chickweed may also be freely given. You want to hunt out all the live food you can for them. A few small mealworms, flies, smooth caterpillars, gruhs, earwigs, aphides (greenfly) off rose, etc., leaves, live ants' eggs—any and all will receive a warm welcome. About the seventh to tenth day is usually a ticklish time when rearing young British birds (and also many of the rarer Hybrids), and it is then the live food is most helpful.

Managing the Hen.

New Reader (Swansea).—The hen, when sitting, should not be given a liberal diet such as she will have when feeding the young. Still, I think it wrong to throw hens back on to an unvarying diet of canary seed; that is unnecessary, and, I think, even harmful, for they must have "fuel" to supply the necessary bodily heat. When incubating the eggs, put only plain canary seed in the hopper, but give on alternate days in the egg drawer a tiny half-teaspoonful of egg bread sprinkled with maw seed (one day) and a half-teaspoonful of mixed hemp and summer rape (the next day). When the young are due to hatch, I give the hen, to feed with, plenty of canary and summer rape seeds and lightly cracked hemp seed, with a little shelled sunflower and maw seeds. I offer ripe seeding green foods, such as chickweed and shepherd's-purse, freely—but strip off all coarse leaves. If you cannot get this, give young lettuce and watercress leaves—but not freely until the youngsters are three or four days old. She may also relish a little soaked (just sprouting) rape. I don't use scalded rape; only that just soaked in cold water, frequently changed. Don't give these things all at the same time, but offer them at various periods through the day—nothing like variety to induce hens to "pack" their babies. Egg bread, made by well mixing an equal quantity of crushed Osborne biscuits (or equal quantity of stale bread crumbs, just dusted over with fine castor sugar), with a minced hard-boiled (twelve minutes) egg, must, of course, also be freely offered. Any hen worth her salt will rear fine, lusty young on this menu.

Bullie Anxious to Nest.

New Reader (Swindon).—It is a little early, true, but I have known of many instances where Bullie hens have wanted to nest in February. They vary as much in taste, so far as nesting sites, nesting materials, etc., are concerned, as do Canary hens. I never interfere; it is best to let the fair sex have their own way. If you get out into the country at all, you can find dried grasses, hents, and an old Blackbird's or Greenfinch's nest (pulled to pieces), and give these to the hen Bullies. My own hen Britishers (Redpolls and Linnets in particular) are often fond of charpie, and one or two have built a fine, clean-looking, cosy nest practically entirely of it. Some use an earthenware nest pan, but the majority of hen British birds prefer wooden nest-boxes, or Roller travelling cages with the end (or top) and inside fitments removed. Some like an old Blackbird's nest to re-line, and some will lay their eggs in simply a hole made in dried grasses strewn on the cage floor. They are peculiarly variable. About the best nesting material out for hen Bullies can be made from a cheap cocoanut fibre, doormat. Unravel the fibre, and cut it into varying lengths (from one to two and a half inches). It works out very cheaply in price, and my Bullies delight to build with it. They will rear the young (or attempt to do so) I should say, for few succeed, the usual plan being to put the eggs under foster parents) on the ordinary seeds, but must have unlimited seeding shepherd's purse, groundsel, chickweed, and the like. In addition, mine also relish soft foods, and egg food, and live ants' eggs.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

IN SURREY (C.M.).—The close season in Surrey extends from Jan. 31 to Aug. 31, inclusive. Many birds, including the Goldfinch, are protected all the year round. The Bullfinch is not. Catching on Sundays is entirely prohibited, except in a few parishes. You will find it cheaper and better to buy either a good quality ready-made paint or washable sanitary distemper; the latter stands high in favour with bird breeders.

THE KING OR BIRDS (Annie Baker).—We have given this story before.

GLASS COVER FOR TABLE LEG (W.W.E.).—We are afraid this notion would not be found practicable by the vast majority of our readers.

A LETTER (R. Plows).—We return our thanks for your kindly remarks. Good luck to your society.

ILLUSTRATED IDEAS (T. Pearson, jun.; John Barker; A. Snape; —. Smith (Norton); D. Thornton).—We have already published ideas very similar to the ones you send us.

PRESS CUTTINGS (J. Baker, T. Jones, R.T., T.W., and others).—We thank you for the newspaper cuttings you have kindly forwarded us.

TIMELY HINTS (W. Bennett).—The matter on your postcard does not come within the province of our "Timely Hints" competition. It is just the relation of an interesting experience.

A RECIPE, ETC. (Inventive).—You will find it much more satisfactory (and cheaper) to buy a quick-drying hard ebony varnish, or stain. The cost is trifling, even when a large number of cages require attention. A wood ventilator will answer your purpose just as well as one made of tin.

FALKIRK GOOD INTENT C.B.A. (W. Clarkson).—We have duly noted your remarks.

PINE SAWDUST (J. A. Pearce).—You can obtain coarse-cut pine sawdust at any saw-mills, large cabinet works, and the like. It is very cheap. It has been advertised in our columns, but we have been unable to locate the advertisement. Keep your eye on the appliances column during the next few weeks.

Through a Bird-Room Window.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

This charming contribution upon the Black Bulbul is No. 21 of the New Series by this popular author and well-known aviculturist.

I BELIEVE that some of my readers, and I must say it is most awfully nice of them to say so—are seriously alarmed lest these articles should come to an end. Let me assure them, by a little apologue, that at any rate that day is as yet far distant. An inspector went to visit an old lady of nearly ninety years. She told him she did not know how her husband would do without his reading. "The Bible," she went on "that's first." "Certainly," was the pleased rejoinder, "and close to it come the murders from the papers. He dew love them." Somewhat disconcerted the speaker passed to the door. "You don't fare to think," she whispered in a tone of deep anxiety, having evidently misread his expression, "them murders is likely to come to an end; I don't know what he would . . ." "Oh no, there is no cause for alarm on that score," came the quick reply. "Good-night." I hope this little story will reassure the timid ones!

Give Your Friends a Treat.

If ever a rare bird comes into the market, you should always advise one of your friends to buy it; much on the same principle that all wise men are bankers, because it is easier to play with other people's money than with your own. Failing a victim, there is only one other course open, you must sacrifice yourself on the altar of avicultural duty. I had to adopt the latter course, when some years ago I was offered some Black Bulbuls.

The Black Bulbuls would have been in perfect sympathy with the Irishman who was fined £5 in some English town by an unsympathetic Sassenach bench, and who exclaimed on hearing the sentence, "Begorra, but wait till I get yez in Limerick where fighting is cheap"; I will back him for his fighting weight for any long odds against any bird I know, bar a Shamah or a Dhyal.

I am afraid that is the present case. I can't ask you to bind round both your arms this phylactery from the mantelshelf of an aged artist. "I have had a great deal of trouble in my life, and most of it—never happened." On the contrary I have had a lot of trouble in my avicultural experiences, and most of it has come off.

Of the iniquities of these Bulbuls I could write currente calamo, but I dare not do it, for I feel like the fat old gentleman in India, who remained in the plains because he was sensible that in the hills he might roll and go on rolling until he rolled out of the world altogether. I have so much material that I dare not cut the wire which holds the bale together. One or two straws, however, may be pulled out without disturbing the heap.

Which Were the Culprits?

One morning I found a very rare African Sparrow, whose name I could never discover, dead on the floor; a morning or two after a little Bibfinch hen scrambled across the floor with a broken wing. I wondered at first what had caused the damage. The Black Bulbuls were the biggest occupants of the aviary, and next to them came a pair of African Song Sparrows. I wondered which were the culprits. I found out quite by accident. I caught the Song Sparrows and put them into an outdoor aviary. Then I netted the Bulbuls. When I took hold of the first one, I had seldom received a more hearty grip of the beak than he gave me, and I said to myself: Now I can understand how the Bibfinch felt when you got hold of her wing. I promptly caged the pair of sinners and subsequently placed them in a big outdoor aviary by themselves.

I don't think the cock ever thought much of his better half. I fancy he would have fully sympathised with the clergyman who introduced his wife to the Bishop thusly: "A poor thing, my lord, but mine own!" At any rate there never seemed that perfect confidence between them which one feels ought to exist between husband and wife.

I fancy the unpleasantness arose over food. Bulbuls are inordinately fond of mealworms, and of course the supply is always more or less limited, and it comes to which can gobble them up quickest. I am bound to say the hen seemed to me always to "have it," hence the strained relations between the pair. It always reminded me of the teacher who was questioning the children on the story of Elisha and the she bear. "Now my dears," said the teacher, "the bear came and devoured 42 of the children who were mocking the Prophet; what lesson do you learn from this?" "It shows, teacher," came the eager answer, "what a number of little children a gert she bear can hold." I've often been reminded of that reply as I have seen the she Bulbul bolting down mealworms.

News that Soothes One.

Now there is always something peculiarly soothing in village news. This is a village. We all love to hear which man has grown the biggest lettuce, or the most alluring cabbage, which children have let the family pig into their neighbour's garden, and with what results. It is the best possible news—always supposing that the devastated garden is not our own! In the same way aviculturists like to hear of disasters to other people. What follows, therefore, will be of a cheering nature to many of my readers.

Whenever anything unpleasant happens I am generally out, or away from home, and my youngest boy, now a great big six-footer, was then only a little bit of a nipper, and he was privileged to say what other people were afraid to. Accordingly, when I come home one afternoon from visiting in the parish, he came running to meet me, and with beaming face informed me that the hen Bulbul was no more, not in as many spoken words, but by the dramatic action of putting the corpse into my hands. I suppose it was the best way; it was certainly the shortest; but still, isn't there a diplomatic way of doing such things?

"It is so Sudden."

When Sir John Gorst's Bill was doomed, the question arose at the Education headquarters as to who should break the news to the unfortunate father of the said Bill. Obviously the Duke of Devonshire's character, advantage, experience and rank, pointed him out as the proper person. So much bonhommie, etc. The Duke acceding with reluctance, strode straight, I am informed, to Sir John's room—and opening the door, jerked out, "Gorst, your d——d Bill's dead," and closing the door, departed. It is the kindest way of doing things, all the same; but as the young lady said when her lover proposed to her—"It is so sudden!"

It was a bit of a set-back; but I cheered myself by the reflection that I could probably replace my lost one, as I knew that there had been a fairly large importation of Black Bulbuls a short time before. Accordingly, I wrote off to London, making my wants known, and in about a week I had a very fair imitation of the dear departed. In fact, by the way the cock behaved, I believe he thought that the deceased had come back in bodily form. At any rate, he behaved as if he thought so; if fighting proved it. I never saw two birds fight like it. It reminded me of the Suffolk labourer, off work, at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, accosting a friend by the wayside, digging. "Oh, they're fighting be they?" pausing from his work. "Oh, yes; they're fighting like Billyo." "Are they, though?" "Well," after patiently scanning the horizon and resuming his work: "They've got a nice day for it, anyhow."

The Lady far from Blameless.

I believe the hen was quite as bad, mind you, as the cock, and the way she chased him about after a time, reminded me of the school teacher who asked her class who came after King Solomon, meaning who succeeded him, but received the very unexpected reply: "Please m'm, the Queen of Sheba!" After some days of fierce pursuit, she fairly wore him out, and I had to decently bury him. I felt very sad, but I reminded myself of the words of a minor poet:—

"Bear to be beaten, soothe the pain,
Remembering 'tis thy brother's gain.
A fool can know success is sweet;
It takes a man to hail defeat.
Lose well, and losing, win a prize
Beyond all worlds—like sunset skies."

It sounded pretty, and I was soothed.

What Black Bulbuls Are Like.

I may as well tell you what these Black Bulbuls are like. I think black is a misnomer. Did you ever hear the story of the two young ladies who were discussing the colour of the Devil, one maintaining that he was black, and the other something a little lighter. At length one of them closed the conversation, which was being a bit heated, with this crushing rejoinder: "I think, some day, dear, you will find I am right."

The head, nape and back of the neck, the chin, throat and breast are black; the breast beautifully laced with snowy white like a Birchen bantam; the ears rich glossy brown; wings blackish brown; shoulders laced with silvery white; vent, rich crimson; bill and legs black, iris brown.

In the way of food, they require the ordinary soft mixture, plenty of ripe fruit; sleepy pears and bananas are as good as anything; and plenty of mealworms, black clocks and maggots. They are very active birds and want plenty of room for exercise.

I quite think that, given a friendly pair, you might look for a nest; but I have found them very quarrelsome, and exceedingly spiteful to anything older than themselves. My experience is the same as that of Mr. Reginald Phillips, who speaks of them as far more savage than Weavers.

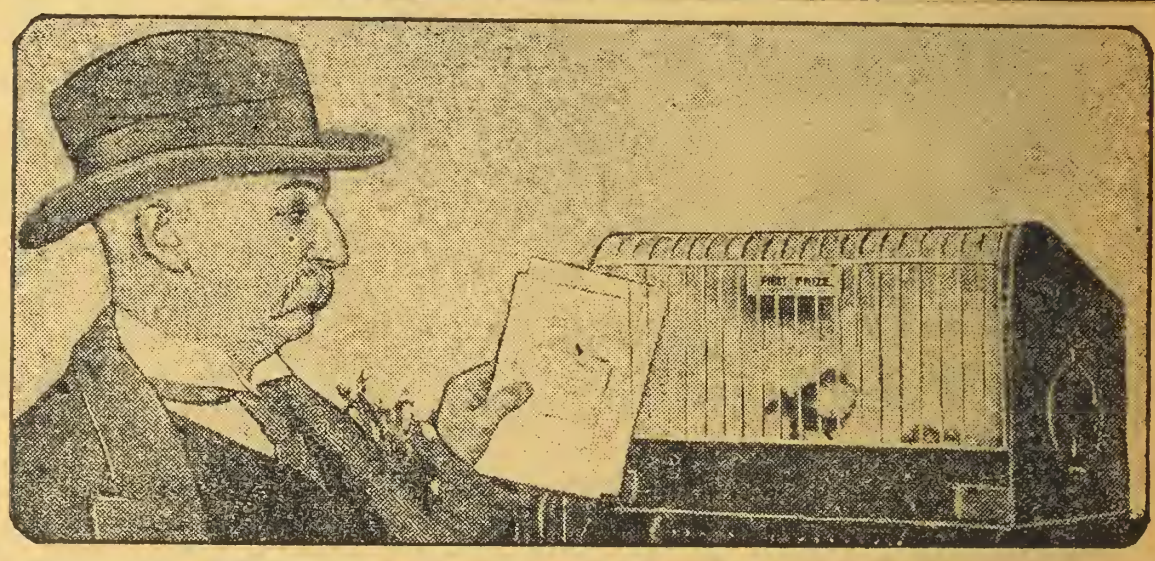
One frosty morning I went out and found my second female dead on the floor, and this quite cooled my ardour for the time; I thought of an old man I once heard of, who was going to get married, but the future wife died suddenly. He took the blow with philosophic calm, telling the Vicar, "I've been spared the marrying expenses, and that's summat. The Lord moves in a mysterious way!"

It is many years now since I have heard tell of the Black Bulbul. Still some day there will come another importation—these things come in cycles; and then somebody else will be able to have a turn, and to verify my statements.

And now I will draw to a close, or else you may say to me what the little school-girl said to her Sunday school teacher. "Why, dear, was the Eunuch glad when Philip went away?" "Becos he had gi'en over teachin' on him, miss!"

Goldfinches in New Zealand.

The sprightly Goldie was some years ago added to the birds of New Zealand, and the numbers have now increased so much that the birds have become somewhat common. But, unlike other ventures in acclimatising birds of other lands, they have not been a nuisance, nor caused damage to valuable crops. It is maybe within the bounds of probability that in the near future some of the surplus stock will be sent to the London bird markets.



A NEW-COMER TO OUR BRITISH BIRD CLASSES.

A photograph of the Dipper which won First Prize at the last Crystal Palace Show, and Mr. W. Swaysland, the Judge. This, we believe, is the first time the Dipper has been exhibited; it naturally attracted considerable attention. It was shown by Miss G. Fishburn, of Silsden.

Some Truths About the Scotch Fancy Canary.

By Thomas Smith (Glasgow).

AN erroneous notion has been circulated, chiefly by those who have not studied the matter sufficiently, that the Scotch Fancy Canary has "decayed." It may not be so plentiful as it was long ago, but its existence is as sure as ever. That they have not been so much in evidence at the shows as they once were may be due to breeders considering the small prize money offered (first 14s. or 15s.) not worth the trouble of entering the birds for.

The Scotch Fancy is a bird of position, and therefore has an attractiveness which can scarcely be claimed by any other member of the feathered tribe. He is graceful, and requires no training for exhibition; a first-class bird is by nature ready for showing almost as soon as it can stand on the perch—the cage has only to be lifted up, and there is the bird in position ready to compete with any opponent.

The bogey of long prices has disappeared, for this only served to make surplus stock a drag in the market. Some of your readers may inquire what a moderate figure is. This I put down at about four pounds per pair, which is within the reach of the average householder, and should encourage those who are thinking of taking up the hobby to go in for Scotch Fancies. They are as easily bred as any other birds, while give them a chance, and they will feed their young as well, too. The hen can best be kept right by allowing her to hatch and rear her own chicks. She is simply spoiled through laying clutch after clutch of eggs and getting "laid out" before she is little more than a year old. Breeders have been known to put up a few pairs of Scotch Fancy Canaries, load themselves with any amount of foster parents, and set themselves deliberately to get as many eggs as they can from the Scotch Fancies. Result: Not infrequently the hens are "laid out" by the middle of the season, or just when well regulated pairs are doing their best.

The Scotch Fancy Canary is a grand reproducer, and once a strain breeds winners it may go on repeating its successes for years, and maintaining the reputation of the breeder. Breeding operations have now started, though in the writer's opinion it is too early. However, that is a matter of debate. He has found the months of May, June and July far and away the most suitable period of the year for successful hatching and rearing. The young grow rapidly, and pass through the moult quickly.

Open show executives could do much more to develop the Scotch Fancy. Its breeders are men of grit and backbone, and once they take up the breeding they stick to the hobby and do not throw it aside lightly. There is good reason why the shows should endeavour to foster a deeper interest in the King of Canaries, "the Scotch Fancy," for they would get plenty of support if they worked on the right lines.

Correspondence.

The Future of the Cinnamon Canary.

Sir,—I notice that Mr. Wones praises the novice Cinnamons at the late Palace Show as the finest lot he had seen. I would appeal to the novices in this variety to become members of the Cinnamon Canary Club, as this year we are endeavouring to get novice classes on at all our patronage shows; but if the shows continue to be only supported by champions, then the variety will not be catered for as it should be. I should be pleased to receive any suggestion from fanciers of the Cinnamon whether he be a member or not. It has been mooted that we put amateur classes on, but we must have more members if this is to be done, so that we can guarantee to the show committees the classes will pay. I should be pleased to enrol new members for this year on receipt of 2s. 6d.; also I must ask members who have not paid their subs. to do so at once, as I wish to get balance sheet out. Now, Cinnamon fanciers, let us hear your views, for the betterment of your favourites.

J. W. Metcalfe, hon. sec.

Roller Canaries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—Mr. J. W. Norris, in your issue of March 2, has made an impertinent statement, viz., that my letter to him of Feb. 17 was "bluff"—a statement he is not prepared to prove. Mr. Norris also states that "Dr. Read was asked to resign on account of his general conduct as regards the whole affair of the Palace Show." I know you, with your usual courtesy, will allow the privilege of reply. On moving to London in March, 1911, I wrote a London firm of wholesale druggists to ask their representative to call on me, and in due course Mr. J. W. Ramsden called. This was my first introduction to him. On Dec. 10, 1911, Mr. Ramsden called on me for a drug order, and after business was over, informed me that the L. aud P.O. Society intended to have Roller classes at the Crystal Palace Show, and that he was going to ask the B.R.C.C. to give its patronage. I told him I was very glad to hear this news, and that the general meeting of the B.R.C.C. was held that same evening at 8 p.m., and Mr. Ramsden said he would send an express paid letter to the club meeting place with an invitation; but, as time pressed, he would take it as a great favour if I supplemented his letter and assured the members that everything that could be done should be done for the comfort and benefit of the Rollers. It gave me pleasure to do as Mr. Ramsden requested, but I am sorry to say my efforts were unavailing. On reaching home that night I wrote an advertisement, which appeared in Dec., 1911, stating I expected, amongst other places, future wins at the Crystal Palace. I also soon after wrote the hon. sec. of the P.R.C.C., of which club I am a member (the B.R.C.C. having refused patronage) asking them to give their patronage. When Mr. Norris' "open letter" appeared I forwarded it to Mr. Ramsden, and also shortly after the B.R.C.C. balance sheet, and, despite all, entered birds in two classes at the Palace. My general conduct has been perfectly open, and was based on my belief in Mr. Ramsden's word, and I conscientiously believe I have acted throughout in the best interests of the Roller fraternity.

Giving Medicine to Birds.

A Fountain Pen Filler Recommended.

Sir,—In many cases a difficulty is experienced in giving birds medicine, but the following way will be found perfectly simple and easy. First obtain a fountain pen filler and draw up into it the amount of medicine required. The bird should then be held firmly in the left hand, and with a little manœuvring the end of the filler can be inserted in the bird's mouth, when the bulb should be gently squeezed. It is essential to see that the end of the syringe is not broken, otherwise a cut mouth may result.

Whitby Fanciers "Get a Move On."

Sir,—Whitby fanciers are making a move to bring themselves once more to the front ranks of the Fancy. In the early days the ancient town of Whitby was known to a good many of us, and many are the special prizes which have been won there, all good and useful. At the Agricultural Show to be held Thursday, Aug. 15, classes will be provided for live stock open to all. Wednesday, Nov. 27, is the date fixed for the fanciers' annual show, with open classes for cage birds, etc. It is hoped cage bird fanciers will book this fixture and help those who have proved themselves amongst the best for giving care and attention to all stock entrusted to their care. The secretary is always well backed up on every occasion.

CANARY KEEPING AND THE SPREAD OF DISEASE.

An Old and Exploded Story.

Sir,—May I be permitted the courtesy of your columns to draw attention to what I regard as an unwarranted attempt to throw odium upon bird-keepers and their splendid hobby. Although the R.S.P.C.A. is doubtless doing noble work in many directions, I take strong exception to the paragraph in their January magazine, headed "Caged Birds and Disease." It leads off: "There is little to be said in favour of keeping birds of any kind in cages," and then pleads that the least that can be done is to ensure absolute cleanliness, and declares that medical evidence labels birds as carriers of tuberculosis! I remember once reading something about a "monkey's reception" in this precious journal, and only a day or two ago I was reading in the "Penny Mag." the note by a well-known music-hall celebrity that performing monkeys' turns were dreaded by fellow-artistes, as the animals kept in dressing rooms "nearly always died of consumption." The "chirpy" report goes on to mention that one Dr. Wise (of Montreux) demonstrated some years ago that Parrots were not only consumption carriers, but in addition (I presume in their spare time) they contracted psittacosè, which, transmitted to man, produced fatal pneumonia. It boldly states that in 1892 fifty such cases were noted in Paris, and since then other but milder (cheer up, bird keepers!) epidemics have been observed. I wonder if "The Animal World" sees any connection between the increase of bird-keeping by our friends over the Channel and the recent disastrous rise in the River Seine? The paragraph also states that "frequently tuberculous infection is traced to caged birds." By whom? Qualified practitioners or those to whom "the wish is father to the thought"? But the report brings news to many fanciers, for it says "ordinarily there is a high death rate among birds living in cages, especially when there are many together." Woe is me, for I never have less than twenty birds (and foreign at that), and my losses for the past two and a half years have been three only—a Bronzewing Mannikin (heat apoplexy last summer), and two Waxbills which died in moult. Why do they die? Again "The Animal World" sage obliges, for he says: "Tuberculosis spreads among them. The ailing birds propagate the bacilli, and become a source of infection for the occupants of the house.' And not only that, Mr. Editor, but the house next door, and the whole town is in danger of infection from the selfish whim, or fiend of a bird-harbourer! My birds (and I am thankful to be able to include myself) seem to be far healthier than we appear to deserve to be! The report concludes: "When it is considered that of Canaries alone some 400,000 are sold annually in England, it will be seen that we need to keep a careful watch on the health of our feathered pets, and in this way help to protect our own." Are we, then, to infer that the great cleanliness exercised by all true fanciers is merely actuated by a craven fear of the numerous ills his pets will bring him? In the same issue is a note "regretting" the death of a stray cat which a shoeblack had befriended. I hasten to add my sincere sympathy. But does it not seem somewhat hypercritical on the part of the journal when it recollects that the cat has been proved by medical experts (English) to be a frequent carrier of diphtheria? Away, then, with cats and birds; also horned cattle, for anthrax has recently claimed victims; clear out all our good canine pals (hydrophobia); and, lest we catch glanders, let all horses "stop a bullet." Sir, I submit that if we had better housing, better conditions of work and living, adequate food, more bird-keepers, and fewer cranks, we should have much less consumption than if we killed every pet in the land.

Bernard C. Briars.

[The matters referred to by Mr. Briars were dealt with by Mr. Fulljames in his Cage Birds League columns of our issues dated Aug. 19, 1911, and Jan. 6, 1912. Dr. Wise's is an old and exploded story. Mr. Fulljames pointed out that Dr. R. H. Clarke, M.R.C.S., a pathologist of considerable eminence in his profession, and an enquirer into the diseases of birds, had stated: "Tuberculosis in cage birds is a very rare disease. I have examined microscopically hundreds of dead birds, and have never yet met with a case . . . nor known of one demonstrated by any competent observer." We believe that in the case of small birds (such as Canaries) not one single instance of true tuberculosis has ever been demonstrated. These facts were brought direct to the knowledge of the Editor of the R.S.P.C.A. magazine, but were completely ignored. It would seem that it matters naught what untruthful trash is put before its readers in the effort to bring funds into the society's coffers. A truly elevating and creditable policy!—Editor, Cage Birds.]

"CAGE BIRDS" CONTINENTAL EDITION.

"Le Monde Avicole," printed in French; circulating throughout France, Holland, Belgium, and other Countries of Europe.

¶ The present month sees the inauguration of "Le Monde Avicole," a monthly magazine, the sole and definite aim of which is to give the hobby of bird-keeping, already popular in Europe, as great a hold on the affections of the people there, as it has on those of the United Kingdom and our Overseas Dominions.

¶ Advance orders for "Le Monde Avicole," assure for it a great future, and there is every prospect of its becoming as famous throughout Europe as is its parent paper, "Cage Birds," wherever the English language is spoken.

¶ "Le Monde Avicole" is printed in French, and will therefore have a force of appeal, such as has never before been exerted by any bird-lovers' paper, to hundreds of thousands of people.

A Plain Question to Progressive Advertisers.

Bearing in mind the fact that you can supply the wants of bird-lovers in a better way than anyone on the Continent, of what use to you is an announcement in "Le Monde Avicole," couched in French, that will go right home, presenting your birds, your foods, your appliances in such a form to readers as will tempt them to give you a trial?

There is only one answer—It will be of inestimable value to all who wish to deal with Continental Orders.

The Clashing of Show Dates in Ireland.

Sir,—With reference to above, might I point out that the Y.C.B.S. of Ireland, I daresay, will take Nov. 1 and 2 (same as last year), and I would respectfully suggest Dundalk take Nov. 13 and 14, and so give fanciers in the North a chance to show who may be members of the Belfast N.C. aud Y.C.C. Their annual show is Nov. 16, and unless Dundalk hold their show on the 13th aud 14th northern fanciers will not support them with young birds that are to be shown on the 16th. At least one fancier learned a lesson last show season for after entering his birds on condition they were to be returned on the night the show closed (to be exhibited the next day), they were not returned until the following day. South Co. Dublin are takiug Nov. 28 and 29, so I think Holywood C.B.S. (Co. Down) would be justified in holding their show on Nov. 22 and 23, Lurgan on Dec. 20 and 21, and Newtownards (Co. Down) Dec. 27 and 28, and Bangor (Co. Down) Jan. 3 and 4, 1913.

The Greater (Oxeye) Tit and Its Food.

An Attempt to Breed the Species in a Cage.

Sir,—As one who has been a great lover of these birds, having successfully kept them for years, may I be allowed a few words in praise of one of the most beautifully marked of our British birds? As a show bird it is I think a picture when in good feather and condition, and quite steady. I am quite aware that you cannot steady some of them, and you may have dozens before you get good birds, but with patience and care, and with the expenditure of plenty of time and a little trouble, it can be accomplished; such at any rate has been my experience. In the first place you will say where do you get them from? They would, I admit, be rather difficult to get in towns, especially a lot to choose from. But those living in the country could do so. One season about eight years ago I took over 50 in a trap-cage. After selecting two or three good ones I released the rest. The birds I chose were fine large ones. I placed them in roomy single cages, and hung them out of doors, giving them a good large bath (they are fond of water), large pieces of suet in the cage bars to peck at, also grated cheese with plenty of hemp seed. These four things they greatly relished and did well on. I also gave them a good soft food, with spiders, flies, beetles, etc. Mealworms I gave with my fingers, which soon caused them to become steady. After a little patience they will soon come to the bars of the cage and take a mealworm from your fingers and pull it to pieces. My first experience with these birds, some thirty years ago, was to keep several together in a large cage. I soon found out that they would not agree, and wanted to kill one another; they would quarrel over the tit-bits of food. I also tried to breed with a pair of these birds in a large cage. I made a nest-box of a cigar box, and made the nests with moss, feathers, etc. The hen would go in with materials and appear to build, but I never got any eggs, so I gave up the attempt to breed them in cages. They would do so alright, I feel sure, in an aviary, given suitable food, etc.; but they could not be safely trusted with other birds. As a show bird it should, I think, be more kept than is the case now, for a good specimen is an acquisition to any British bird room.

Life in the Aviary.

Sir,—I was pleased and surprised to see the photo of one of my aviaries last week in our favourite paper, Cage Birds. This aviary is 16ft. long, 8ft. wide, and 8ft. high at front and 6ft. back, making the roof slope to the back; the flight is 10ft., with a sliding roof; and the sleeping compartment 6ft. The seed hoppers I keep in the sleeping compartment, and water, wild seeds, and soft-bill food in the open flight, thus teaching the birds the run of the sleeping compartment. I have noticed from time to time a lot of criticism of our handsome feathered pet, the Bramblefinch. I can say I have had over 200 of these birds in my possession, and have never had a "night howler" or "sleep disturber," as this bird is called. I have six now in this aviary, along with Goldies, Chaffinch, Greenies, Siskin, Redpoll, Twite, Linnets, Hedge Sparrows, and all the Tits, Bullfinches, Snow, Corn, Reed, and Yellow Buntings. Yellow Buntings are the most timid birds we have. I put water in the flight at about 10 p.m. every evening, and release the shutter at 5 a.m. to allow the birds to come out in the flight; and I can honestly say none of the Brambles move. It seems a shame to give these handsome birds such a bad name. This aviary was also the home of my White-winged Robin with amber bill and my Green Hedge Sparrow. The Robin has since gone to a dear friend, Mr. Halgh, of Leeds, a very keen fancier. I am pleased to say I made his acquaintance through your valuable paper, which I wish every success.

Linnet Singing at Pontefract.

Sir,—I should like to see the secretary of the Pontefract and District Linnet Club give a correct account of their weekly singing. I for one am very interested in Linnet singing, and do not like to get my Cage Birds and read things that are not accurate. Last week this secretary gives us a list of names and the times done, and the latter are incorrect. The winner did not do half the time. He told one of those present that it might get a lot of people to go to hear the birds. Even then they will only come away disappointed; and, again, what about the new members? They will say it is no use me going, for my birds cannot do 80 or 90. So I think the best way would be for a correct account to be printed.

A Remarkable Homing Goldfinch

Stays Out All Night!

Sir,—I have a Goldfinch which is very tame and used to flying about the house. One day just before last Christmas the door was left open, and I was very much upset to see my pet fly away "in the clouds," and never expected to see him again. I have another Goldfinch, and this was hanging outside. Fancy my surprise when going to fetch it in at night to see my old bird sitting on the fence! I put his cage out, and he flew straight into it. Since then I have let him out quite thirty times. He has stayed away for two single nights, returning in the morning for a feed. He generally stays away all day, returning late in the afternoon, when he will fly through the open window into his cage. I might say this was a fresh-caught bird when I had it eighteen months ago. My friends and I have watched it fly over to Norton Common, which is quite close to where I am living.

Birds of My Early Days.

Sir,—I was born a fancier. A least, I always think so. My early home was situated in the midst of a twenty-acre meadow, where the joyous songs of the birds were ever ringing in the ears, where the rippling of the streams hard by now and again scintillating in the summer sunshine was to be seen, where the lowing of the cattle and the bleating of the woolbearers constituted a "harmonious pandemonium." My first recollections of thiugs birdy was of a Robin which came in through the window and persisted in making a nest in the larder. I was then only three. Of course, such outrageous conduct could not be tolerated. My childish pleadings on the Robin's behalf doubtless saved it from (as far as the nest was concerned) a violent extermination. But there it remained until my domestic pets were augmented in number by a kitten, which, although small, would evince a keen desire of a more personal knowledge of ornithology by licking its lips and showing an unmistakable regard for the Robins. They also, doubtless, thought that actions spoke louder than words, and decided to rest elsewhere. Once I caught a young Sparrow and decided to rear it. I had no cage, and protection being necessary I overcame that difficulty. Being interrogated as to what had become of my bird I reluctantly had to disclose its whereabouts. Imagine my parents' consternation when they discovered the bird in my father's best Sunday "tile," surmounted by a copy of Shakespeare as a lid! But alas! my feline friend, which had been scouting from somewhere, apparently took a fancy to it, from a utilitarian standpoint. Nevertheless, as I enlarged in physical proportions so did my zoological collection. My parents looked on with no small alarm and trepidation at my rapidly increasing impedimenta No harmonious cantata was ever sweeter to me than the chorus of my birds on a summer morning, each straining his larynx to arouse me to provide an earlier meal. "Bon jour,' I chuckled through the keyhole, and so uncontrollable were my feelings of delight that I often indulged in a little fandango on the floor, and virtually shook hands with the door knob on seeing so many of the survivals of the fittest. In one corner was a big fat Hawk that winked his eye. Then there was a lusty Thrush that almost swallowed my finger to his tail end; then a sombre coloured Starling that raised his wings and shook his whole corporation in producing churlish sounds that plainly indicated his dissatisfaction at the commissariat; and another, a cheeky Jackdaw, that helped himself to all and sundry—kept the Sabbath and everything else he could lay hold of.

Special No. 4 at Launceston Show.

Sir,—In answer to Messrs. Rosser and Son's letter of last week, I quite understand they won special for best bird in show, but not for best entered before Nov. 21. All birds entered after the above date do not compete for this special (No. 4). The entries were extended until Nov. 25 first post. The special I asked Messrs. Rosser and Son about was for the best entered before Nov. 21, and not for best in show.

T. H. Boundy.

P.S.—I am sending you schedule of Launceston Show, in which you will see two specials offered—one for best in show, the other for best entered before Nov. 21. Kindly see who is right.

[We have examined the schedule sent, but find there is only one 10s. special offered, viz., for best bird entered before Nov. 21. At the same time there is some excuse for Mr. Boundy's error, as this special (No. 4) is repeated in the list of special prizes as No. 39, which reads: "10s. cash (see Special No. 4)." But no mention of No. 39 is made in the section devoted to the cage bird classification.—Editor.]

How Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids are Bred.

The Career of a Six-year-old Hen Bullfinch.

Sir,—In my aviary I bred three Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids from a Buff Yorkshire cock Canary and a hen Bullfinch. Their food consisted of two parts Canary seed and one each of hemp and rape; also young shoots from hawthorn bushes. About the beginning of May the hen Bullfinch started to build her nest of small twigs and horse-hair and cocoa-matting. She laid a clutch of eggs, sitting the full time out. One egg, being fertile, was put under a hen Canary, which forsook the youngster after three days. The hen Bullie went to nest again, building a nice nest and laying a clutch of four eggs, which were left to her to incubate. In thirteen days two young Hybrids were hatched. The hen Bullfinch and her mate reared them successfully on mixed seed and egg food and green fly, and they turned out to be two strong young cock birds, winning a good many prizes on the show bench. The same hen Bullfinch was paired to a large yellow Norwich cock the following season. She built about six nests and laid, but all the eggs proved unfertile. Two Canary eggs were put under the hen Bullfinch; she hatched and reared one nice cock bird. Last season she was paired to a cock Linnet, laying and building as usual, and having one fertile egg, which failed to hatch. She has got through the moult, and is still a lively bird, this being her sixth year. I think this must be a record for a hen Bullfinch.

Alleged Unfair Treatment at Wellington (Salop) Show.

The Crested Canary Club and Its Closed Ring Scheme.

Sir,—Several members have intimated their intention of at once adopting the closed ring, without the question being definitely settled by a vote of the full membership. I have already been requested to forward 500 to various applicants. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in procuring a close enamel ring, but I am expecting samples in a few days, and in the meantime shall be glad to know if any other breeders of the variety would care to order any, in which case I shall be obliged if he will notify me of the quantity required. I also hope to have the year and number printed on each ring. If these efforts prove unsatisfactory, the present applicants desire me to forward the ordinary aluminium rings. I purpose keeping a record of all rings distributed for future reference. One specimen of the new and up-to-date show cage is just to hand, and I am awaiting others for comparison.

Amongst the Wild Birds of Canada.

The Interesting Experiences of a Fancier "Out West."

Sir,—Canada, with the vast expanse of territory extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in the South to the United States, in the North to the solitude and silence of "the great lone land," and the arctic ocean, has many visitors of the bird world. We have all heard of the Canadian wild goose, "the prairie chicken," and the wild ducks. Many of the waterfowl are only seen (in any numbers) in certain seasons of the year. Away in the frozen North there grows a small shrub with berries. Now, when these become ripe the birds have a grand harvest. They eat their fill till the heavy snow and frost come; the berries lie hidden under tons of this white mantle of snow. But these visitors, like most of the bird world, have the natural instinct "to clear out" on the first signs of snow; therefore, in the fall of the year—the autumn—they are seen passing over Canada in great numbers—thousands of wild ducks, Canadian geese, and other large waterfowl. These afford grand sport to the Canadian sportsman, and also a welcome change to the bill of fare of the Canadian farmer, as they are easily shot in the rivers, and marshes. Now in the spring the natural instinct of these birds tells them of the happy time in store for them in the far North, and again they take wing and leave their eastern and southern homes. On arriving at their destination they find tons upon tons of the lucious berries in grand condition waiting for them. The berries have been kept in sound condition by the frost; they have practically been in a cold storage for the winter, and as the sun gains power and the snow melts, the berries are laid bare—a welcome repast for the winged travellers. But it is not the wild goose or the large birds that I propose to write about, but about the smaller songsters that I have met with in Canada. Now the long Canadian summer is a thing of delight. The air is warm and dry, the days are long, and sunshine reigns supreme. "Old Sol" gets his rights here, and is not "under a cloud." In the spring time thousands of birds arrive from the Southern States and further South right back from South America. The Canary is here in all his grandeur in a wild state. No; not the miserable little green bird we hear about in penny bird books, but the gentleman in "black and gold," of the purest yellow, and having a sheen like burnished silver. His markings are black on each wing, and he has a couple of black tail feathers and sometimes a cap on the head like a Siskin's. I have never observed a pure self yellow amongst the flocks I have seen. I have only seen the green and marked specimens as stated. You will generally see them on thistles picking at the thistle heads. If you hang a tame Canary outside you will often see the wild ones alight on the cage. They breed in Canada. They are generally fairly late breeders. The young, in their nest feather, are of a dirty green colour. When I lived near Toronto some years ago, a pair of Canaries built their nest in a very tall cherry tree in our orchard. The nest was built in the top branches, so that it was impossible for anyone to see the colour of the eggs, but I managed to secure one of the young ones. This turned out to be a hen, and it moulted out a washy green. I mated it to a cock Canary (a German Roller) I had, but he paid her little attention (he was an old bird), and the eggs were unfertile. But they were exactly similar to those laid by a tame Canary. Some years later I caught a young cock as he came to make love to my hen. I put them in a breeding cage and reared two young ones. The cock was a bright yellow in colour when I caught him, but he moulted a patchy green. Other fanciers I spoke to had the same, or almost the same, results as regards the moulting. In a few instances the black markings became brown, and the yellow became less brilliant, more of a buff. These birds are much the same as small Norwich Plainheads. I have seen thousands of them on my way from Montreal to Regina; and in every instance I heard of they lost their brilliant colour after being house-moulted. They are true Canaries, and readily take to cage life. And if put in with tame Canaries they seem quite at home; but if kept in a small cage by themselves they are very wild for the first month or so. The call note of these birds is similar to that of the tame Canary, but is pitched in a higher key. They are good singers, and the song is much the same as that of our untrained tame Canary. I saw an old man in Winnipeg streets with a cageful of these birds, and he was selling them like "hot cakes" at 50 cents each. Not a big price (2s. 1d.) eh? I have also seen great numbers of Redpolls in Manitoba. They are known as Mountain Linnets, as they are seen generally about September in the greatest numbers; I fancy they are then making their way south before the winter begins. I could detect no difference between them and our British Redpoll, except that they were possibly a trifle larger and a little more brilliantly "painted" on their heads. I have never seen a Lark or a Linnet in Canada. I have seen a bird in the North-west territories that might well be called the "Canadian Lark." He is a big, bold fellow, about the size of the English Skylark. The cock has a crest or tuft of feathers on the head, splashed with red; the body is brown, marked very similarly to the Skylark's. This species build their nests on the ground. They are insectivorous. The eggs are much the same, and when I come to think the crest may be caused simply by raising the feathers on the head—in the same fashion as the Skylark does. The cock is a good singer, but "cannot hold the candle" to our English Skylark. These birds make their homes on the prairies of Western Canada. There are many birds on the prairies, and it is said that the Indians can tell the time by the song of the birds, as each bird sings mostly at certain times of the day. The most of the birds of the prairies have wild, plaintive, but sweet voices. They have none of the roundish fulness of our own sweet singer, the Linnet, nor the magnificent abandon and glorious fulness of our English Skylark as he soars in the sky, the champion of all champions. I will, with your permission, conclude my notes on another occasion.

To Make Nest Pans Steady.

Sent by Mr. J. Kershaw, Watling Stree Llanwrst, N. Wales.

I am sending you a sketch of an idea which I think simple but effective. Most fanciers are troubled about fixing the nest-pan perfectly steady, as the wire holder round them is not secure enough, and they tremble on the least touch, which may affect the eggs. The remedy is simple. By placing a perch from centre bar of front, with the nest pan resting on it, between two nails (tin tacks will do) the nest pan becomes quite firm and steady.—J. Kershaw.

Seed Box and Seed Saver Combined.

Sent by Mr. A. A. Kirkland, 8, Sandyford Place, Glasgow.

I am sending you an idea for a seed box and seed saver combined. The sketch shows how an ordinary "Lemco" jar may prove useful in the aviary. "C" represents the cork of the jar, bored to admit the bird's head. As the cork overlaps, it thus prevents waste of the seed, as the bird must draw out its head with each seed it picks up, and the seed cannot very well be knocked out.—Alex. A. Kirkland.

Concerning Natural Selection.

Some time ago a writer in the "Times of India" had an article on natural selection, and mentioning the researches of Darwin and Wallace, said that the theory of natural selection was accepted without sufficient opposition, which would have caused thinking men to look deeper into the subject. He said: "The shape and colour of birds are attributed to natural selection, and should we fail to follow the reasoning we are told it is because we are not sufficiently acquainted with the habits of the particular creature, which he considered was not a scientific argument.

*Four Little Redbreasts.

Four Robin Redbreasts sat upon a tree,
The mother sat beside her home,
The cock sang merrily.
Then father said, "My little dears, it's time you learnt to fly."
And all the little young ones said "I'll try, I'll try, I'll try."

Sent by Edith Chambers (aged 8), 22, St. Ann's Mt., Burley Hill, Leeds.

A Sparrow in Church.

A curious thing occurred during a severe winter in a church in Cumberland, when everybody was astonished to see a lady walk up the aisle, while a Sparrow fluttered near her hat. It appears that some artificial berries on her hat had attracted it. Nothing would induce it to leave the church. The lady at last walked out, the Sparrow following, and succeeded in sending it away.—Taken from the "Christian Herald," and sent by M. Evans (aged 15), Norwood Private School, 44, Lewis Road, Neath, Glam.

*Quite a Policeman.

An intelligent Siskin is kept in an aviary with Canaries twice his size. He keeps his companions in order with a firm hand (according to a weekly paper), and is shown respect. He refuses to have his bath first, always waiting till the Canaries have emptied it sufficiently to make it shallow enough for his comfort. He is very tame, but quite a policeman of the aviary.—Sent by H. Vinnicombe, jun., Leas Hotel, Folkestone.

The cage bird section held their initial table show and washing exhibition on Mar. 2nd, at Moore's Cafe, Dale Road. The room proved an ideal one for the venture; being so well lighted, it gives the 'birdies" a golden opportunity of displaying their beauty. The attendance exceeded expectations—surely an encouraging start. Entries numbered 41, and, as remarked by a member, "there was some likely stuff." The management was in the hands of Messrs. T. Boden, C. W. Lill, J. S. Cooper, T. Twigg, J. Else, R. Wragg, A. H. Slater, T. Allwood, and W. J. Dean, and right loyally they worked to bring the event to a successful issue. Judges, Messrs. Fox and Flint, of the Tideswell C.B.I.S.—two genial gentlemen who journeyed some 34 miles to render first aid to their fellow fanciers at Matlock. Their decisions were well received, and the way they handled the birds in the washing exhibition was a credit to them, and an education to all present. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded them.

I must congratulate you and your staff on the way in which Cage Birds Birthday Number was so well got up. I think it was the finest number that has been issued yet, and I have had them all from the commencement. The coloured plates are a magnificent lot, and are a credit to those who have produced them. I generally give my plates away to young fanciers, also my papers after I have read them, so that I can get them to take more to the hobby. The Cage Birds "Nutshell Series" are well worth the money they are advertised at, for the good sound information they contain. They are excellent guides for young fanciers, as well as the old.—Thos. Hy. Harrison (Warrington).

I was agreeably surprised on receiving Cage Birds of Feb.10 to find my Palace winning Linnet depicted on the front page, and more so on opening the copy to find my Hawfinch there also. I must congratulate the artist on his work, as he has caught the birds in a most natural position, and I recognised them immediately. Please accept my very best thanks for same. I also wish to thank you for telegram sent away during Crystal Palace Show, which I received at 2.30 on Friday with full results of my birds.—W. T. Burr (Chichester).

On receiving Cage Birds Annual I was very surprised and delighted to see the lovely coloured plate of the Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid I reared last summer, and write to thank you very much for the honour you have conferred on it and me. On opening the Annual I was most astonished to find such a beautiful painting of the bird. Cage Birds Annual is most valuable and useful. For one thing, it gives addresses of so many people one often wants.—(Miss) Janette Reeves (Wateringbury).

Mr. Claude St. John's article in Cage Birds Annual is a splendid one for all fanciers, as the hints, or, more properly speaking, instructions on how to deal with various troubles that crop up during the season are simply splendid. I had to learn them by actual experience, as I was unaware of the existence of your publications when I started keeping and breeding birds. I now have "Our Canaries," House's "Canary Manual," "Cage Bird Hybrids," "Canary Breeding for Beginners," the two last Annuals, and am a regular reader of Cage Birds—so you see I am well assisted now, as in case of any unexpected trouble arising, I can soon turn to advice on how to deal with the same. The Crystal Palace Show Number of Cage Birds was splendid.—E. C. Smith (Plymouth).

We were very pleased indeed to see such a beautiful drawing of our clear buff and unflighted yellow Norwich cocks on the front page of Cage Birds, and we tender our very best thanks to Mr. Norman, your artist, for such a lifelike drawing, write Messrs. Jeffries and Husband (Hartforth). The buff also secured two vhc's and one hc, and commended at the Crystal Palace; the yellow also got two vhc's, one hc, and one c at the beginning of the last show season, so we consider they have both done very well, being their first seasons out. We have a good foul Green Crested cock which got 2nd York, 2nd Darlington, 2nd Guisboro', 4th Harrogate, and 4th Carlisle. We had cut the crest off and turned him in the flight, or, by what I saw at the Palace, he would have stood a good chance in the novice class.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, EAST-FIELD SIDE C.B.S.

Meeting, table show, and tripe supper held at headquarters March 2nd, when 27 members sat down to a good supper provided by host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. Bradbury), and by the way the food did the disappearing trick it must have been enjoyed. It was decided that the Crest men play the Plainhead men at Skittles previous to next meeting. A vote of sympathy was passed to Mr. S. Hawkesley on the sad loss of his wife. The birds for the table show came up fairly well considering the breeding season is close at hand (separate report in another column). We are trying for a noted bird fancier to come and give a lecture in the near future, when the Mansfield and Dist. C.B.S. will join in.—B. Rabbitass, Press Correspondent.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa House, Foregate street, Feb. 27th, Mr. F. C. Parker presiding over a gathering of most enthusiastic fanciers. After the ordinary business, and new members made, the advisability of holding a F.F. show was thoroughly threshed out; it was decided to hold one. Members were pleasantly surprised by the announcement by Mr. T. H. Thompson that he would present the society with a cup to be competed for and won outright at this show. Further agreed, that it be awarded for most points gained by four nominated birds. Secretary then read a paper expressing his scheme further to popularise the society with a view of encouraging intending members. The main object of the idea was to provide four silver cups to be competed for and won outright at annual members' show, allotted to Yorks., Nor., A.O.V. Can., Brit. or For. bird, respectively; also to provide one to be competed for by novices. The idea was unanimously approved of, the members deciding to provide silver cups similar to those the secretary had on the table for their inspection. Secretary wishes to inform fanciers in the district that he will be most pleased to furnish them with any particulars with regard to the society.—R. N. Williams, Sec., 8, Cornwall Street.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

On Feb. 27th our lecture on the Roller Canary was given at headquarters, and, as I previously announced, we had a very capable man on the spot, as Mr. A. Foulds (of Roller fame) paid us a flying visit, and gave us a lecture in a "rough and ready manner," which I am sure interested not only Roller fanciers but fanciers of other varieties as well. Afterwards Messrs. J. Schofield and Leach gave us their ideas on the Roller Canary. We had a good attendance, no doubt to witness the contest as announced, but we could not hold same—not because we were short of birds, but because there was not time for them to be judged; had they been judged it would have been giving neither the judges nor the birds fair play. I am hoping to begin enrolling more members for this branch of our society. My best thanks go to all members of the Provincial Roller C.C. for their kind information, and also for their promise to assist us in any venture we may be making. So, Roller fanciers, rally up and get your shoulders to the wheel. Mr. Hampshire announced that at our next meeting we should be electing judge for first feather show, also fixing of date and classification.—Jas. Cope Hon. Sec.

HEMSWORTH C.B.S.

First annual tea and prize distribution held King's Head Hotel, on Feb. 28th, when 32 fanciers and friends and wives sat down to a splendid knife and fork tea. A concert had been arranged, and in the absence of the President (Thos. Tait, Esq.), Mr. A. Taylor (Vice-president) took the chair. In a brief speech he outlined the work of the Society since its formation in February last. Songs were sung by Messrs. T. Wood, J. Swift, and Rushworth. The Chairman then called on Mr. Rushworth to present the prizes to winners: J. Edmondson and Son (Bradford), W. Lee, gold medal each for equal first in the challenge cup competition; J. Hall, novice challenge cup and gold medal, also a case of carvers, and H. Ramsden, silver medal, for runner up in novice cup competition. He congratulated each winner. More songs were rendered, by Messrs. Halsall, Merritt, and Rushworth. Our President came later. Mr. Taylor moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Tait for his many acts of generosity to the society. He gave a splendid challenge cup valued at £10 10s., also a case of carvers, and other specials, besides allowing us the use of the room. Mr. Gillings seconded.—J. W. Gillings, Hon Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Annual meeting held Station Cafe, Sunderland, 28th February. Mr. T. Robson presided. The Secretary presented balance sheet for 1911, which shows a slight increase compared with the previous year. Following gentlemen elected to office: F. Ford Maling, Esq., President; F. W. Barnett, Esq., W. F. Swan, Esq., T. Robson, Esq., A. Lister, Esq., B. W. Dixon, Esq., T. C. Crawhall, Esq., and W. J. Taylor, Esq., Vice-presidents; T. Robson, Esq., Chairman; T. Taylor, Esq., Vice-chairman; Committee, Messrs. W. F. Swan, J. Farrar, J. Riseborough, R. Armstrong, R. W. Moke, T. Taylor, G. Dobson, R. S. Bewick, J. M. Macdonald, and J. W. Conlin. Following new members elected: Messrs. J. Morrison (Newcastle), E. Hugill, G. Charlton, L. Richardson (of Shildon), A. J. Smith (Erdington), and F. Ramsay (Croxdale Colliery). Resolved, that in future shows receiving patronage of this club must provide 5 classes for Crests and Crestbreds, viz: Crested ck., ditto hen; C.B. ck., ditto hen; yell. Crest, yell. C.B.; current year Crest and ditto C.B. Also decided, that we hold an open Crested Canary show at Newcastle on the 1st January, 1913, when our cups and medals will be judged for. It was suggested that we invite the other Northern specialist clubs to join us in this venture to try and make New Year's Day a little more interesting for North Country fanciers. Each club to control its own section, and the gate money to be equally divided after expenses had been paid. Correspondence for our patronage, and the arranging of a standard for the club were left over until next meeting. Members who have tickets for social will oblige by returning unsold ones to me at an early date, so as to enable me to make the necessary arrangements.—J. G. Hutchinson, Hon. Secretary.

KETTERING AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held at Headquarters, Rifle Band Club, March 4th, when several new members joined. I have been elected secretary in place of Mr. J. Roberts, and all letters should be addressed to me. After discussion of general business a table show was held, Mr. A. Underwood and W. Fairey kindly acting as judges. Chief winners—Mules: Mr. Martin. Pairs matched for Mealing: Messrs. Usher, Jervis and Lewis. Hybrid breeding: Messrs. Martin and Haddon. British: Messrs. Jervis and Lewis, Martin and Haddon.—A. Martin, Sec.

BRIGHOUSE AND DIST. C.B.S.

At our last meeting, held at Round House Inn on Feb. 29, under the presidency of Mr. A. Dearden, a pair show of Yorkshires was held; and it proved a very successful event. There was a good entry and a good turn up of friends. Mr. T. Bentley (Cleckheaton) judged, and afterwards opened the discussion, which was taken part in by practically all present. Several new members were enrolled. Principal winners: Messrs. E. Tattersall, J. Naylor, J. E. Hargreaves, A. Dearden, H. Stake.—F. Mitchell, Sec.

CREWE O.S.

An interesting gathering took place at the Angel Hotel on Feb. 27, when a number of presentations were made to members. The proceedings took the form of a smoking concert, a capital programme being sustained. Mr. P. Victor Williams presided over a good attendance, including Messrs. J. W. Lawson, F. E. Cooper, H. Latham, H. Greenwood, A. Elks, H. Taylor, J. Heaton, J. Grocott, W. Cooper, E. Smith, G. Bolshaw, W. Hughes, E. Morgan, A. West, E. Jaycott (secretary) and others. The chairman's handsome challenge cup was presented to Mr. J. W. Lawson, who was also awarded the championship medal for most points. Others to receive medals were Messrs. F. E. Cooper (runner up), S. Potts (third), Greenwood (novice champion), and E. Jaycott (second novice champion). The president warmly congratulated the recipients, and spoke of the progress the society was making. He also paid a warm compliment to the secretary. Those who contributed towards the entertainment were G. Bolshaw (tenor), E. Jaycott (bass), H. Scoffin (humorist), Wesley Hughes (tenor), J. Grocott (bass), P. Victor Williams, E. Smith (pianist), and C. Andrews (banjo). The presentation closed with a vote of thanks to the President (Mr. P. Victor Williams), one of the best and most successful exhibitors of the year.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

The Executive have now sent out the new membership tickets for 1912, numbering 564. Fanciers whose addresses we may not have known, and who will not have received a ticket, can, by application to any of the under noted, secure a copy per return. We invite exhibitors to make a careful perusal of the rules, etc., from which it will be seen that it is a profitable speculation to become a member of this Association. Look at our past results since the "Old Met." became an open Derby in the year 1908. Our roll of membership shows up well—178, 183, 182, 184, and our prize money for the same periods in each class—28s. 4d., 25s., 28s. 4d., and 25s. More than that, according to rule 2, every member is permitted to enter ten exhibits for the very small annual payment of 3s. We extend to every Scotch Fancy and Belgian exhibitor a cordial invitation to join, so that the Executive and Committee may have their anticipations realised by beating all past records. Taken all over, the past year was a somewhat precarious one for these sections, and we are determined, as far as we can, to stay this backward step and make 1912 a year of considerable advancement. For, after all, they are the "National birds," and their position must be maintained. New members: Messrs. W. Beattie (Dundee), A. Leslie (Thornton), H. White (Glasgow), C. R. Drysdale, J. B. Kerr, G. Stewart, A. T. Dunsmuir, J. R. Meikle (Edinburgh).—C. R. Drysdale, Esq., Hon. President; W. Thornton, Esq., Hon. Vice-president; J. R. Meikle, Secretary, 57, Lothian Road, Edinburgh.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Two innovations were made at the annual meeting, held at Johnston's Restaurant, 6, The Broadway, on Mar. 4th, one being the holding of a social in an interval between the business, during which light refreshments were served free to members, and the other the election of two lady members to the committee. Fifty members, or thereabouts, were present. The most satisfactory feature of all was an addition of 18 to the membership, which has now reached 105. No less pleasing was the highly gratifying report and balance sheet presented by the secretary. The general account showed the handsome balance of £23 17s. 9d., the cash balance being £28 6s. 4d., and total assets £35 16s. 1d. The Chairman, Mr. W. H. Stoakley, in moving the adoption of the report and balance sheet, said that the wonderfully rapid success of the society would have been impossible but for the man at the helm—he meant their admirable secretary, Mr. H. Smith. It was to his painstaking ability and zeal, and his tactful enterprise they owed the high position they had now attained. Indeed, so much was he esteemed that the committee had authorised him to do as he did last year, and present him with a purse of gold from the funds of the Society, as a very small recognition of the services he had performed for them (applause). Mr. Smith, in acknowledging the presentation, expressed his thanks to the committee and the members for their token of appreciation, and assured them that he found much pleasure in working for the Society and in being able to present the report which had given them such satisfaction. Some slight alterations were made in the rules, and the officers were elected as follows:—President, Mr. F. J. R. Piper; vice-presidents, Messrs. C. How, J. Carson, E. J. Lamb, J. Robson, G. J. Warley, and Dr. Spencer; chairman, Mr. W. H. Stoakley; committee, Messrs. E. W. Dell, H. Dixon, A. H. Dyke, G. Griffiths, F. W. Owen, P. Rorke, E. J. Whittome and Mrs. Griffiths and Mrs. Owen; hon secretary and treasurer, Mr. H. Smith. On the motion of the Chairman it was decided to send messages of sympathy and hopes for their speedy recovery to Mrs. Thynne and Mrs. Taylor, two members, who are seriously ill. A discussion arose on a motion by Mr. E. J. Whittome as to the provision of a cup of the value of four guineas, for the purpose of a cup class formed on the principle of the Bristol bowl competition, but eventually the matter was referred to the committee to come up again at April meeting. It was announced that Messrs. Robson, Halliday and Norman had been appointed judges for the annual show in November, and that through the instrumentality of Mr. Veen, Mr. Lester would give a lecture on Roller Canaries at next monthly meeting.—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

WHAT MORE NEED WE SAY

BY Claude St. John

About "Our Canaries" than that it is written by Claude St. John, the famous expert, who, week by week, through the columns of Cage Birds, answers the hosts of questions with which canary lovers, anxious about some matter affecting their pets, ply him. Despite the great range of these questions, Claude St. John has never been at a loss for an answer, and has always given complete satisfaction. No other authority on canaries is so fitted as he to write such a work.

Charles Houlton does not answer queries, but twenty years of extraordinary success in mule and hybrid breeding stamp him as the man to set aspirants to proficiency in this fascinating but difficult hobby on the right road.

Each of these authors has had the assistance of C. A. House and G. A. Weston with the text. The former is an authority on Canaries and a present day leading Judge; the latter is known throughout the Fancy as a British Bird specialist.

On the work of these writers H. Norman has set the seal of greatness with a galaxy of inimitable coloured plates and sketches.

as the author says, is a simple title, but it means everything about canaries. There is a wonderful preface to the work. The reader has clearly set before him the value of the hobby and is quickly enthused with a desire to attain all that the author has made so clear. As early as page 5 there is a grand sketch of the bird, giving its technical points, and at once showing the prospective breeder what to aim at.

"Cage Bird Hybrids"

as a title conjures up visions of the many fine crosses already obtained, and of those yet to be—if all goes well. But, unfortunately, without a guide the breeder will find many pitfalls to discourage him and make vain all the time and trouble he has taken. The surest way to overcome these—the shortest cut to success—is by following the lines laid down in "Cage Bird Hybrids."

IN BOTH WORKS THE PLATES AND SKETCHES ARE TRIUMPHS OF PRACTICAL ILLUSTRATION.

AINLEY'S UNIVERSAL FOOD

for Canaries and Finches. The advantages we claim for this food are that it rears entirely from the nest; it is safe and reliable, and no further additions are required beyond a few greens. It is easily mixed with colour food, and for getting birds into show condition it stands without an equal. It contains ingredients unknown in any other foods, and the last grain is eagerly eaten and enjoyed by the birds. It is also a splendid addition to the food of all Parrots, which partake of grain, and we make this unique offer that if not as stated, return it, and get your money back in full; 1/3 per lb; 4 lbs., 4/6; 10 lbs., 10/-, free: John William Ainley, 16, Daltongreen, Huddersfield.

IF it is good enough for the largest Collection in the World, surely this Grand Food should be good enough for anyone.

THE HALL MARK

of quality in Roller Canaries is the name "Weber." If you get a Weber's Leipzig Roller you may depend upon having a bird that is absolutely "top notch." For years past I have publicly stated that for quality of song, variety and number of changes, and lowness of price, no other Roller on the market can approach the Leipzig Roller, of which I am sole importer. Won't you test the truth of this statement by having one on week's trial, and test it side by side against any other higher priced one from elsewhere. It does not matter if you have no intention of buying the bird, I shall be pleased to send it just the same. I now have about 1,500 genuine Leipzig Roller cocks, all 1911 bred birds, and guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, barp, flute, and gong notes, etc., etc., and warranted entirely free from titlark, chopping, or other objectionable notes whatever, price 8/- and 9/- each. Special bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell tours, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 3/- each, two 5/6. I also have a few extra special contest Roller cocks, in glorious song, at 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are guaranteed of the original Seifert blood; their song is exceptionally soft and mellow, which is like a cascade of ever-flowing melody. Hens of same strain as contest cocks, 4/- each, two 7/6. I also hold a very large stock of loud free singing Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song day and gaslight, real ceiling lifters, and just the thing where plenty of loud song is required, price 6/- each. Hartz hens, 2/6 each, two 4/-; singing-box cages, 1/6 each. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. Following few letters are entirely unsolicited, and will give an idea of quality of Leipzig Rollers. "16, Thomas St., Tonypandy, Feb. 19.—Sir, I am quite satisfied with Leipzig Roller you sent on Dec. 1st. He is a grand songster, singing all day and every day. Thanking you for splendid bird and straightforward dealing with strangers.—Yours, D. Davies." "Victoria St., Stocksbridge, nr. Sheffield, Feb. 16.—Sir, Please send another Roller as good as one you sent a year ago. He has turned out a splendid songster, and all who have heard him say so.—Yours, W. Rodgers." "Chester-le-Street, Feb. 16.—Sir, Roller and cage arrived safe, and am quite satisfied. Bird gives every satisfaction. Unpacked 9 in morning, and singing grandly in afternoon. Thank you very much.—Yours, J. Sewell, senr." "Phyllis St., Barry Island, Feb. 17.—Sir, I am more than satisfied with Roller. You will take some beating with Rollers, as I have paid £2 for one and not near as good as yours at 12/6.—Yours, Fred Westall." "65, Balfour Rd., Normanton, Feb. 17.—Sir, Contest Roller doing splendidly. I am highly satisfied; he is a gem. I again thank you for such a beautiful songster. It's the best I've heard lately.—Yours, G. Taylor." "Beech View, Whaley Bridge, Feb. 14.—Sir, Roller I had from you on Dec. 13th is singing splendidly and I am very pleased, as it sings night and day. Please send two hens.—Yours, F. Wyld." "87, Connsbrook Avenue, Belfast, Feb. 7.—Sir, Please send following. I may say Roller I had 4 years ago is still singing hard every day.—Yours, T. McCaughan." "17, Durham St., Scarborough, Feb. 5th.—Sir, Please send following. I must tell you I got a cock Roller from you last season, and he gives us more than satisfaction. Grand songster.—Yours, C. Youngman." Please note.—Every genuine Weber's Leipzig Roller is stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and I am the only importer of this strain. They cannot be obtained only from me. All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages, and sent on full week's trial at my risk immediately on receipt of cash, if same is deposited with Editor, and unless you get perfect satisfaction and your every expectation realised, your money is refunded in full.

THE YORKSHIRE BREEDERS

Society do not claim to have won more prizes than others, but we do claim that a large percentage of the winners for which others get the credit have been bred by us or from our strains, which have been supplied to the leading exhibitors and dealers of Bradford and district. We intend these strains, which are of 40 years standing, to be distributed worldwide, instead of allowing two or three to monopolise the winners, which are bred from them year by year. Breeders who wish to breed their own winners will be well advised to take advantage of this genuine offer, and secure some of this blood at an early date, as not being dealers our stocks are limited. Breeding sets (1 cock and 2 hens), 12/6, 15/-, 20/- up; pairs, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-, hens from 4/-; approval, cash or deposit: Address, "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

The result of the draw will be announced in the next issue of CAGE BIRDS.—R. B. Wright, Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTY B.B AND M.C.

Fifth annual meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, March 9th, Mr. F. Archer (president) in chair. Balance-sheet read out, and the work of the past season gone through. The club started with 3s. 5½d. in hand after "subbing" round, as we were again a little behind, but we were pleased to see that the new season will begin with £1 5s. in hand. This is most gratifying to members. The last show season has turned out very well; the ten shows with our patronage yielded about 250 entries for Mules, Hybrids and British. We were very pleasantly surprised by being presented with a half-guinea by Mr. E. Clegg, which was much appreciated. Officers elected for coming year: Patrons, T. Martin, Esq. (Messrs. Martin and Archer, of Huddersfield), H. Middlemost, Esq. (Huddersfield); Mr. F. Archer again induced to become president, although he would have preferred some one else; vice-presidents, W. A. Cowgill, Esq., T. H. Inman, Esq., J. Isherwood, Esq., F. Hammond, Esq., H. H. Towers, Esq., H. J. Chittenden, Esq., D. Duncan, jun., and E. Clegg, Esq.; auditors, Messrs. S. Dean and R. Halliday; committee, Bradford district, Messrs. S. Dean, C. Ross, P. Jowett, and H. E. Parker, jun.; outside Bradford, Messrs. B. H. Wilson (Bramley), W. Gomersal (Morley), H. E. Parkin, jun. (Liversedge), J. Wilson (Malton), J. Bousfield (Knaresborough), H. Stake (Brighouse), T. Woods (Pickering), W. Lee (Doncaster), E. Clegg (Dewsbury). Mr. J. Lane was again elected hon. sec. against his wish, but being pressed into it he had no option. Proposed and seconded that the best thanks be given Mr. Lane for his services as hon. sec.; Mr. Lane responded suitably. It was suggested that societies wishing for the club's patronage send in their applications as early as possible to avoid dates clashing, as we want all the above in working order before next meeting, when we hope to notify secretaries whose shows will have extra specials from this club; so, secretaries, please apply as early as possible. I may mention that these new specials should make a lot of difference to the entries, especially if good classification is given. Proposed by Mr. E. Clegg, seconded Mr. J. Isherwood, that we give 10 shows patronage, same as before. We have promises of more new members, which will appear after next meeting. We should be pleased if all intending members will kindly send in their names and addresses so that same may get into new books; this brought the meeting to a close, as tea was ready for the great prize distribution of Yorkshire Union prizes.—J. Lane, Hon. Sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Quarterly general meeting held Mar. 6, Mr. G. Davidson in chair. Carried, that open show be held Oct. 30 and 31, as arranged by committee, and that the Mart Hall be again engaged. Judges selected: Messrs. J. Robson, W. Nicholson (Stockton-on-Tees), and A. Brown (Gateshead); all have accepted and have been appointed. Agreed, that in future meetings be held on the second Wednesday of each month instead of the first.—J. C. Bell, Sec.

FORRES AND NORTHERN O.A

At the annual meeting held March 4th, it was agreed to have only cage birds at our annual show to be held December 4th. Following were appointed office-bearers:—President, D. Campbell; vice-president, D. Ross; sec. and treas., W. Cumming. As the society has been in a bad way for a number of years, the annual show being run at a loss, it was resolved to have a grand prize drawing, when we hope all fanciers will give us their assistance.—W. Cumming, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held Feb. 4. Despite the inclement weather there was a good attendance. Decided, to hold an open show on Nov. 14th. Judge's name will be announced later. Young bird show fixed for June 22nd. Business over, Messrs. Walton and Roberts entertained the company with a splendid selection of gramophone records, and Mr. Evans, a visitor, rendered a song in an excellent manner. A most enjoyable evening terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to those gentlemen.—J. Pitchford, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Meeting held Co-op. Hall (St. George's Cross), March 8th, Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a large attendance. Nomination of judges for F.F. and Annual Members' Show. Two new members enrolled, Messrs. G. Henderson and W. Templeton. Table show of British and Foreign birds also held; entries 53. Mr. M. Craig (Tollcross) judged. Principal winners:—British: Messrs. Henderson, Jamieson, Allan, Proudfoot, E. Taylor, Campbell, Gibb, Adams, D. Taylor; Foreign: Messrs. Proudfoot, Miller; Hens for hybrid breeding: Messrs. Proudfoot, E. Taylor.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

VALE OF LEVEN O.A.

After an address given by Mr. Thos. Smith, at our last meeting, he was unexpectedly called upon to judge mules and hybrid pairs. The quality was exceptionally fine, showing that the members have thought on the subject with a full appreciation of the importance of the hobby. Principal winners: Messrs. R. Maltman, J. W. Liles, J. McArthur, R. Kerr, J. and H. Hannah, J. McEwan. New members admitted (9): Messrs. J. McBride and J. Carrick (Dumbarton), D. Anderson, J. Methven, J. Cuthbertson, P. Douglass, J. Donaldson, and H. McGowan (Alexandria), and T. Maltman (Bonhill). This model society deserves every success. Long may Messrs. Bell, Hannah, McLean, and others be spared to carry on the noble work they have set their hands to.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Annual general meeting and election of officers held March 4, Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The balance-sheet was gone into, and am pleased to state there was a balance on the right side, which, considering we are only a new club, is very satisfactory. Secretary then read his report (a very lengthy one), showing how the members had supported the shows, which had received their patronage, sometimes showing sixty per cent. of the entries. He then gave in his resignation, saying he was sorry to do so, but he was going away to Canada. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded him, and the members expressed their sorrow at losing him, and wishing him every success in his new home. Election of officers: President, Mr. T. Carr Forster. Vice-President, Dr. Hemy. Chairman, Mr. W. Smith. Vice-Chairman, Mr. Snaith. Auditors, Messrs. Snaith and Greason. Committee: Messrs. Affleck, Ellwood, Craig, Farmer, Harvey, Johnstone, Montgomery, Newcombe, Parkin, Reid, T. Smith, and Greason. Following is a list of the medal winners: Champion section, gold medal, J. Johnstone; silver (gold centre) medal, G. Ellwood, Craig and Harvey; silver medals, Messrs. Smith (two), Ellwood, Hawkins, and Montgomery. Novice section, gold medal, Nicholson; silver (gold centre) medal, M. Peel; silver medals, Messrs. Nicholson, Parker, Peel, Aitchison, Walker, and Greenwell. Extra specials. Messrs. Johnstone (2), Parker, Nicholson, W. Smith, and Peel. All members are requested to attend social on 27th March, if possible, to receive above medals.—M. C. Potts, Hon. Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual dinner took place Mar. 6, at Sydney Arms, when about 40 members and friends sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by Mr. A. T. Cox, High Street. The president, Mr. W. Theobald, was unable to be present. Mr. T. J. King occupied the chair, supported by Messrs. Boulter, Grant, Lewis (chairman), Treasure (hon. sec.), Madagan, Payne, and Houghton (Gloster). The loyal toast having been duly honoured, the chairman, in a few pithy terms, proposed "The Society," and remarked on the good accruing to men who had such a hobby; after a life-long experience in the Fancy, he could thoroughly recommend bird-keeping as a delightful pastime. Mr. King said he was very pleased to see several round him, who had attended the first meeting of the society, about 35 years ago. He would couple with the toast the names of Mr. Lewis (chairman) and Mr. Treasure (hon. sec.). The toast was received with musical honours. Mr. Lewis, in responding, thanked them for the way they had received the toast, and trusted the society would continue to prosper. Mr. Treasure, in his reply, said it was eight years ago since he had taken over the office of hon. sec., and in looking back he was glad to say there had been a gradual but sure growth, and he was glad to say they were still going ahead. Each show was bigger than the previous one, and although the membership had not increased much last year, they had made a good start this year, and he had a long list to propose at the next meeting. He attributed the success of the society largely to the succession of ideal chairmen, during the last eight years. First, Mr. King, who held the office for several years, and was followed by Mr. Grant, who in his turn, owing to increased business causes, was obliged to retire, and was succeeded by Mr. Lewis, the present chairman. He was quite sure they all regretted as much as he did the absence of his co-sec., Mr. Pounsett, whose wife was still ill. In conclusion, he drew attention to the danger which threatened their hobby from faddists, who in many cases knew nothing of what they were talking about, and urged his fellow members to join the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and so, by making that a power, they would be able to fight, if needs be, for the hobby they were all interested in. "Kindred Societies" was proposed by Mr. Grant and responded to by Mr. Boulter (chairman of the Canine Society), and the toast of "The Visitors," proposed by Mr. Madagan, was replied to by Mr. Hyatt. Mr. Hope, jun., proposed the "Artistes," and Mr. G. Stevens "The Chairman." A very interesting programme was carried out, including some very clever conjuring tricks, to which the following gentlemen contributed:—Messrs. A. E. Smith, W. Moore, Roberts, jun., Macey, King, Bastin, Cox, Young, Bendall, R. Smith, Lewis, Houghton (Cheltenham), and Salisbury, with Mr. Finch at the piano.

LLANELLY AND DIST. C.B.S.

Very successful meeting, Greyhound Hotel, March 9, Mr. T. Jenkins in chair. Re date of next show, seeing that the hall was not available for the show from Nov. 26 till January next, 1913, after a long discussion we decided to hold our show on Nov. 26. Messrs. W. Vardy (Canaries) and J. Frostick (Mules, British and Foreign) were elected judges of same. After the business a very interesting affair took place, when the chairman stated that our late and worthy chairman (Councillor D. R. Jones, Esq.) was to be the recipient of a presentation by the members. Mr. Jenkins asked our worthy president, Mr. Holmes, to hand over to Mr. Jones a beautiful ornamental inkstand and pen, inscribed as follows: "Presented to D. R. Jones, Esq., by the members of the Llanelly and District Cage Bird Society, March 9th, 1912." Mr. Holmes, in making the presentation, said he did not know of anyone who deserved it more. He hoped Mr. Jones might long be spared to be amongst them, as he had found him to be of sterling quality. Mr. Jones, in acknowledging the present, said that when the society was formed some eight years ago he had the honour of being elected chairman, which office he had held up to last year. Nothing gave him greater pleasure than being amongst his cage bird friends. He would like to congratulate the chairman (Mr. T. Jenkins) on this very successful year of office, and also the secretary, Mr. Daniel John, who was always plodding along for the good of the Fancy. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Holmes, who generously promised the society again to present it with a silver cup.—D. John, sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Lecture on "Pairs for Breeding." by Mr. S. Hadwin.

Mr. J. W. Guy presided over a good attendance on March 1, and in introducing the lecturer said he hoped all present would greatly benefit by his remarks. Mr. Hadwin met with an encouraging reception. He said that a few years back he had been a member of the extinct Runcorn and Widnes Society, that it was not by far his first visit to the town, and that he hoped it would not be the last. He stated that the general principles in selecting stock for breeding were that we should look to the cock for size and colour, and to the hen for type and quality. Buffs give you better colour on the cock side than yellows, he said. For instance, take a buff green Yorkshire. Its colour is rich, and looks as if, in the event of the bird being cut in two, it would be green all through—a big difference as compared with the Yellow Green, which looks smoky and less brilliant in colour. He next dealt with the general description of the good points of the Yorkshire for breeding—small head, but bold, nicely rounded neck, moderately long and straight, not too full or too thin; the shoulders narrow, square, and well filled; back nice and flat; long tapered wings; the flights tucked in closely tip to tip; tail and legs straight and long; the bird in attitude should be as nearly erect as possible. The bad points to breed with are crossed wings, round shoulders, legs short and stilty, short flights and drop, and short tails.

Mr. Hadwin next dealt with the good points in the Norwich to breed with—chubby and of medium build, nice bold and broad head, having a gradual rise from the beak over the crown and falling away gradually into the neck, which should be short and full in an even curve; the back to be broad, wings not too long, tail to harmonise in length with the body and wings, legs to be inclined to shortness, but not too short. Bad points: Small narrow head, hollow neck, long bodies, droopy wings, and spread tails. He said he was in favour of double buffing in Norwich, both bigger birds, better colour, shorter tail, and wing flights being the result. The body feather would be both heavier and broader, but the offspring would be all buffs. Time to pair: This was the next point, and the lecturer stated that this was the most critical in his address, especially to novices and inexperienced fanciers. Never, he said, be in a hurry to pair up your stock until you are quite satisfied that the cold raw east winds have left us. The last week in March or beginning of April is quite early enough. One rule of his was never to pair up until the birds could see to feed at six o'clock in the morning.

To all his hens, a week or two before he paired up, he gave a teaspoonful, every alternate day, of niger (or inga) seed, which kept the birds from being eggbound. For getting the birds into condition he firmly believed in mixed seed being given about three times a week. He is also strongly in favour of baths twice a week, for they are very invigorating and keep the birds in good health—while nesting, twice a week; but after the eggs have hatched out, do not let the hen have the bath until about a fortnight later.

Mr. Hadwin thinks the double breeder the most suitable, and whitening mixed with size better than whitewash for liming the cages. Enamel and paint he strongly condemns, for he says they never lose the painty smell, which is injurious to the birds' health. He likes a broad perch about half an inch wide, rounded off, but not planed. Planed perches give the young birds what is known as the slip heel, which they never get properly better of. Large sand he uses, such as poultry sand, which contains shell and sharp gravel; this is what the birds require for mastication of their food. Sea sand is not suitable, as it causes a lot of trouble, mostly indigestion, in birds.

This concluded Mr. Hadwin's lecture, and he answered all questions in a most straightforward manner, which even the youngest novice could not fail to understand. Mr. J. W. Guy, in bringing the meeting to a close, said that many of the members present would have learnt something from what their friend had said. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hadwin concluded the meeting.—J. Fearnett, hon. sec.

The R.S.P.C.A. Inspectors & Bird Shop Keepers.

HOW ANOTHER PASTIME IS THREATENED.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

How the New Act is Being Exploited.

In the course of the case, the R.S.P.C.A. versus Stapleton, a full report of which appears elsewhere in this issue, a lurid light was thrown upon the methods adopted by the Society's inspectors in endeavouring to establish grounds for the conviction of any bird shop keeper against whom they may set their mark.

Here we have a dealer who has been in the occupation of the same premises for more than a quarter of a century, and who has during that time carried on his business without a complaint of any sort having been lodged against him. He is respected by his neighbours, is regarded by his customers as keeping his birds in cleanly and humane conditions, and altogether, his shop might have been picked out as an example of what a bird-shop should be.

Inspectors as Casual Customers.

Yet on a particular day two men walk in from the street and make such enquiries as might be made by any ordinary customer. They carefully conceal their identity, agree to purchase a Skylark at two shillings, and pay a deposit of a shilling. Then one of them asks if the dealer has a Chaffinch which has been "done," "done" meaning blinded by red-hot needles in the mistaken idea that birds which have been subjected to this horrible torture sing better than those which have their sight unimpaired. The belief that the song of my bird may be improved by inflicting upon it such unspeakable torture is on a par with that which suggests that the slitting of the tongue of a Starling or Magpie improves its talking powers, and, like that equally mistaken notion, is now as dead as Adam. Yet it is possible that a brute might be found who would for a consideration undertake the atrocious operation, and one of these inspectors, upon being told that the dealer had not such a bird, pressed him to procure one by the time of their next visit. In the course of the case the inspector admitted that he had asked if the dealer had such a bird, but denied that he had incited him to procure one, and the defending solicitor could not, of course press the point, as he had only the oath of his client as justification, and this was contradicted by the inspector concerned.

Mendacious Evidence.

One of these men swore in the witness box that he had had eighteen years' experience of birds, and was perfectly certain that among those which were in the shop were a number of Goldfinches. The other inspectors confirmed him in this, but the defendant was able to prove without the shadow of a doubt that he had not had a Goldfinch in his possession for nearly three months. These are the men upon whose uncorroborated testimony any dealer is liable to a fine of twenty-five pounds, together with six months hard labour!

Not one, but all the inspectors swore that the Skylarks in the defendant's shop were being kept in cages exactly of the size of one produced in court, but, when the one with an alleged eighteen years' experience of birds was invited to place a Skylark, produced, in the cage, he had to admit the impossibility even of getting such a bird into the cage, much more of keeping one in it. The liberty of their fellow man is placed in the keeping of such people as these, for if two or three of them are prepared to swear to the same thing, and the defence be not in a position to disprove their evidence beyond the possibility of a doubt, a magistrate must give heed to them, and convict the person charged.

On the point of the condition of the cages, all the inspectors were agreed that there were three inches of solid filth in their bottoms. Here again the defence was able to prove gross misrepresentation, for a number of cages were produced, and the depth of the bottom rail in the largest of them was less than two inches. Three inches of filth therefore would mean that the excrement was piled up to more than an inch above the rail of the cage.

It is no wonder that the magistrate, Mr. Cecil Chapman, stopped the case after three witnesses, among them a clergyman, had been heard for the defence, and dismissed the summons without calling upon a number of independent witnesses who had forfeited three afternoons in their wish to exonerate Mr. Stapleton from the unfounded charges brought against him.

The Value of Cage Birds League.

But suppose this man had never heard of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and had not been in a position to put into effect the advice we gave him as to the proceeding to be adopted in his own defence. He would have been convicted to a certainty, and the R.S.P.C.A. would be congratulating itself upon the success of the working of the Protection of Animals Act, 1911. Now, on the contrary, an innocent man has been cleared of a disgraceful charge, and the prosecuting Society has to pay five guineas towards his costs, besides the whole of its own. What that Society will say to the inspectors who laid the information, and swore to falsehoods in support of it, is no concern of ours. Mr. Stapleton is indebted in the first place to our member, Mr. A. Goodall, who mentioned CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE to him, and who brought him to our offices for advice.

Anglers and the New Act.

The expression "captive animal" means any animal (not being a domestic animal) of whatsoever kind or species, and whether a quadruped or not, including any bird, fish, or reptile which is in captivity . . . or subjected to any appliance or contrivance for the purpose of hindering or preventing its escape from captivity or confinement.

It would seem clear, although legal opinions differ, as usual, that the Act affects anglers as well as bird-keepers, at least so far as in the using of live-bait, if such bait be a small fish, and it may apply even to the use of a worm or gentle. In view of the possibilities, there has been formed an Anglers' Defence Committee, and a defence fund has been instituted. At a general meeting of anglers at the Holborn Restaurant, on February 19 last, voluntary subscriptions amounting to over £50 were announced, and at the first meeting of the Committee the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

"That the Anglers' Defence Committee will, when possible, and advisable, take such steps as are necessary towards the defence of any angler in the United Kingdom affected by the Act prosecuted under the Protection of Animals Act, 1911—provided he has used generally accepted and sportsmanlike methods of angling."

And in order to be prepared for the emergency of a prosecution of an angler under the Act, it was unanimously resolved:—

"That it be an instruction to the chairman or hon. secretaries to take steps to instruct a solicitor to defend the case at the first stage of the proceedings."

Readers of these columns who are also anglers, or who are interested in knowing the lengths to which the professional humanitarians are prepared to go in their endeavours to put down sport of every kind, would do well to read the "Fishing Gazette" of 24 Feb. and 9 March, in which appear full accounts of the two meetings.

The R.S.P.C.A. v. Weddell.

In this case, reported in another column, the Society succeeded in establishing their charge. I have a few comments to make, but they must wait until next week.

A Hinge for Cage Doors.

Sent by Mr. A. Newcombe, 49, Gloster Road, Barnstaple

I enclose an idea and a sketch of a hinge for wooden cage doors which are much stronger than the old way of making. Take a piece of wire and with pliers bend to shape A. Then with a fine long bradawl bore two holes in edge of door (as shown by dotted lines in B). The two wire points A should then be driven in tight to edge of door (as shown in C).—A. Newcombe.

No. 576.

For Users of Sawdust.

Sent by Mr. J. Little, 154, Abbey Road, West Ham.

I send you an idea of my own for the benefit of fanciers who use sawdust instead of sand. I get a thin strip of wood, and nail about

*A Tell-tale Tit.

My brother, when a little boy, was one day very naughty. His auntie lived near to him, and when one day he went to see her, she said: "Frank, my little bird has told me you were very naughty this morning." Looking up at the Linnet in the cage, he angrily shouted: "Tell-tale Tit!"—Evie McCreary (aged 11), 11, Harlescott Road, Nunhead, S.E.

*Of Course Not.

Johnny, aged four, went into a Birmingham grocer's shop and asked for a box of Canary seed. "Is it for your mother?" asked the grocer. "No, of course not," replied the little fellow; "it's for the bird."—Taken from the "Penny Pictorial," and sent by Dorothy Baker (aged nine), Seaton Road, West Hendford, Yeovil, Somerset.

Not to be Done.

There is a very tame Robin here, who insists on coming continually into the house. He generally finds his way into the dining room at meal times, and hops under the table quite fearlessly to eat the crumbs. He seems quite happy indoors, and sometimes he will perch on a curtain rod and sing prettily. We have tried to turn him out of doors, as we are afraid of the cats catching him; but as soon as we turn him out of one window he comes in at another. As we thought it dangerous for him to be indoors so much, we put him into a basket and let him loose a mile away, never thinking he would find his way back. Great was our surprise, however, when a few hours afterwards we found little Bobby had returned just in time for his tea.—Taken from "Little Folks," and sent by Miss Beatrice Garner, Bannold, Waterbeach, Cambs (aged 13).

BIRD DEALER EXONERATED.

Magistrate refuses to believe evidence of Society's inspectors: R.S.P.C.A. officials guilty of gross exaggeration: Mulcted in £5 5s. costs.

AFTER lasting through three hearings, involving three attendances of witnesses, at the Tower Bridge Police Court, many of whom were people who could ill afford the time to appear at all, the first London prosecution under the new "Protection of Animals' Act" (1911) had a dramatic collapse on March 6th, when the magistrate, Mr. Cecil Chapman, dismissed the case at almost the beginning of the defence, and mulcted the R.S.P.C.A., the prosecuting society, in five guineas towards the defendant's costs. What would have happened if it had not been that the defendant was able to call neighbours and customers who gave a point-blank contradiction on oath to every individual allegation of the society's inspectors may be imagined from a perusal of the statements of the prosecution as given below.

The Act under which the information was laid empowers a magistrate to inflict a penalty not exceeding twenty-five pounds, together with imprisonment up to six months with or without hard labour, and it is monstrous that the result of a case should depend upon whether or not a defendant is able to efficiently controvert the unsupported testimony of paid inspectors whose very living depends upon an exhibition from time to time of their zeal in their calling. The report which follows is by our special representative, who attended the hearing.

At the Tower Bridge Police Court, on Feb. 19, Charles Stapleton, bird dealer, of 81, Lower Road, Rotherhithe, was summoned before Mr. Cecil Chapman, at the instance of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, for "causing unnecessary suffering" to sundry birds in his possession—to wit, eleven Larks, twelve Linnets, twelve Chaffinches, seven Thrushes, five Goldfinches, five Yellowhammers, two Bullfinches, a Blackbird, and others, "about two hundred birds in all."

Mr. Percy Robinson, instructed by Messrs. Ody and Wilmot, defended. At the first hearing the prosecuting society was not legally represented, but after the first adjournment Mr. Polhill appeared for the prosecution.

The Evidence.

The first witness was Sidney Inight, an inspector of the R.S.P.C.A., who swore that on Sunday, Feb. 4, he looked in at the window of the defendant's shop and saw a large number of British birds being kept in cages which were not only inadequate in size, but were in a disgustingly filthy condition. Some had no water troughs, and those troughs which were fitted contained water green with slime. Five Yellowhammers in one cage were, he said, in a deplorable state. They looked as though they were dying. Their wings were plastered with dirt, and their feet were corroded with their own filth. He entered the shop and asked how long the birds had been in the possession of defendant. The answer was: "Some since last October; some not so long." While speaking, he especially noticed four Thrushes in one cage. The filth in this cage, the inspector said, was three inches thick, and the birds were pecking feebly from a small tin filled with wet bread, seed husks, and excrement. There were about two hundred birds in all, and the conditions he described applied to all.

Alleged "Lame" Excuse.

When he pointed out to the defendant the disgraceful state in which the birds were kept, the defendant said he had not been able lately properly to look after the birds, as he had a bad leg. He paid one shilling as deposit on the purchase of a Skylark, and left after advising the defendant to clean the cages and feed and water the birds. He called next day, Feb. 5, and found the shop in exactly the same condition. Defendant then commenced hurriedly to throw in some food to the cages. On that occasion he disclosed his identity, and said he should summon defendant.

On Feb. 7 he called again. The window of the shop had been roughly cleaned out, but the condition of the cages remained the same. He produced a wood and wire cage five inches by three inches. This cage had contained a Greenfinch. The Skylarks in the shop were in cages of exactly the same size and pattern. Dozens of Greenfinches were in similar cages.

Blinded Chaffinches (?).

In cross-examination he said he had had eighteen years' experience of birds, and was quite certain as to all the statements he had made. He did not know that the defendant had been in business at the same address for twenty-eight years. Did not caution defendant; did not think it his duty to do so. Was certain the Skylarks were in cages such as the one produced. The inspector, Bullen, who was with him on the second visit, asked for a Chaffinch, and also asked the defendant if he blinded them or had a bird that had been "done" but he did not ask the defendant whether he could get one "done" by the next day. It was a common practice to blind Chaffinches to improve their song. When asked as to the number of Goldfinches, the inspector said there were five. He could not be mistaken; he knew a Goldfinch quite well. Counsel intimated that he would prove there were no Goldfinches at all in the shop. Adjourned for seven days.

Another Inspector Says "Ditto."

On the resumption Mr. Polhill, for the Society, called Inspector Bullen, who said he was with Inspector Inight on the first visit, and also on Feb. 5. He endorsed all that the previous witness had said. The birds were undoubtedly suffering keenly. The cages were in a disgustingly filthy state; the birds must have been wickedly neglected for many days; many looked weak and unfed, the Thrushes in particular.

Mr. Percy Robinson: What about the Goldfinches?—Witness: They were weak and dejected like the rest

You are quite certain there were Goldfinches. How many?—Yes. Five. One was taken down for inspection. All had their feathers plastered with excrement.

Shop the Same After Three Days:

Inspector S. Bennett deposed that he called at the shop on Feb. 7 and purchased a Greenfinch in the cage produced. He confirmed the evidence of the previous witnesses as to the filthiness of the shop. He made no notes at the time. The cages in the shop were in the same condition as the one produced.

The magistrate took the specimen cage in his hand and said that if that was to be considered a fair sample he could not hold that there was evidence of cruelty so far as the cages were concerned. It certainly was not absolutely clean, but it could not be said to be in such a state as to cause unnecessary suffering.

The Inspector Nonplussed.

Addressing the magistrate, Mr. Percy Robinson said that, with permission, he would invite the inspector to demonstrate his evidence of last week.

To the inspector: Last week you said that the Larks in the shop of the defendant were kept in cages such as the one produced?—Witness admitted this to be so.

Mr. Robinson (producing a Skylark in a cage): Now, Mr. Inight, you have had eighteen years' experience with birds. Please take the Lark out of this cage and transfer it to the one which you have sworn is such as those in which the Skylarks were being kept by the defendant.—The inspector looked askance at the two cages, and ultimately declined to attempt the task.

Mr. Robinson: Is it possible that, after eighteen years' experience, you are afraid to handle a Skylark? The witness vouchsafed no answer. He had evidently not anticipated that a feathered witness would be produced for the defence, and his confusion was painfully apparent. The magistrate relieved the tension by saying he had seen enough, and was satisfied that the impossibility of getting a Skylark into such a cage was sufficient contradiction of the inspector's evidence on the point of the Lark cages.

Asked as to the possibility of there being room for a bird of any kind whatever in the space which would be left in such a cage if the bottom were three inches thick with excrement, as sworn by himself, the inspector looked very little relieved from his embarrassment in the Skylark matter. Ultimately he said it was only to the cages in the window that his statement applied.

The Defence.

At the third hearing, Mr. Robinson opened the defence. He said that Stapleton had carried on business at his present address for twenty-eight years without a complaint of any kind. The evidence of the inspectors Inight and Bullen was not only improbable; it was incredible. He should call expert evidence that if the birds had been left in such a condition they would have died. Further, if the inspector thought the birds were suffering, he should not only have warned the defendant on his first visit, but should have called a police officer for corroboration. He did neither, but, according to his own story, and he was a man of eighteen years' experience, he left the birds to suffer in the condition in which he had found them. Witnesses would be called to prove the falsity of every statement made by the inspectors, and the defendant would himself swear that he had not had a Goldfinch for some months past.

A Point Blank Refutation.

The defendant Stapleton was first called, and gave a general denial of the statements of the prosecution. He partially cleaned the cages every day, and thoroughly at least once a week; the Thrush cages always twice. There were only about sixty birds in all on the premises. The inspector Bullen not only asked him if he had a Chaffinch which had been "done," but pressed him to get such a bird by the next day if possible. He had never had a blinded Chaffinch in his possession. Asked in detail as to the charges of filthiness, defendant answered "No" each time. The inspector Inight paid a deposit on the Lark on the Sunday, and completed the purchase on the Monday, taking the bird away in a cage of his own, which defendant pointed out was much too small even for a temporary purpose. The Lark could only be carried in it by using the back of the cage as a bottom for the time being. He had not had a Goldfinch in his shop since Boxing Day. The evidence of the inspectors to the contrary was absolutely false. Neither had he any Bullfinches as mentioned in the summons. Mr. Polhill, in cross examination, endeavoured first to disprove the defendant's statement that he had not more than about sixty birds, and questioned Stapleton as to the number of each kind of bird in his shop, but he could not get beyond the number stated.

Mr. Polhill: Can you account for four inspectors calling on four days if there were nothing wrong?—Defendant: I thought they wanted a job (laughter). They made no complaints whatever.

Re-examined: It was a Greenfinch which was taken away in the small cage produced, and that cage was the only one of its size in his shop. It was entirely untrue that the Skylarks were in cages of the same size. All his Skylarks were in larger cages, exactly like the one in which the Skylark produced was brought to the court.

John Anstey, tobacconist, of Lower Road; the Rev. J. Coad, Primitive Methodist minister; and John Bowling, barge builder, of Temeraire Street, all stated that the birds in the shop were cleanly and properly kept. Mr. Coad said that he himself was a bird lover. He had always about thirty birds of his own, and therefore knew how they should be kept. If the condition of the shop had ever even remotely approached the state described by the inspectors he must have seen it, and he would have considered it his duty as a minister of the Gospel, and as a bird lover, to have cautioned the defendant, and have lodged a complaint against him, if such a state had not been remedied. He was sure there were no grounds for the allegations made by the inspectors.

Mr. Robinson said he had many other witnesses, but the magistrate intimated that he did not wish to hear them.

The Magistrate's Comments.

In stopping the case, Mr. Cecil Chapman said that in all his experience he had never heard such absolutely flat contradiction by one side of the other. He was convinced that the views taken by the inspectors were exaggerated. Otherwise the birds must have been in such a sickly condition that the defendant's friends and customers must have known of it. There was absolutely no corroboration of what the inspectors had said, and he thought that professional witnesses, such as they, should have obtained the corroboration of a police officer before making such charges. He found that the offence alleged had not been proved, and dismissed the summons.

On the application of Mr. Robinson, the magistrate granted £5 5s. costs against the R.S.P.C.A.

LONDON BIRD DEALER FINED UNDER THE NEW ACT.

At the North London Police Court on Tuesday, March 12, Mrs. Eliza Weddell, of Boleyn Road, Kingsland, was charged before Mr. Hedderwick with causing unnecessary suffering to the birds in her stock by keeping them in dirty cages. Mr. C. V. Young conducted the prosecution on behalf of the R.S.P.C.A., and Mr. Percy Robinson, instructed by Messrs. Ody and Wilmot, appeared for the defence. Although the summons was in respect of the general condition of the cages in the shop, the hearing was narrowed to a consideration of two birds and the cage in which the inspectors found them. One was a Skylark which had only one leg and the other a Thrush which was alleged to be suffering from cramp.

The inspectors bought these birds and took them away in the cage in which they were. They were examined by a veterinary surgeon at the offices of the Society, and as a result of his report were killed by one of the inspectors. The cage was produced in support of the allegation of dirty cages.

Mr. Alexander Pearce, M.R.C.V.S., deposed that from the appearance of the birds he came to the conclusion that they were suffering from blood poisoning set up by eating food contaminated by the dirt in the bottom of the cage. The exhalations from the cage-bottom, he said, would be injurious to their eyesight and would cause great pain. The Thrush had cramp, and was evidently suffering. He had not had much experience in the diseases of birds.

Mr. Percy Robinson, in defence, contended that it devolved upon the prosecution to prove that, in the words of the Protection of Animals Act, the defendant was guilty of "wantonly or unreasonably doing or omitting to do" something, and thereby causing unnecessary suffering. Witnesses would depose that the shop had always been conducted in a cleanly and humane manner, and he would ask the magistrate to find that wanton cruelty had not been proved.

Mr. Hedderwick expressed his willingness to hear the defence, but said it might shorten matters if he said what was at present in his mind. He thought that an offence had been committed, but would hear what could be said in extenuation.

Mr. Robinson then called the defendant, who swore that every cage in the shop had been cleaned on the previous Friday, and it was always her custom to thoroughly clean them at least once a week. Most of the cages were new. Eight of the twelve Lark cages had only been in use for three days. She had bought the Thrush with some other birds only a few minutes before the inspectors called, and should have attended to it as soon as she had finished the cleaning, in which she was actually engaged at the time. She had herself operated on the broken leg of the Skylark, and the bird had quite recovered and was singing as well as any. She had only taken over the business since the death of her mother some three months ago, and during the forty-three years of her late mother's time no complaint whatever had been lodged.

Chas. Willis, a lay reader, said he saw the defendant cleaning the cages on the previous Friday, and had never seen anything of which to complain.

Mr. Fulljames said that in his opinion a bird could not contract blood-poisoning by feeding upon unclean food. The keeping of a bird in a dirty cage would not necessarily entail actual suffering, provided it was properly supplied with food and water. In reply to the magistrate, he said he should certainly not keep a bird of his own in a cage such as the one produced.

Mr. Hedderwick said that he was satisfied that in respect of the two birds mentioned an offence had been committed. He would take into consideration the fact that the defendant had only been in ownership of the shop since the death of her mother some three months ago, and would impose a fine of one pound only, together with two guineas costs. This mitigated penalty should not be taken as any precedent in future cases which might be brought before him. He should certainly punish anyone proved guilty of cruelty under the Act.

OBITUARY.

It is with profound sorrow that I have to chronicle the death of the little child of our worthy President, Mr. I. M. Morgan. The sad event occurred on Friday, March 8, writes Mr. J. T. Lloyd, secretary pro tem. of the Mid-Rhondda C.B.S. The little one was the light and comfort of their home, and our deepest sympathy goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Morgan in the sad loss which has befallen them. Our hon. secretary is ill, but I am proud to say he is now recovering and will soon be able and ready to take up office again. Both our President and secretary are great workers for our society.

The Sheffield O.S. have drawn up an attractive programme of events for 1912, which includes a lecture (on April 2) by Mr. H. J. Chick on "The General Management and Keeping of British Birds"; rambles on June 9, July 14, and August 18; and a big show on Nov. 1 and 2. Particulars as to membership may he had of the secretary, Mr. T. Bishop, 69, Alexandra Road, Sheffield.

We have received a copy of the very useful price list of nets, traps, and general catching appliances, seeds, wild foods, cages, and the innumerable other articles sold by Mr. S. Young, of Misterton, S.O., Crewkerne, Somerset. The nets, traps, etc., are all shown set in position, the booklet being fully illustrated. Copies can be obtained by sending two penny stamps to Mr. Young, who returns the twopence on receipt of the first order (a coupon and order form are enclosed with the list).

Although our society was only formed about twelve months ago, write Messrs. Barton and Barton, joint hon. secs., New Cross and Dist. C.B.S., we have three cups in our possession for competition, to be won outright, commencing at our next show on June 6—one for most points in Yorkshires (novice), one for most points throughout the year, and one for best Border unflighted at our annual show on Nov. 7. Now, then, Yorkshire and Border fanciers, these are well worth competing for; join now.

An Address Wanted.

Saving Time.

On Sunday, March 10, I found a Thrush sitting on four eggs, she having partly used an old nest that was built in a bush in our garden last year, writes Mr. R. Higgins (Aylesbury).

The Prolific Roller.

I think I had a record last year. I had but one Seifert Roller hen, which I put to a Roller cock and got fourteen young—eleven cocks and three hens—and all are well.—Sam Wilkinson (Nelson).

A Correction.

In my essay published on March 2, writes Mr. F. S. Morton (Bolton) there is one mistake. The eighth line in the fifth paragraph should read: "And all requisites that are constructed, etc." The word "that" has been left out, which makes it appear that seed-hoppers, etc., are included, whereas I am prejudiced against the use of the old wooden seed hopper.

A Tyneside Social.

For the Northern Specialist Clubs' social and prize distribution on March 27, I have the promise of an excellent programme, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle). In addition to various vocal artistes we have the promise of a splendid clog dancer, some friends from the Amateurs' Dramatic Society, and, as mentioned in my previous letter, Li Chung Soo, the Chinese juggler. There is nothing to prevent it being a complete success if we only get the coal strike settled in time and fine weather. Mr. Hutchinson will let you know final arrangements next week.

The "Danger" of Caged Birds to Human Health.

An authoritative contradiction by Mr. Henry Gray, M.R.C.V.S., of recent "scare" articles.

I THINK it is only right that those who have made a special study of the diseases of birds should give the public the benefit of their experience, especially when a great many mis-statements and "flights of imaginations" are published so as to unduly alarm people as to the danger they run in keeping birds. As one who has kept birds and studied their diseases, I do not think there is much evidence, or any proof, to support the theory that ordinary cage birds are dangerous to human health. It is nevertheless true that Parrots or Parrakeets may occasionally suffer from tuberculosis contracted from consumptive people, drinking cow's milk containing the bacillus of bovine tuberculosis, or eating corn contaminated with the bacillus of avian tuberculosis, generally derived from tubercular gallinaceous birds, especially when confined in large outdoor aviaries or zoological gardens. In the caged Parrot, however, the bird is the victim and not the originator of the disease.

As to smaller cage birds being subject to tuberculosis, I may say that after making hundreds of post-mortem examinations of birds sent me from every part of the United Kingdom, and even from the Continent of Europe, every year for several years past, I have yet to see my first case of tuberculosis in the smaller cage birds.

As to psittacosis (a contagious disease of Parrots and Parrakeets) which is frequently encountered in every country that freely imports this class of bird, a few Swiss, French and Italian authorities have attributed to it an endemic pneumonia in man. But I believe although this disease in the psittacidae occurs in Germany and in the United Kingdom, no report has appeared in which medical men have attributed a disease in man to the Parrot. I have had recourse to the reports of the French, Swiss and Italian endemics in man, alleged to have been derived from the Parrot, and after studying them, as well as the disease in the bird, and made numerous enquiries of people owning diseased Parrots, I have come to the conclusion that Parrots do not convey their paratyphoid disease to mankind, any more than birds and cats do their diphtherias to man.

Medical authorities in Germany are not inclined to accept the conclusions of French, Swiss and Italian observers. Professors Friedberger (Munich Veterinary of High School) and Frohner (Berlin Veterinary High School), in their magnificent and world-wide known work on the Pathology and Therapeutics of the Diseases of Animals, state thus:—

"Recently there has been described under the name psittacosis an epidemic form of pneumonia occurring in human beings, which is said to be developed as a result of infection by diseased Parrots (?). This Parrot disease, which is said to be communicable to man, manifests itself as an infective enteritis, which displays the presence of various micro-organisms (streptococci, staphylococci, pneumococci, bacteria, coli, etc.). A proof of the alleged association between the Parrot disease and endemic pulmonary disease in man has no more been established than one of the earlier hypotheses of the origin of human diphtheria from the diphtheria of fowls."

The public have been alarmed, from time to time, by statements that animals give us diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, influenza, etc. But not one of these claims has been substantiated or stood the test when the full evidence has been submitted to the critical examination of those who should know most about the diseases of animals and their relationship to those of man. It is a pity that people who write about the dangers of bird disease to human health do not draw their information from actual observation, and not from what they have read or imagined. It is a true old saying: Where angels dare not tread, fools rush in! — Henry Gray, M.R.C.V.S.

[We shall take steps to see that Mr. Gray's remarks are brought to the notice of the Editor of the R.S.P.C.A.'s journal, to whose absurdly misleading article on this subject we have previously referred.—Editor "C.B."]

The address of Mr. G. E. Weston after March 22nd. next will be 42, Lewisham-rd., Dartmouth Park, London, N.W. Will friends kindly note?

Birds as Shoe Ornaments.

When recently appealing for help for the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, the Duke of Rutland remarked that the latest Paris fashion was to wear Humming Birds and Birds of Paradise on the shoes. That was a remarkable instance of this peculiar form of feminine insanity.

Be Careful Over the Address.

I received an order for a Buff Border cock to be sent to Mr. John S. Raeside, Almada Street, Hamilton, N.B., and I sent bird off, writes Mr. F. Moore (Clapham Junction, S.W.). But owing to no number being given, the railway people were unable to deliver the bird, and after it had been at Hamilton Station from Saturday till the following Friday it was returned to me. I wrote two postcards and a letter to the address given, but received no reply. Will Mr. Raeside send his correct address to me?

In North Staffordshire.

We note an interesting article in the "Staffordshire Sentinel" of March 9 concerning the cage bird Fancy in the North Staffordshire district. The writer suggests "one good strong society" to cover the whole district, and that a challenge shield be procured. "Matches could be arranged to be held quarterly, and the society gaining the most points during the year be the holder of the trophy for twelve months. Each of the four societies should send six birds to the match, two Norwich, two Yorkshires, one British, and one mule or hybrid. This would provide twenty-four birds to be judged, and a pleasant evening every quarter. Where one fancier claimed membership with more than one society, he should choose, before the first match is held, with which society he will show during the year. No member should he allowed to show more than one bird at each show."

The Problem of Migration.

We hear that Mr. Geo. Crabb, the well-known metropolitan bird-lover, intends interesting himself in the marking of young birds during the coming summer, thus lending a hand in the movement to throw light upon the problems of migration. He is obtaining a number of rings from Messrs. Witherby, to be utilised by himself and fellow-members of the National British Bird and Mule Club.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that "Cage Birds" now goes to press on Wednesday evening, so that all matter for publication in our issue of the same week MUST reach us on Tuesday to be certain of inclusion, or first post Wednesday at latest.

In Canada.

We hear that the formation of a Specialist Norwich Canary Club is under consideration by the fanciers of Toronto (Canada). We trust it may be successfully floated.

A Hard Case.

We bave had brought to our notice the case of a metropolitan fancier, quite a young man, who has bad the misfortune to be out of work for a long period (except for brief intervals) and is in danger of being ejected from his house, his unfortunate position entailing great distress upon his wife and young family. He is well-educated, of good appearance, and willing to take on any work, either clerical or manual, at a very moderate wage. We believe his references to be satisfactory. Is there any reader who can help him to find permanent work? If so, we shall be pleased to put him into communication with the man in question.

WILL MULES BREED?

An Answer in the Affirmative.

By CHAS. HOULTON (St. Helens).
Author of "Cage Bird Hybrids."

The vexed question as to whether Mules can in their turn become parents of birds is settled by experiences of the above named well-known expert which are here related, with additional notes by Mr. G. E. Weston.

NOW that the busy show season is over, I will, with the Editor's kind approval, give an account of my experiences during part of last breeding season (1911) with a pair of birds sent to me through Mr. W. Reid, of Sunderland, to test whether they would breed or not. The birds sent to me were a cock Linnet-Canary Mule (or Linnet-Canary hybrid, properly speaking) and a Canary hen. These birds arrived at my home about the middle of the breeding season. Mr. Reid informed me that this same pair of birds had bred young in 1910, and also in the first round of 1911, for their owner, a Mr. Murray. He also told me that some of the young, and the pair of birds claimed to be the parents, had been sent up to London for the inspection of your Mr. G. E. Weston, who had also taken them to a meeting of the committee of the National British Bird and Mule Club. Exactly what took place whilst these birds were in London, I don't know, but when they were returned North I was asked if I would receive the old pair of birds and give them a trial, which I consented to do.

Handicapped but not Discouraged.

I was quite prepared to meet with some difficulties under the circumstances, for I knew that so much travelling (about some 600 miles or more on the railway) in the middle of the breeding season was not conducive to the most successful results. However, I was quite ready to try the birds, and if by close attention and care I could induce them to take to housekeeping and domestic (maternal and paternal) duties, I would do all I could think of to get them to settle down. Your readers will gather that I was rather handicapped by not having the birds at the beginning of the breeding season. The mere fact of disturbing, and particularly "travelling," them in the middle of the breeding operations might be sufficient to cause absolute failure.

When I had housed them in one of my cages, the days passed on, and the birds were more or less all attention, surveying their new surroundings. In a few days the Linnet-Canary Mule began to sing over the hen Canary, and also to feed her; while she began to flap her wings continuously in the familiar manner which denotes that a hen wants to go to nest. When I saw these actions I introduced into the cage some loose nesting material, and both the Mule and the hen Canary began to carry the material about. I then placed a nest pan inside the cage, when the hen Canary began at once to line it with the nesting material. The Linnet Mule was particularly attentive to the Canary, following her about the cage in a most devoted manner. He would, however, keep lifting the nesting material out, carrying it about from perch to perch, and he would ruffle himself up in plumage like a ball, flit his wings and tail about, and then, after some circus-like performances, let the nesting material drop on the bottom of the cage.

Very Assiduous in his Attentions.

As this kind of thing happened for two or three days, I could see I must adopt another method of getting the nest completed. I got one of my perforated zinc nest-pans, lined it with some very thick felting, placed it in the cage, and left some loose nesting material lying about. Mr. Linnet-Canary could amuse himself with the latter as much as he wished. The Canary eventually formed a nice, compact nest, with some of this material, on the top of the felt lining. The Mule was very assiduous in his attentions to the Canary, and performed all the love-making antics that Canaries indulge in at mating time—feeding the hen, singing to her continuously, and apparently thoroughly mating with her. I felt quite interested, and was sanguine I was going to meet with some new kind of experience. In a few more days I was pleased in the early morning to see an egg in the nest. Four eggs formed the clutch, and the hen then settled down to incubate. I left the Linnet-Canary with her during incubation, and he very attentively fed the hen on the nest, and then sat on the perch close by, singing his love ditty to her. All day long this rapt attention was paid to the hen Canary. I must say, too, that the hen fully accepted his kind, loving attentions, and in all my experience I never saw a pair of birds more agreeably mated. I did not meddle with them, but left them entirely to themselves after I had provided them with their necessary seeds, egg food and fresh water.

The most exciting and interesting period was quickly drawing near, and on the morning of the fourteenth day I was as delighted as the Linnet-Mule and the hen Canary appeared to be when I heard a little feeble "whistling" going on in the nest, under the Canary. I would not disturb her. I just fed and watered the birds. Then I went aside and patiently waited until the hen would leave the nest to eat and drink.

Feeding the Fully-Hatched Youngster.

When all was quiet, and I (apparently) not watching, the hen jumped off the nest and began to pick up food. I quietly slipped to the cage, opened a door at the side near the nest, and lifted the nest down; there I saw one little, fluffy, animated ball, two eggs, and one half of the shell of an egg adhering to a tiny little chick partly hatched out. Looking carefully at the latter, I found that it had succumbed with half the shell quite fast to its little body. I examined the other two eggs, and saw that they were "turned" in colour; so I left them in the nest, which I replaced after taking out the dead little chick.

All this was done in two or three minutes, by which time the hen was preparing to return to her duties. I put the dead chick on a piece of cotton wool, and got some methylated spirit, which I soaked over to preserve it. In a few minutes' time, when all was quiet, I saw the hen raise herself and begin gently to bob her head up and down; the Linnet-Canary hopped on to the side of the nest box and surveyed her proceedings. I could see then that she was feeding the other fully-hatched youngster. After four or five days I found that the chicks in the two remaining eggs were not sufficiently matured to hatch out, so I removed the eggs, placing two dummy eggs in the nest with the one youngster, in order that the hen should not sit on it too closely. For six or seven days this youngster thrived, but not at the usual speed one notices in the case of robust young Mules or Hybrids.

Towards the ninth day the hen got very restive, and I could see that the young one was not strong enough to raise itself and take enough food from the hen; and it gradually lost strength and died. I was very sorry to see this, for I had begun to build up hopes of maturing at least one. So far, however, I had had practical proof of the egg-fertilising ability of the Linnet-Canary Mule. I took the nest out, and left the pair to themselves except for feeding and watering them, and cleaning the cage out, until the hen began to show signs of wanting to go to nest again. I observed them frequently in the act of mating, also feeding each other. So I gave her a fresh, clean nest, prepared like the previous one. In a few days time she laid, and a clutch of five eggs was the result. She sat extremely well for a few days, and then appeared only partly to cover the eggs for the remaining few days of incubation. As I could not hear or see any signs of young hatching out when they were due, I waited a couple of days, and then when I saw the hen leave the nest I examined the eggs. Three of them were, I found, almost black in colour, and two were semi-transparent. After two or three days' time, I saw the hen off, and I looked in the nest; there I found an egg with all the top of the wide end chipped off it, and a puny dead youngster within. The other eggs did not chip or hatch.

Quite Positive About It.

From this experience I am quite positive about the ability of the Linnet-Canary cock to fertilise eggs. I can only ascribe the partial failure of the eggs to hatch to weakness in the germs, and the reason there was not a more robust fertilisation may have been directly due to the birds travelling so far on the railway and being disturbed so much in practically the midst of the breeding season. The pair were as agreeably mated as I have ever seen a pair of birds during all my experience. I send you these remarks, as I think they may perhaps be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS, to bird breeders generally and to Hybrid-breeders in particular.—CHAS HOULTON.

PRODUCING THE EXHIBITION YORKSHIRE.

By H. C. BROOKS (Horsham).

What Both Birds Should Possess.

GOOD feather is essential in stock birds. Some fanciers almost seem to recommend a coarse-feathered cock, provided he be paired to a high quality, typical hen. But I cannot agree with this course. Both birds of a pair should possess good, short, tight body feather if it is desired that the young should be properly clothed. Long feather, however good in quality, does not fit tight to a bird's body. And remember, 20 points are allowed for feather. But I am aware that it is difficult to find cock birds possessing length of body and legs, and of good outline, and accompanied by really good feather; and one is frequently obliged to make use of a somewhat long feathered cock bird. When this is the case it must certainly be paired to a hen very tight and smooth in feather, or good results will not follow.

Another thing about which there is some diversity of opinion (I am speaking now of stock birds) is a frill. Some will tell you that if a frilled bird is paired to a close feathered, round-breasted partner, the young will for the most part not have frills. But I have not found this so. My experience is that the frill is one of the most difficult things to breed out, and I think the only safe way to avoid having them crop up in one's stock is to reject birds for stock purposes which show a frill—unless it be very slight. These remarks may also be taken to apply to twisted feathers at the throat which some birds possess, as these are so often transmitted to the progeny.

Don't Overlook Length in the Hens.

As regards the hens, let these be slim, leggy, and very finely drawn, and clothed with the tightest and most glossy feather procurable. And don't overlook length in the hens also. Cocks are naturally longer than hens, and a hen measuring 6½ inches is of good length. But don't be persuaded that a very large cock bird and quite a small hen will breed exhibition specimens in plenty. I think much better results would follow the mating of two birds which both come near to the standard. There is just as much likelihood of the youngsters taking after the cock as after the hen, and if both birds are good, typical specimens, the chances of producing exhibition birds are two to one in favour of the evenly matched pair. By all means make up for the deficiencies of one bird by mating it to a partner particularly good in regard to these points, but where possible see that both birds are free from glaring faults.

Colour is not of so much importance as type, but it has its value nevertheless. The cock bird is generally supposed to influence colour more than the hen, but I have not found this so. I have bred rich coloured birds from a pale cock and good coloured hen, and I have also bred pale coloured birds from a rich coloured cock and pale hen. What I recommend with regard to colour is to have as much as possible in both parents, but not at the expense of any other points, for the Yorkshire's chief beauty lies in its shape and position, and these must not be sacrificed for mere colour alone.

I have never introduced green blood direct to improve colour, as I have a good bit of Cinnamon blood running in my bird's veins, and I have been able to keep up colour very well without having to resort to the introduction of fresh blood solely for that purpose; and I am firmly convinced that Cinnamon blood has a beneficial effect on the quality of the feather, giving it, it seems, a softness and delicacy of finish. And birds so bred take the colour food well—or perhaps I should say, show the effect of colour feeding well.

To guard against loss of colour, it is a good plan to pair a clear bird to a ticked or lightly marked partner; but I do not see any harm in pairing two clear birds together if both are pretty well up in colour, although the marked bird should be brought into use on the first signs of colour waning.

Plenty of "Breed" or "Swagger" Needed.

Although no mention is made in the standard of it, a good Yorkshire should be possessed of plenty of "breed" or "swagger." These terms are well understood by fanciers, but they are not easy to define to the uninitiated. It is a something which gives to the bird a somewhat nervous (or should I say "nervy"?) temperatment, and is the principal beneficial result of crossing with the Belgian. Birds possessing a good bit of "breed" not infrequently have rather high shoulders, and they respond readily to the judge's handling. One of a pair of stock birds, therefore (preferably the cock) should show this characteristic, but if showing high shoulders, it should be paired to a bird having neat rounded shoulders, the idea being that at any rate some of the youngsters shall inherit both the "swagger" of the one parent, and the clean, rounded shoulders of the other. Birds answering to this description are well on the way to making exhibition specimens.

Note: I have made no reference in the above to the accompanying drawing. The fact is, I had prepared my essay, and had almost completely copied it in readiness to send in, when, happening to mention the matter to a friend of mine who has some little knowledge of drawing, he very kindly offered to endeavour to make for me a drawing of a typical Yorkshire to accompany my essay, if of any use to me. Needless to say, I gladly accepted the offer; and, considering that my friend has no knowledge whatever of birds, I think he has done extremely well. The time at his disposal was but small, and it is perhaps unfair to criticise his effort at all. But, if I may be allowed to do so, I should like to say that the drawing, to my mind, represents an almost ideal Yorkshire, and the only improvements I can suggest are, that the birds should be the least bit more finely drawn, and have a trifle longer legs set a shade higher in the body.

SEED SAMPLE (W. T., Ely).—The seed sent is a very nice sample of summer rape of good quality.

ANTICIPATION (no Nom de Plume).—The very best treatment for a bird that is "threatening asthma" is to at once remove contributory causes, such as cold draughts, extremes of heat and cold, impure air, etc., as I am frequently advising as the intial step in actual treatment. You ought to have given some particulars about the bird. You do not even say whether it is really ill or not. See reply to "Beeston" on February 17, for full dctails of curing asthma.

AN OLD TOPER (Kilmallock).—Feed the bird the same as advised to "R. H." for two or three weeks. See that all your seeds are perfectly sound and sweet. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, and strew floor with clean, gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice for two days, and afterwards dissolve in each two tablespoonfuls of water a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a fortnight.

NOT SITTING (H.C.).—You had brought the birds forward too early, either by feeding or keeping too warm, and then you did not put them together soon enough when the hen was coming forward for laying. That was the sole cause of the hen behaving as you say. If still in good condition, and the weather at all favourable, put them together again in a week hence, hanging their cages side by side for a day of two beforehand, or placed in such a way that they may make friends, and the cock feed the hen through the wires. I do not advise you to cross the Yorkshire and Norwich.

IN BAD CONDITION (Doubtful, New Southgate).—If there is any doubt of the cage being still infested with mites, deal with it as advised to "H. W." Apart from this, feed and treat bird generally for a month as advised to "H. J. Latham," but you need anoint the swelling you speak of only once or twice, just to ease the irritation. If the fluid magnesia has not quite removed the constipation, commence the above treatment by giving ten drops of syrup of huckthorn in the water for one day. Report result in a month, referring to this reply.

NECESSITY FOR FEEDER (H. Bergan).—Certainly it is not only the most rational, but often the only way out of the difficulty when a hen refuses to feed young more than two or three days to get a second hen available to take charge of the young if the necessity arises. Get a pair of common birds of a known good feeding strain to act as foster parents. Your feeding is very good, and birds should thrive well upon it. See chapter on rearing in Part VIII. of "Our Canaries."

THREE (T. B. W.).—(1) It is easy to account for the pair of birds being together a month, and still show no signs of nesting. They were put together too early, and before they were really ready to mate. You can only exercise patience until a more favourable season arrives. They will probably begin in earnest about the end of this month. Meantime, feed them up judiciously as advised to "V. A. G." on March 2nd; or, for greater details, see CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. Give a crisp young dandelion leaf or two each day. (2) A bath-room may be regarded as one of the very least suitable places for a bird-room. Unless well ventilated, and the air fairly dry, and free from extreme fluctuations of temperature, I should not give it a moment's consideration. Whether a landing would be suitable depends wholly upon the position. If nicely lit, and quite free from draughts or fluctuations, it would be passably fair, but not otherwise. (3) If the increase in temperature in the mechanic's room when the vulcaniser is in use is very great, the room could not be considered very suitable. If only moderate, or if you could select a portion of it where the rise is not very great, and it is also fairly well lit and ventilated, it might make a quite serviceable place for the birds.

SEED SAMPLES (Ajax).—The canary, rape, and niger are all very good, and of high quality, and perfectly suitable for the highest class of birds. The hemp is of a decidedly poor quality, and I would not risk feeding valuable birds upon it.

NOT SINGING (N. Nelson).—You ought to have said how you feed the bird, and where it is kept. See that it is quite free from any cold draughts or extreme fluctuations, and also from red mites. Then treat it for a fortnight the same as advised to "H.R.," except that you may dust the bread and milk with soft sugar, and give the maw separately. If not better in a fortnight, please write again and give the particulars asked for when I shall be glad to help you further.

A WRONG JUDGMENT (E. C.).—Why did not you give some details of treatment as to feeding, etc., and the symptoms shown. The bird certainly has not inflammatiou of the bowels. Treat it the same as advised to "Kilmallock" for a fortnight, and if not then well, write again and give particulars suggested above, referring also to this reply.

BALDNESS IN YORKSHIRE (J. H.).—Baldness is just as frequently the result of wrong treatment as insects. Now the bird is mated you cannot treat it properly, and it is, in any case, doubtful whether the feathers will now be reproduced until the bird moults. If you separate the cock from the hen during incubation and rearing, you may treat him as advised to "H. J. Latham."

TOO FAT (Overfat).—Keep the hen in a good-sized flight cage, and limit the amount of food supplied. Continue giving a staple of bird rape, but use about equal parts of summer rape, cole, and charlock, and give a teaspoonful only each day. Twice a week omit this diet and substitute an equal quantity of equal parts canary and millet. Give a liberal supply of watercress, chickweed, or tender young groundsel, but no apple or other fruit, except a grape, of which you may give one, broken open and fastened on end of perch, twice a week. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of rhubarb sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, but not watery.

WINGS GET IN WAY (F. E. N.).—This seems a rather peculiar case. Are the wing feathers normal, or deformed in some way, or were the flights plucked at the moult, or have the wings been injured in some way? Again, are the claws much overgrown? In the latter event cut the claws back to a proper length. See that the bird and cage are both quite free from insects. Allow bird to bathe freely in fine weather. Finally treat for a fortnight, as advised to "H. J. Latham," and then report result, referring to this reply, and give full particulars concerning the above points. Do not cut the wing feathers, but if the sides of the crest hang over the eye, or the tips turn in and touch the eyeball so as to irritate the eye, clip off the sides of crest, so as to leave the eyes unobstructed and free from irritation.

BAD PLUMAGE (Mrs. King).—First of all see that the bird is being kept under proper healthful conditions, and that its cage is free from red mites. If it is not, deal with it as advised to "H.W." Feed the bird as advised to "R.H.," but slightly dust the bread and milk with flowers of sulphur, each time, and sprinkle it with soft sugar, giving the maw separately. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day for a fortnight. You may slightly anoint any bare place with zinc ointment twice a week, being careful not to apply enough to daub the plumage.

SIZE OF CAGES (A. R.).—Your cages, size 32 ins. by 16 ins. by 8½ ins., for a double breeding cage, would do very nicely for Borders, and would be quite tolerable for Norwich, thousands of them being bred in this size cage. But they are very small for Lancashires, and although there is a large possibility of succeeding with them, I certainly do not advise you to go in for them unless you get cages, say, not less than 20 ins. by 16 ins. by 10 ins., which is quite small enough, and larger than this would be better. The White Blackbird is something of a novelty, although not so very rare. Pied specimens are fairly common.

ABOUT CRESTS (Scholastic).—Like all other breeds, Crests vary considerably in prolificacy and capacity to rear young. I have had specimens equal in these points to the best of common feeders. But this cannot be relied upon as a safe rule, as very many of the best Crests and Crestbreds can only be termed modcrate breeders, and cannot always be relied upon to rear their young. Therefore, when starting with Crests, it is most advisable to have a few pairs of common feeders to fall back upon in case of necessity. Mating a Crest with a Crest-bred is the correct method, save in exceptional cases for some particular object. It is immaterial which sex is the Crested specimen. A Crested cock and Norwich Plainhead hen will produce only Cross-bred. There is no advantage of any kind in such a cross.

NORWICH OUT OF CONDITION (R.H.).—The bird is evidently very much out of condition, but I cannot say whether it was so before you received it. It would scarcely be reasonable to expect the bird exchanged or replaced if it dies after this lapse of time. You should have written the seller earlier, or returned the bird if not satisfied with it in a reasonable time, say, two or three days after you received it. Try what the following treatment will do for it: Staple diet, plain canary. Every second day a half teaspoonful of summer rape, separately, and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw, and also give a leaf of dandelion. Twice a week give a little seed mixture composed of about equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and avoid cold draughts and extreme variations of temperature. In the drinking water give eixe drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week. I should say Canaries could only contract gapes under very serious mismanagement. It is quite useless mating the bird for breeding until better.

ONCE MORE (H.W.).—The proper method for dealing with red mites has frequently been given. It is perfectly useless dusting birds with insect powder. The cages need overhauling. Move birds to temporary cages if possible, and whilst there give a bath daily in which a few drops of essence of quassia have been mixed. Clear out infested cages, probing any loose joints or cracks with a pin to remove as many mites as possible, and burn debris at once. Now mix a dessert-spoonful of Jeyes' Fluid in half a pint of warm water and go over cages thoroughly with this inside and outside, using a small paint brush to work it well into all joints, etc. Repeat this operation twice with an interval of a day between each, and when dry after the third dressing run a drop of the pure Jeyes' into every crack or open joint. Finally repaint or enamel and varnish as may be necessary, and when quite dry birds may be returned. Whilst carrying out operations, see that wall where cages hang and seed boxes, etc., are also thoroughly cleared of any stray mites. Leave no loophole for any to escape by.

MALTESE CANARY (R.H.D.).—As far as I can judge the birds belong to no particular Fancy breed, and are probably just the ordinary domestic Canary of the country, analogous to the common type of German, or Roller, as bred in this country. There are distinct traces of even-markings, but this occurs among Rollers as well as cultivated fancy breeds, although it is quite possible the birds may be a degenerate type of Yorkshire or Border Fancy. If you mate them with any of our Fancy breeds, the young will be cross-breds, and only of value as songsters, but to get progeny of an improved size and style, I should advise you to mate them with clear yellow Yorkshires of a dark-eyed strain, and properly bred from even-marked birds. BIRD HOUSE (W. P.).—(1) If the glass section top is set in a hinged frame, so that it can be raised when required, this and the side windows will provide ample ventilation during the hot summer months. Of course, the space must be covered with netting underneath. For other times, insert a small framework of slats, 9 by 6ins., made on the principle of a venetian blind under each window near the floor, and another in the highest angle at each end. I am not quite clear whether the one end of house abuts on wall. If it does, then make the ventilator in the free end a little long. (2) I advise you to make 20in. single breeders all of the same pattern. See Parts I. and II. of "Our Canaries" for full details of all kinds of cages.

NOT BREEDING LAST SEASON (Mrs. Smith).—The manner in which the hen behaved last season, sitting in nest pan, etc., is due to an undeveloped; or, in birds that have already bred, probably an atrophied, condition of the reproductive organs. They are most unsatisfactory cases to deal with. If the hen was a young one last season, it is possible she may breed successfully this year, in which case I should be pleased to hear of the fact. Put her up a diet of plain canary seed, with a liberal supply of crisp young dandelion, and a saline aperient every second day for a week. After this feed her up as advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. You would find this class of hen very fully written of in Part VII. of "Our Canaries." As regards the other bird it is quite true that many cocks sing very little whilst mated, and if you were correctly informed of its previous history there cannot be a doubt of its sex. Still, without that previous knowledge I should have said the bird was probably a hen. Try what a fortnight of the treatment advised "R. H." will do.

BAD SKIN AND PLUMAGE (H. J. Latham).—You are not feeding the bird correctly, and are probably also keeping it in unhealthy circumstances. See that it is in a cosy temperature, not overheated, quite free from cold draughts, and not exposed to the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Make yourself quite sure that the cage is now free from mites, and keep floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. Also keep perches quite clean. For the next fortnight give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flour of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a little mixed seed, and four times a week a spray of greenstuff. In the drinking water add ten drops of lemon juice, as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every third. Anoint the unhealthy skin three times a week sparingly with lanocyllin. Allow bird to bathe freely in mild weather.

AVIARY (Treaty).—If, as I surmise, you intended allowing the birds to fly at large in the whole of aviary, you should put the cock in with the hens altogether, and put in your nesting sites. If you run him with each hen separately, assuming the partitions are fixtures, you should keep cock in the centre, and a hen on each side, and admit him to one hen first, and when she has gone to nest, move him to the other. Then return him to the centre when second hen has gone to nest, until the first hen is again ready for him. If the smell of turpentine is very strong in aviary, you should allow it to stand in the open for a day or two. Before putting birds in, stop all the moth holes you mention, or you will have endless trouble from red mites. Get a little soft putty and press it as deeply as you can into all the holes by means of a spatula of some kind, and then paint over it with a hard-drying paint or enamel.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

AUSTRALIAN ROSEATE COCKATOO (Mother Shipton).—In my former reply I fully considered the matter; I regulated the diet, advised remedies, so as to reduce any heated condition of the blood, and to tone the bird up generally. A condition of things that has been going on for three months cannot be put right at once; the treatment must be persevered with. Some skin parasites are so minute that a very powerful microscope is needed to reveal them; hence the precautions as to spraying and dusting. In addition to the treatment already advised, give a sedative. Dissolve three grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup, give the bird this in doses of three drops at intervals of two hours till the whole is consumed (one teaspoonful of syrup should be sufficient), and after one day's interval repeat it. Then let a week go by, and if the excitement is continued repeat it again. If you are able to tell when the excitement is coming on, a dose of the sedative may check it or mitigate its severity. In using ointments, etc., only sufficient must be used to moisten the skin; it should not run amongst and grease the plumage. I have used "Zam-buk" with good results as a palliative, but it is the bird's system that must be put right. If the above treatment does not bring about a gradual improvement, you had better consult a vet. Mr. Yates, who makes P.M. examinations for this paper, on seeing the bird might be able to give relief to the heated skin, or note at once some internal trouble not observed by you.

ORANGE BISHOPS AND BUDGERIGARS (Orangeman).—(1) Yes, and as a rule the Orange Bishop is well able to look after himself in any company, though there is always a risk in associating Finchlike birds with either Budgerigars, Lovebirds, or any Parrakeets. (2) Canary, millet, millet sprays, green food, and a few live insects, the latter are especially essential during the moulting and colour change periods. (3) Usually from July or August till the following March, but the period is variable with individuals, even when kept in the same district, and it may vary a week or so either way. (4) No. (5) Now is a good time, as the birds are still obtainable in colour, when the cock is known by his fiery orange and black plumage, and the hen by her more sober garb of pale and dark browns, arrayed bunting-like. Do not, however, put them out of doors till April.

CUTTHROATS NOT REARING YOUNG (A.W.).—There is a good deal of individualism in pairs of this species, even in the aviary, and during periods of over stimulation they often throw out the young and go to nest again; but in your instance they have too much company. Even in a cage of yours, not more than three pairs should be kept for breeding purposes, though, of course, you can keep more and be content with casual results. However, there are no birds in the cage likely to interfere with them. I should gradually cease giving the live food, and supply ants' eggs regularly and soft food when they are feeding young, and I should opine you'll have better luck with later nests. Such mishaps often occur with young birds with their first nests, but if the practice is persisted in, it is "sheer cussedness."

BREEDING WAXBILLS IN A CAGE (Dulwich).—Not much has been done in this country in the way of breeding foreign birds in cages, but very fair success has been met with by Continental aviculturists, though, of course, except with species domesticated as the Canary, there are many disappointments in the breeding of wild species, whether British or foreign. You ought to succeed with the Cordon Bleus, and I should say you will do so later, but your chances would be greatly enhanced if you could let them have the cage to themselves. When young are hatched, keep up a continuous supply of millet sprays, and supply blighty sprays of roses and fruit trees, and, if in season, supply ants' eggs, also a little sponge cake, moistened with boiling milk. It is the company of so many kinds (5) within the compass of a cage that distracts them, and takes away their desire to incubate.

SUNBIRDS, ZOSTEROPS, ETC. (H.B.).—I should say a cage with bars half-inch apart would confine the Sunbird, but I have never tested it, as what few cages I use are all ½in. But I should certainly have no hesitation in putting them behind ¼in. mesh wire netting. Sometimes, however, a bird will attempt to escape from a cage (I do not think the Sunbird would), that would make no effort to do so from a roomy cage. All the Zosterops are very similar; they vary a little in size, and the intensity of their colouring. The African species is a little larger and brighter in colour than the Australian one, and the Indian species is much smaller. In a roomy cage all are very attractive, and as active as Tits. The Red-sided Tits are active birds. They often run along the top wires of their cage wrong side up. So give them a roomy cage. Use twiggy branches for perches; get a piece of natural bark and stretch this across back of cage; the birds will then hammer away at and crawl about this, instead of being so much on cage wires. The size of a bird's cage should be decided by its demeanour (active or otherwise); small species often need the largest cage, and all Tits come under this category.

BIRD-ROOM FLIGHT (F. E. N.).—I take it your flight is about 6 ft. by 8 ft.; certainly the birds can be put in with the hen Canarics. What I really advise is for you to put a wire cage outside the window; you could stand bath in this, and the birds at will could take either a shower or sun bath, according to the weather; it would suffice if the cage projected outside the window 18 inches. Having the bath here (in outside cage) would keep your flight nice and dry. It is rather difficult to meet your requirements, for most Finches require soft food when they are rearing young, similar to Canaries, but it need not be egg food. Any soft food mixture advertised in our columns for Finches and Softbills could be used. If you do not require the hen Canaries for breeding with their own kind, get the following five cocks, turn them in all together, and you should get some interesting hybrids: Alario Finch, Black-headed Siskin, Hooded Siskin, Cape Canary (Grey-necked Serin), and Grey Singing Finch. Get also a pair of Zebra Finches; these are almost certain breeders, and you would gain experience from them, and their value is 7s. 6d. to 10s. per pair. As they are prolific they are worth breeding. I really advise your getting a year's experience with such as these before going in for costly pairs. No species is immune from egg binding, which is usually prevalent when northerly or easterly winds prevail. Whether they breed or not, let them take their chance. I should put in the following Waxbills, they are worth their place for beauty, vivacity, and interest: Grey, Golden-breasted, and Orange-cheeked. The Diamond Dove is a Dove, and the Diamond Sparrow is a Finch. I do not think the latter would breed in your room. Write again if need is not fully met.

PILEATED FINCHES, ETC. (M. F. K.).—(1) Pileated Finches, bred in two outdoor aviaries last season, and made unsuccessful attempts in others, and I have found them harmless with small Finches. (2) The difficulty is rearing the young, as in addition to their usual dietary they must have a liberal supply of live food, mealworms, gentles, live ants' eggs, smooth caterpillars, etc. If you can supply this there is no reason why you should not succeed, as both species are ready enough to nest. (3) Yes. Nonpareils and Indigo Buntings agreed with small Finches, but not always with each other, and they could be kept in your aviary all the year round. You can keep either species with the Waxbills, etc., without fear, but if you include both you must keep them under observation for a time till their demeanour towards each other is ascertained.

GOULDIAN FINCHES, ETC. (P.O.).—It is difficult to know what to do. I should give Dinneford's Magnesia occasionally, also Byno-phosphates—both in the drinking water. Should also advise their being kept in the coolest part of your conservatory, out of draught. This consignment was brought over on the open deck, and have been kept in a cold room since arrival. It is the prostration following importation, and nothing but nursing on the lines stated will bring them round; with the care you are giving them they ought to pull round. Keep millet sprays continually in cage and supply Canary and white millet seed in separate hoppers. (2) I think the Sunbird will pull round, and I cannot add anything to previous advice. Again importation prostration, which does not always manifest itself on arrival, but develops a little later. Keep this bird in the warmest part of the house. It should pull round; you are doing all you can. (3) The Quail and Aurora Finches were evidently both in a weak condition, and I do not think the preparation had anything to do with their death; it was not poisonous. In my opinion it was another case of careful nursing almost, but not quite, triumphing over the importation prostration. (4) You can only keep this bird warm; if it does not improve, put on the treatment advised for the other Sunbird, as even a change of diet, though both are so similar, is often helpful. Re your P.S., I do not think so, but I should certainly encourage the consumption of as much canary seed as possible. Get a little lettuce and grass seeds, and give the Gouldians a pinch of this daily. Give all your seedeaters a small piece of lettuce leaf daily; mostly all Finches are fond of it. Nearly all Foreign Finches consume much more millet than canary seed. All postal replies leave me per return, but queries have to be forwarded to me first.

AILING AMAZON (Mrs. C.).—So long as the swelling returns it must be carefully pricked, and after a short interval the place cleaned with tepid water and anointed with a little antiseptic ointment (from any chemist). A little gentle pressure should be applied to the swelling, so as to exude any possible contents. Give the bird every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water, and supply no other drinkables for the day; on other days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the same quantity of water. This is sufficient for one day's supply. If the voidings become watery loose, you must lengthen the period between the doses of magnesia. Confine dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, and green food. If it is accustomed to boiled maize continue it, but not more than one tablespoonful daily; the dry seed mixture is better for it. Keep cuttlebone and grit (not sand) in cage. If there is no improvement in a week or ten days, write again, fully explaining how bird has been fed in the past, and giving full details of its then present condition.

BLACK-CHEEK LOVEBIRD (P.H.S.).—This bird evidently caught a chill, which has checked the moult and left her in a weakened condition, and as she tones up her plumage will doubtless improve. Do not neglect green food, even during winter months; fresh lettuce, and also sweet apple if she will take it. It is possible the swelling is a case of prolapsus, commonly known as "down behind," and in such case a vet. had best attend to it. I should keep the bird warm, and foment swelling twice daily with a hot (not hot enough to cause discomfort) decoction of camomile flowers; dry with a cloth, and anoint with clean olive oil, but do not use sufficient oil to run among and grease the plumage. Also give at intervals (bird's condition must decide frequency) doses of Dinneford's magnesia to keep bowels loose, but not watery. When not giving the magnesia, put byno-phosphates in the drinking water; half a teaspoonful of either to two tablespoonfuls of water will be a suitable strength. It's a pity they will not touch green food or fruit as it would help. Should like to hear how she progresses, say, in a week or ten days' time.

Managing Muling Couple.

Miss Gatehouse.—You can certainly follow the advice given in the various articles; they record actual experiences. At the same time, different fanciers have different ideas, and you must adopt those which fit in with your out cages, etc. It is possible for half-a-dozen or more ways to meet with equal success. Run the wired slide down the centre of the cage, leaving the Goldfinch on the side, and the hen Canary on the other. When the Goldie is in breeding condition and vigorous song, they will not take long to strike up an acquaintanceship. Probably he will commence to sing to her through the partition wires; also to feed her. These are the first signs of an "understanding." When you notice these things, put a few coarse pieces of material (moss) out of a nest-bag into the hen's compartment. If she commences to carry these about in her beak, you can bang in the nest-pan (or box), giving her at the same time a little more nesting material. Should she carry the latter into the nest-pan, and appear bent on nest building in earnest, hang the nest-bag up against the wires, or put it in the nesting rack, if you use those appliances. First thing next morning (the earlier the better) withdraw the centre partition, letting the Goldie run with the hen. If you retire quickly and discreetly on the other side of the room, you will no doubt see the hen "call" to the Finch, and he, if really in breeding condition, is not likely to lose any time in doing the needful towards ensuring fertile eggs. It is well not to hurry one's muling hens, or they are apt to get on with their first nest before the Finch is fit. Keep an eye on the Finch at first, until you learn his disposition. Some pull the nest about, and some will put their beaks through the eggs when laid. Such birds should be run with the hens only for a hour or two each morning and for a short time in the evening, too, being shut off during the day, and entirely (with the solid wood partition) as soon as the hen commences to sit. The procedure applies equally well to all Finches, besides Goldies.

Goldfinch for Muling.

Bill.—Your query involves the telling of quite an old story. You should get a scrapbook and cut out answers likely to be useful. It would save one a lot of repetition. Feed your bird on the following seed mixture—Teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower, safflower and summer rape half-part each. The sunflower and safflower I crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine. The safflower must be cracked, or it will not be touched. In addition, I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part: (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit" for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible). They will breed, however, even if the beak is not quite clear; I have had plenty do so.

Linnets in Breeding Condition.

E. E. W.—You can tell when a Linnet is in breeding condition buy its beak, which then turns a dark slate-blue, by its free song and, when it is "fierce," by its dropping its wings with a kind of "shivering" motion as it pours out its song. I have several times recently given details of the feeding. Let the stock mixture be: Canary and teazle three pints each, summer rape one pint, charlock and linseed half-a-pint each. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied) by way of a change, while your bird would undoubtedly benefit by being given a teaspoonful of good hemp seed every other day. Let him have a little green food, flowering dandelion tops and the young leaves, also seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain, and groundsel freely as obtainable. To bring them in condition for song, etc., the great "secret" is to give them a supply of the best old hemp: crack it lightly. Also put in the "tit-bit" drawer every other day a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, plantain, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower, and lettuce. The "Nutshell" booklet upon the Linnet would be very helpful to you; also Mr. Norman's book upon British Hardbills.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Very Young Mules.

Barnstaple.—It is not a record to have young Mules about to leave the nest now. I have this year seen announcements of still earlier birds in Cage Birds. It is very early, however, I freely admit. When they are commencing to feed themselves offer (in addition to soft food) maw seed, lightly cracked canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, and groundsel. Don't at the same time forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar. Steep some summer rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a towel before offering it to the birds. This is very good, especially where anyone experiences difficulty in getting green food regularly, for which it is to a certain extent a substitute. All crushed seed should be prepared fresh daily. Wean them off egg food as soon as possible, substituting for it home-made egg cake, moistened, if necessary, with a spot or two of milk or of water; or a little stale madeira or sponge cake, or crushed sweet biscuit (maizena wafer, tea or Osborne), also moistened with milk. Egg cake made and baked at home really does not need damping. Don't make the mistake, when dropping egg, of leaving off soft food entirely.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

The Railwaymen's Blackbird (W. Radcliffe).—We do not quite understand why you should send a cutting taken from Cage Birds to Mr. Fulljames. We hope he reads his own copy every week!

An Aquarium (F. Williamson).—You are making many mistakes, as you will gather from the "Nutshell" booklet. You are keeping too many fish of large size, and the sample of food you send we do not think adequate (it is not fresh, for one thing). You need running water (constantly changing), with weeds, snails, etc., to keep so large a number of big fish in your aquarium in good health.

Report of Lecture (S. Andrews).—We are much obliged to you for sending this to us, and will publish it at an early date.

Catching Birds (J.A.).—It would be impossible to answer your question except by writing a long article. You should send three penny stamps to Messrs. Wyman and Sons, Ltd., printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C., for copies of the Wild Bird Acts applying to the counties of Somerset and Gloucestershire; also 7d. to Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, London, N., for a copy of their "Bird Catchers' and Dealers' Guide." From these you will get all the information you desire. Broadly speaking, catching is prohibited between February and September, but the close season varies in different districts. The Linnet builds in furze or gorse bushes (a favourite site), blackthorn and whitethorn bushes, and shrubs and hedges generally.

HOW TO REAR CANARIES.

By H. A. WADDINGTON (Earlestown, Lancs.)

Now that the season is drawing near at which full eggs and full nests are the fancier's hoped-for portion, this account of a successful system of rearing will be perused with interest.

TO me the rearing of young Canaries is certainly the most interesting part of the captivating hobby of bird-breeding, and I presume most fanciers will agree with me in this, so I mean to enter fully into details of the crowning part of all our studies and endeavours. I use coarse pine sawdust, disinfected with Jeyes' Fluid, for the floors of my cages, and hang on the front of the cages (inside) within easy access from one of the top perches, a tin drinker filled with good grit. My birds' "Bill of Fare" from the end of the moulting season until the end of the year:—Good Spanish in the seed-box; clean water every day; twice a week a teaspoontul of a mixture of German rape, blue maw, teazel, white millet, gold of pleasure, linseed, hemp and inga; twice a week a piece of apple or a spoonful of grated carrot, whichever the bird prefers. If any bird seems inclined to constipation, give once a week in the drinking water as much Epsom Salts as will lie on a sixpence, or as some birds dislike the saline taste of Epsom Salts, a good substitute is sulphate of soda.

During January I give once a week a small teaspoonful of egg-food made from a hard-boiled egg, and equal weight of home-made bread crumbs, with a little castor sugar and blue maw seed sprinkled on the top. In February I give the egg-food twice a week, and towards the end of the month I give young Dandelion leaves instead of the apple or carrot. I also hang the bath on as often as possible, every other day if the morning is suitable, and remove at noon so as to give the bird plenty of time to dry before dusk.

Treatment During March.

About the beginning of March I put my birds in the breeding cages (until then I have all my hens together in flight cages) the hen in one compartment, the cock in the other, keeping the circular hole closed until I see them feed each other through the wires at the bottom of the centre partition. I then allow the birds to run together, and place in a nest-pan. My nest-pans are white pottery, in which I paste a white swansdown lining, and are suspended by a wire to a screw in the back of the cage, allowing the edge of the nest to be slightly higher than the two top perches, and between them. Being above the perches causes the bird on leaving the nest to rest first on the edge of the nest-pan, and thereby prevents many an egg or youngster being pulled out. Placing it between the perches enables the parents to feed from both sides of the nest. I now give the egg-food and dandelion more lavishly. As the eggs are laid I take them away and replace them with dummy eggs until the evening of the day the third egg is laid. I then replace them and give the inside of nest a good dusting with powder (three parts of insect powder to one part Hellbore powder). By moving the eggs as laid, you will find the youngsters are all hatched about the same time, and they all have an equal chance of being fed.

We will now imagine that your hens are on full eggs, and plenty. During incubation you can leave in the cock, or remove him; you must be guided by circumstances; there is no royal road to success, and as I have previously said, the birds will always have something to say about your arrangements. I prefer to remove the cock (if permitted) when replacing the eggs. Whilst sitting, I give the hens just a small quantity of egg-food every day, as it is a very trying time, as you will agree if you weigh a bird at the beginning and completion of incubation. At mid-day on the thirteenth day of sitting I run the cock with the hen again, and give a teaspoonful of egg-food and an unlimited supply of hemp seed. When the young are three days old I also give young lettuce fresh every time I give the egg-food, which is three times a day, gradually increasing the proportion of bread in the egg-food, until on being weaned off it is in the proportion of one egg to four times its weight of bread.

Worth the Extra Trouble.

When nine or ten days old, I place the youngsters in a fresh nest dusted with insect powder; such precautions are worth the extra trouble in keeping red mite conspicuous by their absence. I also crush the hemp seed, as this lightens the labour of the parents. I never use dandelion after the hens have gone to nest with the first round, as it has a tendency to make the hen broody again before she has finished with the first nest. I grow my own lettuce in a small frame, but if you prefer to buy it you need not experience much difficulty in being supplied by someone who grows it. When the parents are feeding young, I think it impossible to give them too much hemp seeds or green food; these and clean water are the best "persuasive powers" possible to bring up strong healthy youngsters to three weeks old, or a little later. If during this time you find a youngster on the cage floor apparently dead, take it in your hand and breathe on it for a few minutes; this treatment will often revive it, when you can replace it in the nest.

You will now have to keep a strict watch on the youngsters, for if the hen wants to go to nest again, she has a beautiful lining for a new nest very convenient to the site of her building operations, namely the feathers on the youngsters, and sometimes she will half strip them in a few hours unless prevented. If you have cages similar to mine (double breeders) you simply put the youngsters in the other compartment, and only allow the parents to feed them through the wires in the slide. If not, you use a nursery cage, or a Yorkshire show cage. Place the youngsters in it and hang it on the front of the breeder about three inches lower, so as to minimise the chances of plucking as much as possible.

Why Plucking Should be Prevented.

The reason you must prevent this plucking as much as possible, is because the feathers are (broadly speaking) formed from the blood and this extra drain on a young bird's system is a severe handicap on the bird's development, and the first six weeks of a bird's life either makes or mars it. On taking the young away I place in the cage some of the same egg-food the parents are having, and some crushed hemp seeds in a separate vessel (their beaks are not yet strong enough to crush seed). Do not give ordinary drinking water. Mix each day, in rotation, with the water, a little infusion of gentian, Parish's Chemical Food and lime water, or instead of the last, as much bicarbonate of soda as will lie on a sixpence—to a quart of water. If you use lime water you will find a film forms on the surface in a short time, and the youngsters dislike to drink it then. As soon as they feed themselves, place in a cage by themselves, discontinue the infusion of gentian and Parish's Chemical Food, just giving the lime water (or the alternative) about twice a week until they are well on hard seed.

You will find that youngsters are as a rule great gluttons, and it is generally through eating too much and drinking too much ordinary water that they bring on stomach troubles. I find milk sop given occasionally, made by pouring boiling milk over stale bread and then straining off all superfluous milk, then just sprinkled over with a little castor sugar and blue maw seed, the greatest panacea for baby Canary troubles, along with lime water or the alternative.

When five weeks' old, hang on the seed box filled with Spanish Canary seed, the top layer being crushed to persuade them to eat it, and gradually wean off the hemp seeds and egg-food; at six weeks they are generally on hard seed.

Eating and Drinking Too Much.

If you notice any of your birds huddled up, with feathers puffed out, and a general disinclination to either live or die, they are most likely suffering from inflammation, probably caused by eating and drinking too much. When you notice birds in such a condition, begin to relieve them at once; it is folly to wait until they are seriously bad before doing something for them. Take away all hard seed if you have given them any. Catch the bird and give three drops of equal parts castor oil and tincture of rhubarb. Replace in the cage and give milk sop; and put 10 drops of tincture of aconite in the drinking water. On the second day give milk sop again, with the addition of a little powdered aromatic chalk sprinkled on the top, and give lime water to drink for a couple of days at least, and they will most probably be all right again. Get on hard seed by giving rape soaked for 24 hours in cold water, occasionally changing the water, and drained as dry as possible, and mixed with a little powdered biscuit for a day or two, gradually weaning off.

I begin giving my youngsters a bath as soon as they leave their parents, and also begin to steady them by hanging a show cage on the front of the box cage, by running them in and out occasionally, they soon learn what is expected of them. When about ten weeks old for first round youngsters, and seven for later ones, I commence giving colour-food made from bread, hard-boiled egg, and a little tasteless pepper, gradually increasing the quantity of pepper until I get it the required strength. They are then placed on the fare given at the commencement of my essay.

By following the above routine I have experienced very good results; it is worth a trial, and I am convinced that anyone who adopts it will find that strong, healthy young birds will be reared.

THE BIRD THAT REACHED MY HEART.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

If I were reduced to keeping only one bird, my choice, says the writer of this article, would fall upon the Gold-fronted Fruitsucker.

DURING the past two years the number of rare and gorgeous tropical and other feathered gems from foreign climes reaching our shores has been almost legion. Recently, those "Tiny Feathered Exquisites," the Indian Sunbirds, have become almost common, while the equally beautiful Sugar Birds have been quite numerous; and the number and variety of gorgeous Tanagers obtainable has indeed been legion. But exquisite, rare and beautiful as most of the above undoubtedly are, they do not surpass, either in beauty or interest, the subject of this little sketch—viz. the Gold-fronted Fruitsucker (Chloropsis aurifrons). Extravagant as my language may perchance appear to some, it does not misrepresent the bird, for it is impossible to exaggerate such a "feathered exquisite." It is a "dream of loveliness," and if a thing of beauty is a joy for ever, this certainly must be true of the Gold-front, for apart from its beauty all its other attributes are above the average. Just as we exclaim "How Lovely!" as we gaze upon some glowing sunset, so in like manner shall we often exclaim as we see this bird flashing about in a roomy flight, or with outspread wings—butterfly like—in a roomy cage. It has beauty of form, gorgeous, yet not garish, plumage, and many desirable and interesting characteristics.

The genus Chloropsis has been variously designated Harewas, Green Bulbuls, Chlorops and Fruitsuckers. Of all these the last-mentioned is undoubtedly the appellation for general use; it is descriptive and not cumbersome.

On Its Native Heath.

Its range is a wide one—over the various provinces of India, frequenting both the wooded and cultivated districts. From various writers and traveller-naturalists we learn that Gold-fronts are strictly arboreal in habits and go about either singly or in pairs. But while very active on their feet when in the branches, they are very awkward when on the ground, their method of progression being by a series of awkward hops, but in their native wilds they are not often met with on the ground.

They feed principally on insects, searching the leaves of trees for prey with a sort of sideways vision (I have observed this frequently in captivity; they often appear unable to see an insect placed directly in front of the beak, but directly the head is turned they observe it at once, as evidenced by their quickness in seizing it). Amid the branches of trees and on the wing they are most active and graceful. Their flight is undulating, very similar to that of the Wagtail.

Its Emerald Garment.

The intensity or otherwise of the hue of its garment varies considerably. Undoubtedly locality and age are responsible for this, as with all the specimens I have possessed there has been an increase of the golden-sheen with each moult, after the nestling plumage has once been shed. An adult Gold front is the richest of silky grass-greens in colour, the upper parts being more or less overlaid with a lovely golden-bronzy sheen; the shoulder of each wing is adorned with a patch of shining turquoise blue; the bastard wing is ultra-marine-blue and the flights deep bluish-green; the sides of face and throat are velvet-black, relieved by two moustachial streaks of bright blue; the centre of the throat is also blue right up to the base of the lower mandible, where it forms a junction with the moustachial streak; the forehead and fore crown are fiery golden-orange; a distinct golden-orange surrounds the base of the black facial and throat patches, gradually merging into the green of the lower part.

Solving the Sex Problem.

I have not yet been able to arrive at a knowledge of any difference in the plumage of the sexes. Mr. Teschemaker, who has possessed a true pair of this species, found that the black face patches did not extend beyond the eye with the female, and that the eye side of this patch was almost straight. Dr. Amsler, of Eton, has a true pair which have hatched out (but not reared) three broods in his aviary; he has examined them, and so have Mr. W. R. Temple and myself, without being able to establish any satisfactory distinction between them. Recently I had an opportunity of a close examination of them at the late Windsor and Eton Show, and it appeared to me that the hen was a wee bit smaller, that the frontal band was also slightly less intense, and that the face patch was more restricted; but the difference was very slight, and it was difficult, even in a cage, to tell t'other from which for long together, and there the question must remain for the present.

The Rev. C. D. Farrar, describing his Malabar Fruitsucker (this species differs only in plumage from the Gold-front by having the centre of the throat black, this portion being blue in the Gold-front), states that the hen is considerably smaller, and of a different shade of green impossible to describe, but easy to see in the actual specimen; her forehead is not so bright, and the yellow area is a little more restricted. With the Gold-front, from four pairs I have examined, the distinctions are not so clear, being almost infinitesimal, but the fortunate possessor of a true pair would be able to distinguish which was which by the song and mannerisms of the respective birds.

A Great Mimic.

The natural song of the species contains many rich and full notes, and some harsh ones also; some, however, are quite flute-like. But Mr. Gold-front is so merry and whole-hearted about it, that even when he indulges in this alone, his melody seldom displeases anyone. Even in a state of nature he is a mimic, and utters in a realistic manner the calls and cries of the other feathered denizens that share with him his native heath. In captivity, it is more so, but though I have seen many of these delightful birds and heard of still more, I shall write of but one, my present bird.

In the winter he used to share a flight 4ft. by 2ft. by 4ft. high, with a Shama, with whom he never fraternised; in fact, they lived together in a state of armed neutrality. He never mimicked the Shama's song, nor yet that of the Jamaican Hangnests with whom he often had a spar through the wire netting dividing their respective enclosures.

The first evidence I had of his powers of mimicry was his perfect reproduction of the scream of the Jendaya Conure, which fortunately he has now forgotten; but in the spring when he went out of doors with Parrakeets, Thrushes, and Babblers all occupying the same aviary, he copied none of them, but turned his attention to the song of the English Blackbird (these frequenting my garden in some numbers), which he soon reproduced in a most realistic manner, and it was a delight to listen to him. After he had perfected this, he turned his attention to the calls of Cockateels, Budgerigars, Cardinals, etc., and introduced them all at times, occasionally treating (?) me to a general mixture. But to the delight of his owner, it was the Blackbird's song that pleased him best.

A Wonderful Convivial Gathering of Fanciers in Yorkshire.

Annual Social and Prize Distribution of the Yorkshire Specialist Societies. Remarkable Display of Valuable Trophies. Some Splendid Cups, etc., Won Outright.

THE magnificent gathering at the Market Tavern, Bradford, on Saturday last caused one's thoughts to go in mood reminiscent back to the year 1890, when the first efforts were made in the direction of organising the Yorkshire Canary breeders. Those who attended the conferences, which began at Wakefield in the spring of 1890, and finished with the founding of the Yorkshire Union of Ornithological Societies at Bradford later in the same year, little thought how strong and robust would be the growth of the seed they then planted. At that time the societies in the neighbourhood were few and the shows held in the club rooms of local public houses and beer shops did not command much support; the quality of the exhibits was not of such superlative excellence as it is to-day; five to forty shillings was the general run of prices for well bred Yorkshires; occasionally higher prices were obtained, but we know of more than one Palace winner that did not cost a sovereign. The atmosphere of the Fancy was not so pure as it is to-day. Staining, painting, plucking and trimming were rampant, and the fanciers of that time were not so refined in character as are the breeders of to-day, they seemed to prefer "making" a prize winner, to breeding one!

What the Yorkshire Union Has Accomplished.

Thanks to the Yorkshire Union, all this has been altered. It has encouraged and assisted the honest struggling fanciers. It has put fear into the heart of the dishonest, staining and painting are practically unknown, and very little trimming is practised. One cannot say it is quite unknown, but it is not so prevalent as it was, because breeders of to-day are of a more thoughtful turn of mind, and they breed on more scientific lines than did the breeders of old; thus there is less occasion to trim. The Yorkshire Union has lifted the Yorkshire Fancy out of the atmosphere of the tap-room and set it upon a higher plane, and as a consequence we find that its devotees are given the patronage and support of those in very high places in the land. The Lord Mayors of each of the great West Riding cities of Leeds, Sheffield, and Bradford, have shown interest in the work; members of the House of Lords and the House of Commons have done the same, whilst many a town and city councillor has helped on the good work, as have the clergy, too.

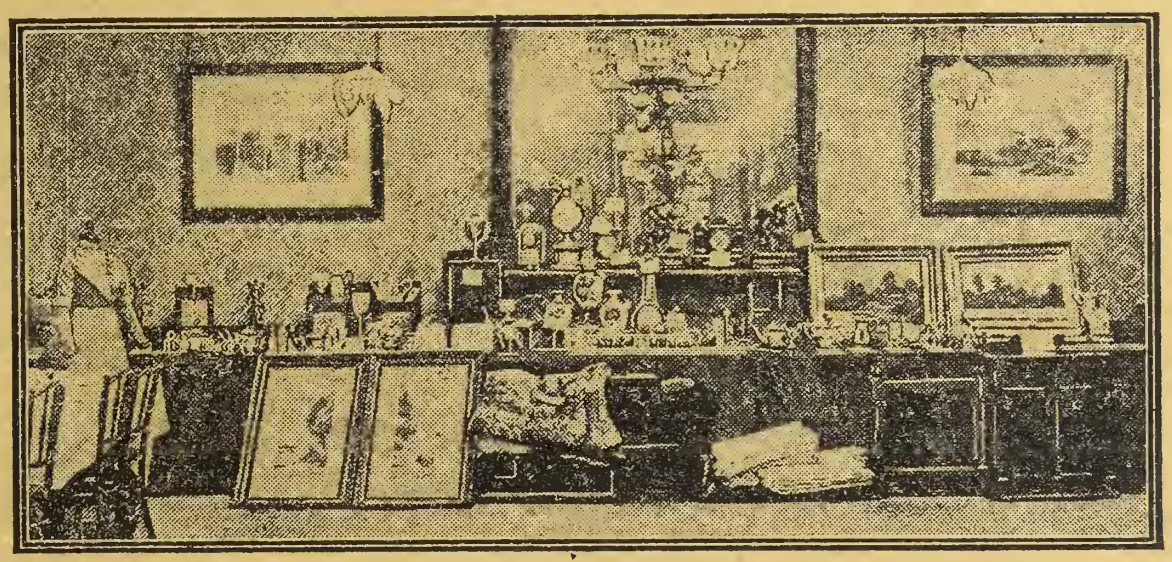
To-day, the Yorkshire Union has a membership of 1,200, but this figure does not represent one fifth of the breeders who dwell in the county. Many are not members of any society, and further, the Yorkshire Union is practically confined to Bradford and the district in the immediate vicinity. The shows are held in schools and other public huildings, and the breeders, instead of heing scorned and looked down upon by a number of their fellows, are now considered, and rightly so, to be engaged in a work which makes for the moral uplifting of the working-man, and the improvement of his position both socially and financially.

Goodwill and Merriment Reign Supreme.

On Saturday last the special prizes distributed ran into three figures in number, as they did in value, whilst one trophy alone was worth £30. A wonderful trihute to the changed condition from the old days of copper kettles, etc. All this has heen hrought about by the efforts of the Yorkshire Union. From it has sprung a number of specialist cluhs dealing with the Yorkshire Fancy, also one which has the advancement of the Norwich as its ohject. Had there been no Yorkshire Union there would possibly have been no Cage Birds prizes, which during the last four years have totalled between £140 and £150. There would not have been Mr. Shackleton's unique gift, no Y.C.C. cups and specials, nor any of the other great benefits to which we have referred. Great honour is due and should be given to those who founded the Yorkshire Union, to those who have piloted it through the two decades of its existence, and to those who are now in authority. They have, indeed, done great and lasting work, not the least of which has heen the raising of the value of Yorkshire Canaries from shillings to pounds.

Saturday's gathering went with a vim and swing which betokened much careful thought, and hard work in its organisation and execution. It spoke of harmony, good fellowship, and honest endeavour to uplift the Fancy and do away with all that is unbrotherly, and unsportsmanlike. Proud, indeed, must have been the men responsible for the great and good work that is being done as they looked over the sea of faces heaming with satisfaction, goodwill, and merriment. The ahsence of Mr. Sunderland was the suhject of much regret, but Mr. H. H. Towers made a most excellent substitute, and the ease and speed with which the evening's entertainment was gone through said much for his ability as a leader.

Mr. Halliday made a most excellent speech concerning the work of the Yorkshire C.C., marked by a conciseness and pithiness as commendable as its practicability. Full of fire and enthusiasm as he is, Mr. Halliday was forced into the minor key when he had to refer to the unappreciative spirit shown by many of the novices.



A RECORD DISPLAY OF SPECIAL PRIZES.

The tables literally groaned under the weight of the good things piled upon them.

There was no need for our old friend, Mr. "Dick" Garnett, to plead he is no orator. His speech was full of Yorkshire "go," and made "racy" with many a good point, and he quite brought down the house when he said: "If there are any here who have not paid, now is the time they should." There is much truth in what Mr. Garnett said as to the Green-marked breeders having punished the Cinnamon-marked, and also as to their indehtedness to them. "Dick" also scored when he called on Mr. Luther Ogden to stand up and show the sort of stuff the Cinnamon-marked Club put into the suits it gave away!

"Ahr Albert fra Accrington" made a strong appeal for support for the Open Norwich Club, and for the birds of the chubby hreed. Mr. Hirst knew he was talking to Yorkshire lasses when he spoke so strongly about the "brass" there is in Norwich. Of all the prize distrihutors, Mr. Shackleton was the most hrief and business-like—he intended the business of the evening to roll on.

Chairman Towers looked as swagger and proud as his Palace Diploma winner when he was talking of all the good work the Yorkshire Union had done, was doing, and intended to do; hut like Mr. Halliday, he had to deplore the fact that the novices did not show much enthusiasm. Mr. Archer was determined to let the gathering know that the British Bird and Mule section of the Yorkshire Fancy are by no means lacking in push, and his record of the work done by the small club over which he presides secured the approbation of his listeners. Had the Editor of Cage Birds been present and heard all the nice things Mr. Archer had to say of him he would have blushed for a week and a day.

Mr. House, who handed over the valuahle prizes given hy Cage Birds to the winners, spoke very highly of the work done by the leaders of the Union.

To Mr. Sam Dean fell the task of proposing the vote of thanks to the donors of the prizes, and he did it in a most delicate and tactful manner. Mr. Ramsden, who responded, met with a veritable tornado of applause when he rose, and it was renewed when he said he would cheerfully miss his train home if by staying a certain event (which shall go unmentioned here) would take place. He made special reference to the good sportsmanship of the Yorkshire fanciers.

Huge was the shout which arose when, in responding to the vote of thanks to the Chairman and Secretary, Mr. Hill announced that he would again act as Secretary to the Cinderella Show. One of the leading lights turned to us and said: "That's the best news I have heard for many a day. It's worth £20 to the Cinderella Fund. No one can work that show like Hill."

OUR SPECIAL DETAILED REPORT.

The annual amalgamated prize distribution and social of the Yorkshire Union, the Yorkshire Canary Club, the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire C.C., the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, the National Green Marked Yorkshire C.C., the Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club, and Cage Birds prizes, was held on Feb. 9, at the Market Tavern, Bradford. At five o'clock tea was served to 150, and this number was greatly augmented by six o'clock, the time of the commencement of the evening's entertainment, to about 400. Tho display of prizes was splendid, many being of considerable value, and they ranged in size from a cabinet sewing machine down to miniature silver salt-cellars.

Amongst the visitors we noted Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Towers, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, Mr. C. A. House (London), Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington), Messrs W. A. Wilson (sec., Leeds O.S.), Moir, Norton, Rhodes, Hall, Johnson (Leeds), Humphries (York), W. E. Fergusson (Harrogate), Archer, Battye (Huddersfield), Mr. and Mrs. Isherwood (Wakefield), Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Dykes, Mr. and Mrs. L. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. T. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Simonett, Mr. and Mrs. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. F. Self, Mr. and Mrs. E. Self, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hirst, Mr. and Mrs. Hardaker, Mr. and Mrs. J. Crowther, Mr. and Mrs. Plowright, Mr. and Mrs. Garnett, Mr. and Mrs. Pickup, Mr. and Mrs. Horsfield, Mr. and Mrs. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Fortnam, Mr. and Mrs. F. Rhodes, Mr. and Mrs. W. Crabtree, Mr. and Mrs. Clegg, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sutcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. H. Sutcliffe, Mrs. G. Ormonroyd (Wibsey), Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Chapman, Messrs. W. Mundell, J. Wilson, Halliday, L. Hodgson and Son, H. C. Crossley, J. E. Priestley, J. Wilman and Son, E. Stobart, P. Sunderland, Chapman, W. Mann, J. and J. Nichols, W. Richmond, J. Thornton, W. H. Shackleton, Priestley, Kaberry, Jowett, J. Greaves, H. E. Parkin, F. Armstrong, S. B. Grayshon, Wood, Binns Bros., L. Briggs, H. J. Chittenden, F. Allen, Joe Thomas, J. Roe, F. Ludbrook, Myers and Lumb, W. A. Cowgill, J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool), Townsend (Halifax), and scores of other fanciers from various parts.

Mr. H. H. Towers expressed his regret that Mr. Sunderland was unable to be present. Mr. Sunderland had asked him to express his best wishes for the success of the meeting, and he hoped it would be quite up to the previous year's. Mr. Priestley, of Halifax, the pianist, then opened the musical programme with a pianoforte solo, after which Mr. Towers called upon Mr. R. Halliday, the Vice-President of the Yorkshire Canary Club, to distribute the prizes of that club, in place of the President, Mr. Sunderland.

The Oldest Still Going Strong.

Mr. Halliday stated that the Y.C.C. was the oldest specialist club catering for the Yorkshire bird now in existence. When other clubs commenced to branch off, he, along with others, was afraid it would injure the parent body, but this had not been the case; the Y.C.C. to-day was stronger numerically and financially than ever it had been, aud he advised the fanciers, and novices in particular, to come forward and join the club, as by doing so they would assist the club which had done a great deal for them in raising and keeping up the price of the birds. They ran good competitions each year for champions, open novices, and junior novices. Mr. Halliday then called upon Messrs. Ogden Brothers, the winners of the Bailey Trophy, for the winning of which they had, as a surprise, an eiderdown quilt. Mr. Dykes, second, took a gold medal, and also one of Mr. Ramsden's tea-pots; Mr. Bailey, who, through illness, was unfortunately unable to be present, receiving for the third prize a "Swan" fountain pen. Fourth place and Sandiford's Cup went to Mr. F. Allen; Messrs. Thornton and Bower, for the fifth prize, receiving a sugar jar and sifter ready for the strawberries they are going to grow next summer. Ramsden's Cup and money specials competitions:—Winners, Messrs. Ogden Brothers, who hold the cup for next year. Mr. Dykes, second, received a rose bowl; teapot for third went to Mr. Bailey; Mr. Towers, fourth, carried away a sugar jar and sifter. In the open novice competition Messrs. Brown and Sons were successful, and had as a prize a silver sugar basin; Mr. Morrison, second, a silver water jug, also securing one of Mr. Ramsden's cruets; Mr. Elsegood coming in for third place and having for his prize a cruet and a jam jar. Junior novice: This competition was won by Mr. S. B. Grayshon, a gold albert being chosen by him for his prize; Mr. Sutcliffe, second, a magnificent pair of bronzes; third, a clock, Mr. Tyas; Mr. Simonett, fourth, a cruet.

A Suggested Amalgamation.

Mr. Towers said Mr. Sunderland had mentioned to him the amalgamation of the various Yorkshire specialist Clubs into one body, as Mr. Sunderland thought if they were all brought together it would be a step in the right direction, and certainly this had been talked about for some time, but nobody had yet come forward with a definite scheme.

After a splendid rendering of the song "Roses" by Mr. Wright, Mr. Garnett, the popular President of the C.M.Y.C.C., presented the prizes of his society. He regretted the Club had not been so successful as in previous years, either from the exhibition or the financial point of view. When the Club meets at the beginning of the year to fix up their prizes aud competitions they take into consideration the number of members on the books and give to the utmost capacity in the shape of prizes for the following year, and when, at the year end, the secretary is nearly fifty per cent. short of subscriptions, the financial outlook was of necessity decidedly dull. He was sorry to say the exhibiting members had been smaller in number than usual, and thought the explanation was that green marked birds are easier to breed, and some competition would have to be formed to keep breeders breeding Cinnamons Marks. Ladies should get their husbands to take up the Cinnamon Marks, as some grand and useful prizes were put up for competition.

Birds Win His "Sunday Best"!

Mr. Garnett went ou to say that it was a great pleasure to call upon Mr. Towers, the winner of the open competition, to receive at his hands a writing table and smoking cabinet, and he hoped he would live long to use them. Mr. Towers said it was the second time he had won the competition, but he hoped someone would come forward and beat him next year; in fact, he would try to lose. (Laughter.) Second place was secured by Messrs. Ogden Brothers, and the prize selected was a suit, which was on the back of the junior member of the firm, Mr. L. Ogden. Mr. Garnett laughingly asked him to step up on his chair and allow the visitors to see the prize, Mr. Ogden doing as requested amidst much laughter. It is a good thing when one can be clothed out of the birds! Mr. Bailey secured the Sandiford Cup for third place; fourth, Mr. A. Cooper. In the open novices' competition, where the prizes are competed for in the open classes, Messrs. Brown and Son were successful, and received a silver cake stand; second, Mr. C. Morrison, a silver teapot; a grand pair of vases going to Mr. D. Thornton, for third. The junior novice competition, which runs through the Yorkshire Union novice classes, was won by Mr S. B. Grayshon, a rose bowl being the prize; and he was also the winner of the Ramsden cruet; second, Mr. H. Simonett, a salad bowl and utensils being selected for the prize; third, Mr. Fergusson, a brief bag (presumably to fetch further prizes in next year). Mr. H. Grange secured a table cloth for fourth prize. Mr. H. H. Towers was also the winner of the Ramsden cruet in the open section. Mr. Butterworth then gave a comic song and patter, much to the delight of the audience.

THE GREAT GATHERING OF YORKSHIREMEN.

(Where the Norwich is Not so Popular.)

The President of the O.N.P.C., Mr. A. Hirst, was now called to hand over the prizes of that club. Mr. Hirst alluded to the Norwich breed as a very popular bird in some parts of the country, but not so popular in this part, and he advised fanciers to go for it. He could assure them it would be a good speculation, as the Norwich was making good headway in the district, especially during the last four years since the club was formed. Mr. Hirst called upon Mr. Joe Thomas, the winner of the open competition, and Mr. Thomas came forward; but he surrendered the prize, £2 10s., and supplemented it by a similar amount to provide a rose bowl to be competed for next year, the donor himself not to compete. (Great applause.) Mr. Thomas was also the winner of the Percy Illingworth Cup and the Sandiford Cup, a remarkable achievement. Mr. Humphreys, of York, came in second, and received a beautiful pair of pictures (or will receive them as soon as Mr. Mitchell, the secretary, is well and about again, and able to finish them). Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles, third, received a pair of blankets, and were also the winners of a Ramsden cruet. Open novice: First, Mr. Heap, a clock; second, Mr. Johnson, a copper kettle and jam pan, also one of Mr. Ramsden's cruets. Mr. Jackson was called upon to receive a set of knives and forks, and the President expressed the wish that he would have plenty of use for them. Junior novice: First, Mr. H. Simonett, a case of spoons; a set of ornaments sent to Mr. J. Roe, second; Mr. F. Rhodes, for third, having a music stool to carry home.

Mr. Wright rendered with good effect "Mary of Argyle," after which Mr. Dean, in proposing the vote of thanks, said it gave him the greatest pleasure to testify to the generosity of the various donors of specials, as these prizes, so willingly given, were very acceptable. They had Mr. Carl, the proprietor of Cage Birds, to thank for a large number of prizes, and Mr. Ramsden, one of our very liberal supporters, also Percy Illingworth, Esq., M.P., also Messrs. Brown and Son, W. H. Shackleton, J. Bailey, T. Sandiford, F. Armstrong, H. H. Towers, and many others. Mr. H. Sutcliffe seconded, and Mr. Ramsden, in responding, said it gave him great pleasure to give his prizes, and he knew he could say the same for the other donors. He further said he would be pleased to repeat his prizes next year on the same lines, and give about the same number. (Loud applause.) He also wished to thank the Yorkshiremen for the excellent support given to him at the Crystal Palace; it was a long way to send the birds and to come, but he never feared that they would fail him. He was sorry to hear that Mr. Bailey was ill and had been in bed most of the time since the show, he having caught cold there. He had thought it was only the Southerners who suffered from chills, the Yorkshiremen being too hardy; but evidently the latter could catch cold also. Mr. Butterworth then amused the audience by his graphic illustration of the "woes" of married life, etc.

Mr. W. H. Shackleton presented the prizes of the N.G.M.Y.C.C. First, Shackleton Trophy and gold medal, Mr. L. Dykes, Mr. W. H. Shackleton being second, receiving a shaving cabinet; a pair of blankets going to Messrs. Sutcliffe and Son for third place; fourth, silver medal, Ogden Brothers; fifth, H. H. Towers, box of cigars; sixth, F. Townsend, rose bowl. Open novice competition: First, Messrs. Brown and Son, teapot; Mr. Morrison receiving a rose bowl. Ramsden's specials: Winner, L. Dykes, teapot; Ogden Brothers, second, sugar jar and sifter. Junior novice: First, S. Moore, pair of paintings; second, Tidswell, hot water jug; third, Smith, cruet; fourth, Sutcliffe, pair of flower vases; fifth, Packer.

Valuable Trophies Won Outright.

Mr. H. H. Towers, as President of the Yorkshire Union, handed over the prizes to the various winners, and this was all the more interesting inasmuch as the valuable trophy presented by Mr. W. H. Shackleton, value thirty guineas, was now won outright, the fortunate fancier being Mr. J. Bailey, who selected as his prize a fireplace to fit in his house, to the value of £15. This exhibitor also won the H. W. Naylor Cup for the third time, so this, too, becomes his own property; also a gold medal and Ramsden's cruet. Messrs. Ogden Brothers, who have been second every year since the competition started, received a cabinet sewing machine, a gold medal, and a Ramsden special. Mr. W. H. Shackleton, the donor, takes the third prize, a valuable medal, and Mr. H. H. Towers the medal for the competition throughout the present year, and also the medal for fourth place. Mr. Towers then handed over to the following novices the gold medals won in the Yorkshire Union novice classes, Yorkshire section, one and second Ramsden special, S. B. Grayshon; 2, S. Smith; 3, W. E. Fergusson; 4, Tyas; 5, S. Moore; 6, L. Jobson; 7, A. Sutcliffe; 8, E. Ellis; 9, S. Denby; 10, H. Pearson; 11, Tidswell; 12, J. H. Fowlo. Norwich section; 1, H. Simonett, also first Ramsden special; 2, J. Roe; 3, F. Rhodes; 4, H. Clegg. Mr. Wright here gave an artistic interpretation of "My English Rose," from "Merrie England."

Mr. C. A. House, in distributing Cage Birds prizes, expressed regret that Mr. F. Carl was not able to be present, and said: "As I look round this room it brings back to my mind a number of old memories. Some of the Yorkshire lads have known me for more than twenty years. It is now twenty-four years since I first came amongst you, and though I have been back in the South for a few years, I still always have a good reception when among the Yorkshire boys. It may be news to many who are here to-night to know that the Yorkshire Union to-day has a membership of 1,200. The Yorkshire Union started in a very small way. They say: "Better the day, better the deed." There are here two of the men who were responsible for the starting of the Yorkshire Union—Mr. Joe Wilman and myself. The Yorkshire Union sprang from a meeting held at my house in London on the Sunday night of the Palace Show following the big Norwich Conference. Mr. Walter Horridge said: "Why can't we have a Yorkshire Canary Conference?' We talked it over, and the outcome eventually was a meeting at Wakefield Show, then held on Easter Tuesday, and of which Mr. Horridge was secretary, and this led up to the formation of the Yorkshire Union. It is marvellous to think when we look at these prizes to-night the difference between the cage bird Fancy then and to-day. . . . last season the great show on national lines held for charitable purposes in the Central Baths Hall proved a great success. It is a wonder that English fanciers have not moved more in the direction of benefitting charities, as on the Continent shows and sales are being constantly held with this object. This last successful attempt is undoubtedly a move in the right direction. In the old days the price of a good Yorkshire hen was 10s. at the most, but during the last season £15 has been refused for a yellow hen, and the Yorkshire Union and the specialist clubs are to be thanked for this most satisfactory state of things."

Mr. Hammond's Hard Work.

Mr. House proceeded with the distribution of Cage Birds prizes, which, during the years they have been so generously given, have reached a grand total of £140, and said that he was authorised to state they would be repeated next year, but on different lines, to be stated later, and Mr. House further said that Mr. Fred Hammond must be given credit for a good deal in connection with these prizes, as he had done all the work at great expenditure of time and considerable trouble. Champion Section: 1, Bailey (a pity "Jim" was not able to come to receive it); 2, Ogden Bros., lady's dress. The remarks anent this caused much merriment amongst the company. It was on view on a dressmaker's dummy (see photo); 3, W. H. Shackleton, rug; 4, H. H. Towers, rose bowl supported by an elephant, Mr. Towers passing the remark (quite the bull of the evening) that Mrs. Towers had chosen this because she liked birds); 5, Mr. L. Dykes, set of vases; 6, J. Chippendale, gold bangle for his wife; 7, R. Sutcliffe, two ladies' umbrellas, which elicited the remark: "Ev yer two wives nah, Bob?" who retaliated, "Well, ah'm big enuff for two, arn't ah?" which caused much laughter; 8, Allen, pair of pictures; 9, Halliwell, gold medal. Amateurs: Yorkshire Union—1, Morrison, teapot and cruet; 2, Stobart, silver ornament; 3, Radley, six show cages and case ("He's bahn ta dew summat next yeer, isn't 'e? Onyhah, he's gettin' reddy.") Y.C.C.: 1, Brown and Son, cream jug; 2, Hall, pair of blankets and quilt; 3, Burdekin Bros. C.M.Y.C.C.: 1, Thornton, cruet. N.G.M.Y.C.C.: 1, Casey, teapot and match stand; 2, Ramsden, navy dress length and lining. O.N.P.C. Also there were numerous cash specials.

Mr. Archer, President of the Yorkshire B.B. and Mule Club, presented the prizes of his club, and gave a report of the year's working, which was very satisfactory both from an exhibition point of view and financially. Open section: Messrs. Martin and Archer, first; followed by T. H. Inman, second; third, W. Lee.

Mr. House proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Towers and Mr. Hill, the gentlemen who had done the organising work in connection with the evening's function. It did not look much when everything was passing off well, but there was a great amount of thought and work to be done in a quiet way before such an evening's entertainment could take place, and great credit was due to all who had served on the committee. Mr. Hammond seconded. Mr. Towers and Mr. Hill suitably responded.

Mr. Butterworth then related his experiences as a football referee at a friendly (!) match. Mr. Wright sang "The Irish Emigrant," and shortly afterwards "Genevieve," all present joining in at the chorus in the old-fashioned style. Unfortunately the birdy man's favourite, Mr. Stafford, was unable to attend owing to illness.

This gathering may be said to have been quite up to the usual standard, but owing to the curtailed train services to some of the outside places, arrangements were made to close the meeting as early as possible, so as to allow those present to pack up their prizes and get off in good time.

The Southall & District C.B.S. to be Re-formed.

Sir,—I have been requested by a number of fanciers to re-form the Southall and District Cage Bird Society. A meeting for the purpose of considering this will be held at St. John's Schools, Southall, on Thursday next, March 21, at 8 p.m. Will all fanciers interested kindly make an effort to be present and take this as an invitation? One enthusiastic fancier has already promised a cup for competition.

Wellington (Salop) Show and a Gold Medal.

Sir,—There are others who have not had fair play. I have not received my prize money nor my gold medal for best bird in show. I have been promised this medal and prize money over and over again. I think it is time steps were taken in this matter. Will others who have been served likewise be agreeable to club together and enter an action? It is nothing but right. They begged me to make entries; they had my fees, and my railway fares had to be paid, and I do not get even my medal, which I would prize. I shall be glad to hear if anyone is agreeable to help to take this matter up and fight it out. Why should they take our fees and then leave us without either prize-money or special prizes?

A Useful Cage Rack and How to Make it.

Sir,—I enclose sketch of a useful cage rack. I have made one of these myself, and I find it very valuable. It can be moved about without any trouble. I also made six single breeders to fit same. Thinking that perhaps some readers of Cage Birds would like to make one, I have written what follows. I am sure I should have been pleased if anyone had told me how to make one before I made mine. I may say that I started bird-keeping and taking in your paper, Cage Birds, three years ago. I had a pair of common birds given me and I made a cage for them. They reared fifteen young birds. The next year I made more cages and had three pairs; and from these I had twenty-four young ones, which they reared. Last year I had five pairs, and from these I reared forty young, which I sold. With the money I got for them I built a bird room which is worth looking at—7ft. high, 7ft. wide, and 7ft. 6in. long. I also bought some more stock birds, so that I have now a nice stock and a nice place for them to live in. I am safe in saying, therefore, that I have got all this from one pair of birds, and from hints from Cage Birds. My rack can be easily made from slate battens (about 1in. by 1½in.), which can be obtained from any timber yard at a very small cost. First saw four lengths 4ft. long and four 3ft. 6in. long. Screw these together as shown in the sketch, and then saw ten pieces 8in. long (six for the ends and two each for the shelves); screw these together (as shown). Get a board for the top ½in. or ⅝in. thick and 3ft. 7½in. long; screw this to the top to act as a shelf; it will also do on which to put two single breeders. The rack is intended to be fitted with four single breeders 21in. long, 17in. high, and 11in. deep. It can also be used for six single breeders. It will be found that this makes a very strong and useful rack, and one which can be made at a very small cost.

Steadying Nest Pans in the Breeding Cage.

Sir,—Being interested in your "Ideas" column, I noticed Mr. Kershaw's method of fixing nest pans so as to be steady. The way I fix mine is to let the flange of the pan rest on a perch, which is easier for the birds getting on the nest, also for them when feeding, and better for the youngsters when leaving the nest. The perch is much further away from the side of the cage, allowing the birds, especially Yorkshires, to turn round without breaking their tails.

The City and County of Perth O.S.

Sir,—Being a member, I was more than surprised to see a report of a Pair Show held by the said society. I beg to ask Mr. Kerr, secretary, why county members were not notified of the Pair Show? Are they not worthy of the same consideration as city members? Was this Pair Show held to satisfy the curiosity of a certain few. Why was no balance sheet issued to county members? Seeing this society was unable to hold an open show last season, every encouragement should be held out to members and nonmembers to fall in and rally round. Apparently the officials think differently, but this "keep all to ourselves" sort of a business is not to be tolerated by county members. So awake, ye sons of the shire, for this society wants waking up badly in the humble opinion of

The Avadavat's Hopeless Infatuation!

Sir,—You might be interested to hear of a queer case which occurred amongst my birds. In a large cage I had several Mannikins, a Spice Bird, four Nuns, four hen Avadavats, and one cock Green Avadavat. After some time I added to this collection a hen Ribbon Finch. I soon noticed that the Green Avadavat paid her great attention. One day I noticed the Ribbon Finch seemed very ill. I caught her and tried all the remedies for egg-binding. She laid a soft egg, and unfortunately died in the night. Several months later I chanced to get a pair of Ribbon Finches, which I put into the aviary. The instant I put them in the Avadavat dashed after the hen, and, in spite of pecks from the cock, pursued her for some days, but, finding himself not a match for the cock, he contents himself by sitting as close as he can to the pair. When they go to feed he also goes; when they take a bath he hovers round as close as he dare; in fact, wherever the Ribbon Finches are, there he is also.

Birds Not Judged at Milford Haven Show.

Sir,—Kindly grant me space to state the treatment I received at Milford Haven (Pem.) Show, held Jan. last. I entered four birds, and received labels in good time; and I despatched birds off night before show to arrive same night—a distance of about thirty miles. You may judge my disappointment when, on opening the basket after the return journey, I saw that a slip was attached to the cages stating birds arrived too late for judging. I wrote to the secretary per return for information as to why my birds were too late, as I thought it was the railway company's fault. The secretary handed my letter over to Mr. Gibbon, manager, cage bird section, who deserves credit for the straightforward way he explained why my birds were not judged. I sent in a claim for out-of-pocket expenses, as requested by Mr. Gibbon, and was informed same would be paid about Feb. 7, but although I have written the secretary several times for payment, he has not had the courtesy to take notice of my letters. Little wonder that such shows cry out for entries when exhibitors get treated in such a way as I have been.

Some Truths about the Scotch Fancy Canary.

Sir,—Having read Mr. Smith's remarks, I can endorse his statements to a great extent, only I differ a little with him in price—I know I cannot get a pair that would breed good ones at four pounds. But you cannot get a good pair of any variety cheap. I would say you could get a fair pair at £5, and if you could get a few young ones you would be well repaid. I think the Scotch as hardy and as free a breeder as most of the varieties of the Canary family, and I think it one of the most graceful varieties that adorn the show bench. I hope the day is not far distant when they will be exhibited in greater numbers. I think breeders of this variety should voice their opinions through Cage Birds a lot more. I cannot help wondering why breeders of the Scotch Fancy are so quiet. Look at breeders of the other varieties; they have lectures on the breeding and pairing and general management. Now, I think if there were a few lectures given on this variety by some of the "old hands" it would improve matters a great deal; or if some of our Scotch friends would give their experience through Cage Birds I am sure the Editor would only be too glad to publish them. I hope these few remarks will start a discussion on this variety, once the King of the Fancy. Wishing Cage Birds every success; I have read it from the first number.

The Early Nesting of Budgerigars.

Sir,—I have had for the past eighteen months in an outdoor aviary, in which there is no artificial heat, one pair of yellow and one pair of green Budgerigars. To my delight the yellow pair commenced nesting three weeks ago, and I find they have a family to-day (March 9), and appear to be doing well. Seeing it is so early, and being out all through the winter, do you not consider this a record?

Norwich Plainheads at Kirkcaldy Show.

Sir,—I shall be glad if all the Norwich Plainhead fanciers who were exhibiting at Kirkcaldy open show last November will kindly let me know the date when they sent in their entries, and also inform me as to who had their entries returned for unflighted yellow hens. This is important, and an answer from fanciers concerned will oblige.

The Dipper's First Appearance on the Show Bench.

Sir,—I have noticed your remarks anent the Dipper, assuming its appearance at the Palace Show to be its first on the bench, but if my memory serves me right, this assumption is incorrect, as one was exhibited at Halifax Annual Show, in the Mechanics' Hall, in 1909, and if I am not mistaken by the same exhibitor, Miss G. Fishburn. I should be pleased to have this confirmed or otherwise through the columns of your valuable weekly, of which I have been a reader for the past six years.

C. PICKLES.

Sir,—It was a surprise to my daughter to see a photograph of her Dipper and cage, and Mr. Swaysland, the judge, in last week's issue. One of your correspondents wanted to know how to keep them. I feed them on gentles alone; at first, when a young bird, I gave it all the caterpillars, grubs, etc., I could find in the garden, also wasp-grubs and fresh ants' cocoons.

The Yorkshire Union and its Method of Balloting.

A Challenge.

SIR,—I am instructed by the Bolton Woods C.B.S. to ask you to allow us space in your valuable paper to publish the following re the annual ballot of the Yorks. Union of Cage Bird Societies. At a meeting held on Saturday last (March 9), the following resolution was passed unanimously: "That this society is entirely dissatisfied with the published results of the annual ballot, and that they challenge the governing body of the Yorkshire Union to publish in the Fancy Press the exact number of votes given by each society, not the total number. Also by whom they were counted." Also they wish to add that in future all candidates for any office should be invited to see them counted, whether they are members of the governing body or not. We also dispute the number of votes recorded, as we have the support of other societies, which shows the figures differently from those published. Is it a mis-count or a mis-print? Therefore we desire every ballot paper to be published to satisfy over 200 members of different societies, who are entirely dissatisfied. Some dissatisfaction prevailed two years ago, when something similar happened, when one person for an office was credited with only 8 votes, but as a matter of fact Bolton Woods C.B.S. gave over double that number for this same person. There was no mistake about not being sent, as they were filled up at the meeting and posted at the same time. We also wish to state that the ballot papers are not clear enough for those with only a moderate education, and should be drawn up to be more readily understood by such persons. We have also noticed that new rules that have been sent up have not been placed upon the ballot papers. Perhaps these have not suited the governing body, and have been ignored; if so, it is high time, in the interests of true sport, that the whole lot of officers resigned. We also wish to congratulate Mr. H. Hill on retaining his position as secretary to the Yorkshire Union by such a huge majority, but we are curious to know where the remaining votes for Mr. M. Skirrow have gone to, above those published in the Fancy Press, as we know that more votes were given by three societies alone than those published. We desire an explanation on the whole of these matters through the medium of CAGE BIRDS. If these are not satisfactorily given, or a re-ballot on the whole of the offices taken, disaster is sure to follow to the Yorkshire Union. After careful consideration of the whole matter, and as true sportsmen, we decided as a body that the Yorkshire Union was of no practical use to the Bolton Woods C.B.S., and we wish to tender our resignation from that body.

M. SKIRROW

A Thrush Builds its Nest in an Old Hat.

Sir,—On Saturday afternoon, while out for a walk, I found a Thrush's nest in a battered old hat; it contained four eggs. The hat is tilted up on one side, and is placed nearly in the bottom of a hawthorn bush, so situated, in fact, that even the keenest eye would hardly dream of looking into it.

Suggested Norwich Plainhead Club for the Midlands.

Sir,—A few fanciers of Birmingham, West Bromwich, and Wolverhampton have for some time been considering the dseirability of forming a Norwich Plainhead Club, to be run on the same lines and cover the same district as the Midland Counties Yorkshire Canary Club. As the Fancy is so strong in the Midlands, I personally think it would be a great advantage to the Norwich Plainhead Fancy. I should be pleased to know what the Norwich fanciers think of this, and perhaps a meeting could be arranged.

H. T. COLLIER.

Roller Canaries at the Crystal Palace Show.

SIR,—Dr. Read makes another mistake when he states that I am not prepared to prove that his private letter to me is bluff, and it will only take up a small space to prove it. At the last meeting of the B.R.C.C. Dr. Read expressed his great gratification as to how recent events had turned as regards myself, also at that meeting he threatened me with legal proceedings, yet a few days after he sent a letter to me with the impertinent endearing term, "My Dear Mr. Norris." If this is not bluff, well, I don't know what is; so that the impertinence is on his side. Really, my dear Dr. Read, it grieves me to have to point out another mistake of yours. You must be more careful. In your letter published last week you state that Mr. Ramsden called on you on Dec. 10th, 1911, and informed you that the L. and P.O.S. were going to have Roller classes at the Palace, and that he would send an express paid letter to the B.R.C.C. meeting, being held that night. Well, I need not remind you that the B.R.C.C. do not meet on Sundays; allowing that you meant Dec. 12th, you are wrong again, as it was Nov. 21st, 1911, and I only received the ONE letter, and that letter stated that the birds would be judged in a separate room, and afterwards staged in a separate room, but this latter point Mr. Ramsden could not guarantee. My reply to that letter was that the B.R.C.C. had gone well into the matter, and had no desire to give the patronage. That is the only letter I received. Therefore, as you say you saw Mr. Ramsden Dec. 10th, 1911, who told you that everything would be done for the comfort and benefit of the Rollers, it was your duty as a Vice-President to have told the B.R.C.C. of this fact, but you did not. Now we can account for your replies at the last meeting, when you let the cat out of the bag, when you stated that you knew the conditions would be improved. When pressed as to why you did not inform the Club, you stated that you did not see why you should, and yet you now say that you have acted for the best interests of the Roller Fancy. After these few facts it is not worth my while to waste time in writing, as anybody can see through bluff.

How I Started in the Fancy.

From Parrots to Roller Canaries.

Sir,—When I was a boy in knickerbockers I often had a longing to keep birds, but my purse only allowed me to invest in a cheap second-hand cage and a Linnet; and I used to look with envious eyes at the lovely array of British and foreign birds displayed in the naturalists' windows. However, when I got older one day a friend of mine showed me half a dozen young grey Parrots which he had purchased at Liverpool. My friend, I might mention, when he saw anything which took his fancy, bought it on the spur of the moment, whether he knew anything about it or not, in the hope of making money out of the transaction. He explained to me how he had got them for 25s. each, and he was going to train them to talk, when they would be worth anything from £2 to £10, according to their abilities. I was greatly impressed by the easy way one could make money, so I asked him to sell me one, which he did. I must confess I knew no more about Parrots and their treatment than the "man in the moon," only that young Grey Parrots should be fed on boiled maize. However, I was delighted with my purchase, and the bird was a very interesting pet. But, alas! not for long, as at the end of five days, poor Polly suddenly became ill, and in twenty-four hours was dead. It was a great blow to me, but as a little consolation my friend gave me a Goldfinch and a cage. A little later the whole five birds belonging to my friend died also! However, the Parrot fever was upon me, and after getting a catalogue I fancied a Green Amazon this time, which was described as "just beginning to talk; comes out on finger, whistles and dances, etc." The price was not outlandish, and, thought I, that's just what I want (I had learned by this time that Amazons were much hardier than the African Greys). So I sent for this particularly clever bird, which arrived at the end of a week. After I had had it awhile it made no attempt either to talk or dance or whistle (or, luckily, even screech). The only sound it did make resembled a hen calling for her chickens—i.e., "cluck—cluck." By this she had had plenty of time to get used to us somewhat, so I thought I would try her on my finger. Oh, my stars!!! I put my hand in the cage, but Polly, if she wasn't quick at picking up words, was quick at picking up my finger. I did not try again! I then took a trip to the dealer, accompanied by "Polly," and asked him to make an exchange. I made my selection, and after paying more cash, I made for home, feeling confident I had got a very promising African Grey, although it could not talk then. My new Polly soon became a great favourite with both my wife and myself. She would let us stroke her, and as soon as either of us entered the door she greeted us with a loud whistle. By the end of another month I would not have sold her at any price. She began to speak a word or two, and she was also very affectionate. We used to give her all kinds of tit-bits, which she greatly enjoyed. I had not seen a copy of CAGE BIRDS then, I am sorry to say, or I should not have made the mistakes I did with regard to diet, for Polly began to be ill, and all our efforts to save her were of no avail. I have given the Parrot Fancy up for a time, but not for good. I still intend buying another—but not a young one. My friend next informed me he had started in the Canary hobby. He had purchased three pairs of Rollers, and had already a nest of eggs. Now, thought I, why not breed some Mules? I had already a Goldfinch, and a hen Canary would only cost 2s. 6d., so that I should soon be having a good supply of young birds. I therefore purchased a hen, procured a breeding cage, etc., and awaited results. Neither the hen nor the Goldfinch seemed very anxious about nest-building. So long as there was plenty to eat and drink they seemed happy, and contented to remain as they were. Thus weeks passed by, and my friend had now a nest of five young ones. I was more determined than ever to breed, so I invested in a Roller cock, which was as full of fire as could be, and I put him with the hen. I had also received a copy of CAGE BIRDS, which was just what I had been wanting (and which I look forward to weekly now more than any other paper). It put me on the right track. The Roller cock soon paved the way, and I very soon had my first nest of eggs. But it was very late in the season, and I was glad the eggs did not hatch, as the hen had already begun to moult. So I separated the pair. I am now looking forward to this season, having procured a good stock of birds, and I hope, with the aid of the ever-valuable CAGE BIRDS, to have satisfactory results.

Meeting held Feb. 28. Mr. W. H. Butler was elected a member. Mr. J. Maddison informed us that he would not compete for the British cup next show season. His reasons were that as he had won the Mule cup outright, it would hardly be fair to the novice exhibitors if he competed. He was thanked for his sporting offer. A successful table show was held. Principal winners:—British: Messrs. Taylor, Irving; For.: Messrs. Irving, Young. Mr. J. Bertram judged.—G. Taylor, Sec.

Special meeting held at College Inn, Mar. 9, Mr. W. Ducker in chair. There was not a very large attendance; I suppose it was due to the wet weather. But we got through business all right. Decided, to alter Rule 8 to read: "That there be four birds entered per class, and under four only half prize money for all members' shows." Also Rule 16: "That all members wishing to show for cups pay 1s. entrance fee for each cup." Decided, to have a discussion at next meeting (March 30) on egg-binding and the best best way to prevent it. All fanciers welcome.—B. Bailey, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Annual general meeting held Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, Mar. 9, 1912. Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) presided. Business transacted: Minutes passed as read. Membership of the following endorsed:—Messrs. H. Clegg, J. Roe, W. Tose, W. Richmond, and S. Wilcock. New members elected were Messrs. F. Western and J. W. Ingham. Resignations of Messrs. W. Blakey, Brown and Son, F. Greenwood, and H. J. L. Williams accepted. Auditors' report was given by Mr. H. Simonett, and the balance sheet, showing £1 0s. 10d. in hand, was passed. Results of the past season's competitions in connection with the club were read and confirmed. Following officers were elected:—President, Percy H. Illingworth, Esq., M.P.; vice-presidents, Mrs. Lewer, and Messrs. F. Carl, W. A. Cowgill, J. Haigh, J. W. Ramsden, and J. Thomas; chairman, Mr. A. Hirst; secretary and treasurer, Mr. C. Mitchell; auditors, Messrs. H. Simonett and J. Wilcock, jun. The rules were revised and new ones adopted. One of the latter requires that resignations from membership must be in writing to the secretary. Resolved unanimously, that a message be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Illingworth expressing the members' heartfelt gratitude and satisfaction on the deliverance of their little son, who was run over in London last week by a motor-car and escaped unhurt. Messrs. F. Rhodes, J. Roe, and R. J. Jones were elected to serve on the Bradford National Show Committee. A collection towards next year's prize fund realised, £2. A five-guineas trophy offered by Mr. Joe Thomas was gratefully accepted.—Fred Hammond, Hon. Sec., pro tem

Letters were read from Messrs. Cochrane, Tyson, Soames, Mays, Shellam, Snarey, Law, and CAGE BIRDS. Messrs. Burr and Snarey were elected members of the club, and Mr. G. Thurling a vice-president. Mr. Crabb read a letter he had received from the Aberdeen University respecting rings for marking wild birds, and the matter was left to Mr. Crabb to secure the required number and suitable sized rings. It was agreed for Mr. Shellam to have the possession of the Hyhrid cup providing he could find another guarantor approved of by the committee. The case of the disqualification of Mr. G. Lawrance's Mule at the Palace was discussed at some length, and it was unanimously decided to uphold the decision of the L. and P.O.S., and to debar Mr. Lawrance from competing for the club cups and medals until Feb. 15, 1913, and that he forfeit the gold medal won by him at the Palace show. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

One of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings was held at "Rose and Crown" Hotel, Waingate, Mar. 6th, the president (Mr. T. Dawn) presiding. There were upwards of 70 members present to hear a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, by that well-known and successful exhibitor, Mr. H. Wilkinson (of Messrs. Wilkinson and Elliott). He gave one of the best lectures on the Yorkies any fancier in Sheffield has ever heard. He commenced at the beginning—the buying of stock birds. He did not, he said, advocate buying big winners at fabulous prices, but getting good, sound, reliable stock birds, taking particular care that where one bird fails its partner shall excel. He maintained that good stock birds purchased from a reliable breeder—birds that should breed winners—could be purchased at from 50s., to 70s. per pair; but don't pay more, as the most reliable material could be bought at these prices. He then went into the general management of birds, preparing them for breeding, pairing, rearing of young, steadying young for next feather shows, selection of best stock, preparation for moult, colour feeding, training for exhibition, and finally preparing for the show bench; in fact, everything about a bird was gone into. At the close of Mr. W.'s remarks a good many questions were asked, all of which were ably answered by the lecturer. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Wilkinson. By-the-way, we are losing him, as he is going to pastures new (Australia). But I am pleased to say that we are not going to lose his interest as a member. We proceeded with general business. Re the formation of a fishing club in connection with the society (Sheffield is a regular anglers' stronghold); a number of members gave in their names to join. A meeting to go into details will be held shortly. A good deal of business was gone into, and 16 new members were enrolled. The April 2nd meeting is important, viz., a table show of British birds (3 classes); prize-money, 4/-, 2/-, 1/-; (no entry fees). Members joining that night are entitled to show. Mr. H. J. Chick (Nottingham) will place the cards, and will give us a lecture on the general management and keeping of British birds. We hope every member will be present at the whist drive on March 25th at Forrester's Hall, Trippet Lane. Tickets (including refreshments), 1/- each. Bring your wives, sweethearts, and friends. New members enrolled:—Messrs. F. Cobb, T. Dodd, A. Green, M. Green, J. Green, W. Moore, C. Tattersall, Farrar, Kelsey, H. Rickett, H. Thornhill, Dr. A. M. Deane, E. Walker, A. Jackson, B. Duce, Hoyle.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

DONCASTER AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held March 9, in Victoria Rooms, a good muster of members turning up. Classes for seeds had been arranged. Canary, 1st, Mr. Carter; hemp, 1st, Mr. Pogmore; German rape, 1st Mr. Pogmore; niga, 1st, Mr. Hunt; mixed seeds, 1st, Mr. Truman. Our president, Mr. Barker, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Mr. Barker commented greatly upon the excellent quality of seeds obtained by the members. Unanimously decided, to engage three judges for our next open show on Nov. 22-23, also to engage the Drill Hall. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Barker.—G. Bescoby, Sec.

CLAPHAM AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Mar. 4. A large number of members attended to hear a lecture by Mr. C. A. House, who, however, wrote expressing his regret at being unable to fulfil his promise, and members were greatly disappointed at not hearing his lecture. Two cups were selected for competition at the annual shows, and a handsome silver cup was presented to Mr. C. T. Maxwell in lieu of the two cup won by him, each three times, for most points in the British and foreign sections. Mr. Maxwell generously offered a silver cup for competition at future shows, to be competed for under conditions to be decided upon later. The recent pair show produced a profit to the society of about 12s., which was considered very satisfactory. It was brought to our notice that the special for the best champion Yorkshire at the late pair show was won by the vice-chairman, Mr. Yeoman, and not by Mr. Fraser, as stated in the report of that show. Mr. Fraser won special for best novice Yorks., and we hear celebrated the event in right royal style.—S. A. Sandy.

BOURNEMOUTH AND DIS. C.B.A.

Annual meeting held end of January, and adjourned until end of February, when a good muster of members attended. Mr. G. W. Jones was voted to the chair. A vote of thanks to the retiring officers and committee was accorded. The Earl of Malmesbury was re-elected president, with the following vice-presidents: The Earl of Leven and Melville, Henry Page Croft, Esq., M.P., Dr. Hosker, Dr. Macgillicuddy, J. Downing Farror, Esq., L. Bousfield, Esq., H. Bousfield, Esq., C. Bousfield, Esq., Alderman J. Webber, J. R. Treadgold, Esq., Councillor A. H. Cartwright, Mrs. T. L. Gjers, Mrs. Parry-Crooke, Mrs. Sharpe, Miss M. Bousfield; hon. treas., L. Bousfield; hon. auditors, H. Matthews and G. W. Jones; committee, G. W. Jones (chairman), H. Matthews (vice-chairman), F. House, R. R. Churcher, S. M. Davis, M. Cook, C. Howard, F. Fulford, W. Basten, H. Goodland; hon. sec., W. O. Brooke. The year's working shewed a fairly successful result although an adverse balance of nearly £5 was recorded; this, the chairman said, he should like to see wiped off. This was generously responded to by subs. for various amounts, totalling nearly £14, thereby starting the year with a substantial balance in hand. Four silver cups (one for novice) were promised by various patrons, to be competed for by members at the annual show; also six silver gold-centred and six bronze medals for most points in the various open classes; also several special prizes promised for the young bird show in June. The radius was extended from 20 to 30 miles so that it is confidently hoped a good increase in membership will be gained to compete for the specials. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to those who had so kindly contributed towards the funds of the association and special prize list, also to the chairman for presiding.—W. O. Brooke, Sec.

POPLAR C.B.S.

First Annual Dinner a Huge Success.

First annual dinner held Mar. 9, at the Aberfeldy Tavern, East India Dock Road. It turned out a huge success. Mr. J. Robson took the chair for the dinner. The attendance was exceptionally good, 50 being present. The ladies were especially prominent, 16 gracing the tables. The dinner was excellently served, reflecting credit on the caterer, who in this instance was our esteemed president, Mr. Wrigglesworth, the proprietor of the Tavern. After dinner, our president took the chair, and as one of the artistes subsequently informed us in one of his songs, "we had a most delightful evening." The musical portion of the programme was under the direction of one of our members, Mr. G. A. Barber, who worked hard throughout the evening, the result being the whole programme was gone through without a hitch, and we take this opportunity of thanking him for his splendid services. The programme was an extensive one, those contributing being Messrs. T. Taylor, W. Emden, Gotcher, Mercer, Pine, Leech, Spink, Hunt, Francis, Barber, Wyatt, Mrs. Stopher, and Mr. and Mrs. Gedge. The various toasts were responded to heartily, and in some cases with musical honours. During the interval the chairman took the opportunity of presenting the various cups and medals won during the past year. Each presentation was accompanied by a graceful speech given by our president, who at the close stated that although he was unable, owing to business pressure, to take the interest in the society he would like to, still his thoughts were always with us, and he thought it a fitting time to announce that was his intention to present 12 special prizes to be competed for by members during the coming show season. This most generous offer was received with loud cheers, and was accepted with musical honours; and we take this opportunity of publicly thanking him for his generosity. To add to the pleasure our president had already given us, he stated later on that if we could get some ladies to join us, he would present them with a special prize worth the winning, the description of which would be announced later. This kindly thought was also received with acclamation. Had time permitted our music could have extended well into the morning. The evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.—H. W. Cook, Hon. Sec.

BEAMISH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held March 9, Mr. J. Davidson in chair. Mr. W. Reid was elected to judge our Nest Feather Show on July 6. Nominations for annual show on Nov. 23: Messrs. W. Reid, J. Hands, J. Stanger, J. Snell, A. Holden, J. Riseborough, T. Dixon, and R. Bewick.—W. Knowles.

COVENTRY (Godiva) C.B.S.

The society finished the year with a balance of £4 1s., after meeting a loss of £4 11s. 6d. on the last open show. I have resigned secretaryship, and Mr. H. Saunders, of 31, Vernon Street, has taken same over. Election of officers: President and treasurer, Mr. J. Busby; chairman, Mr. Howe; vice-chairman, Mr. T. Roycroft; auditors, Messrs. H. Mann and W. Batlin; committee, Messrs. A. Wright, J. Symonds, J. Blackshaw, H. Wright, Payne, A. Symonds, A. J. Lucas, Adkins, Houghton, Clarke, Ingram; reporter for shows, Mr. R. Symonds; hon. assistant sec., Mr. W. Rowley; hon. secretary, Mr. H. Saunders.—R. Symonds, Late Sec.

NEWARK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Boar's Head Hotel, Feb. 27. The society has had a successful year, having run three shows during that time. On the proposition of Mr. W. Toynbee, seconded by Mr. W. Measham, balance-sheet was adopted, showing a balance in hand of £4 6s. 2d. to commence the year with. Following officers elected:—President, Ald. W. E. Knight; vice-presidents, Ald. F. H. Appleby, Messrs. E. F. Nicholson, J. McNaught Davis, J. T. Parnham, and Botsford; chairman, Mr. W. Townbee; vice-chairman, Mr. A. Wells; hon. secretary, Mr. W. Lidgett; hon. treasurer, Mr. F. Smith; committee, Messrs. W. Measham, R. E. Shepherd, J. Lamb, W. Spinks, R. Simpson, F. R. Burtidge, A. Martin, J. Dolman, A. Coe, C. Timm, Messrs. A. Wells and W. Spinks were elected auditors.—W. Lidgett, Sec.

HANLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held at "George and Dragon," Mar. 6, when we had a fair muster of members. Moved and seconded that we guarantee 25s. advertg. in CAGE BIRDS, and that our show be fixed for Oct. 17. Will other societies take note of our date to avoid clashing? Mr. Naylor's terms for judging were accepted. We have a well lighted and well ventilated room, and I think there is more chance of visitors getting round without crushing. Mr. Naylor has promised to get a few specials for our show, and is himself giving a bronze medal for best Norwich bred by a member. Mr. W. Evans is giving a gold medal for the best Yorks. bred by a member. We made a new member in Mr. S. Taylor, and have prospects of more shortly. I hear that it is rumoured that the Hanley Society is going down, but I can assure all that we shall come out in full bloom in our turn. We have got the best balance in hand we have ever had, which is saying more than a good many can, and we are growing stronger every year in membership. We are slow but we are sure, which I think is the best in the end for any society.—W. G. Llewellyn, Sec.

WIGAN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A Lecture on the Pairing of Norwich.

A lecture was given by W. Dyer (Wigan) at headquarters ("Legs of Man" Hotel), on Mar. 2. There was a large attendance of members and fanciers. The lecturer brought with him a few birds so as to give those present an idea of the type of Norwich wanted for the show bench; also some books of Blakston's, showing the old style of Norwich (which was carefully studied by all). Mr. Dyer gave us first the scale of points of the specialist clubs. He said, in selecting your stock go in for type first, although most of the present-day judges went more for colour than they should do according to points allowed. He seemed to think type ought to stand before colour always. He preferred a medium sized pair for breeding purposes. If you are not able to get a medium sized pair, get a good sized cock, and put him to a typical hen; it would not matter if she were on the small side, as he found that the hen was responsible for type. Next came colour. Without colour you stood no chance on the show bench. To get colour you must have green blood in your stock, as green blood was the fountain of colour. Pair a green marked cock to a clear hen, or vice versa, and you would get a good colour in the young birds. By this pairing you would not get your stock too heavily marked. Next came quality of feather. Quality of feather showed a good typed bird off well. To get it, he preferred a cinnamon marked cock, as no doubt cinnamon blood improved quality of feather, and had a tendency to throw short wing and tail (which you must have in a typical Norwich, as long and crossed wing and long fish tails spoilt a nice bodied bird). Size was an important thing, as a good, big bird would always beat a good little one. Size was soon lost if you were not careful.

Double buffing, he found, improved size. Norwich fanciers had not gone as far as they might in this matter. The general idea was that after the first pairing you lost colour and quality, but look, he said, at German Canaries. You found here good colour and quality of feather; also Crests were good coloured birds, and it was rarely you found a yellow German or Crest. One also wanted a short beak, as nothing spoilt an otherwise good headed bird more than a long beak. He found that young follow their parents more in this point than in any; so one must be very careful to have birds good in this essential point. He continued: You want clear beak and legs; if they are not clear, while not disqualifying your bird, it tells against it in strong competition. If you have a good bird you must stage it in fine condition. You must have condition in order to get that lovely sheen seen on a show bird.

The lecturer then invited questions, which were freely asked. Mr. McAndrews: Where do marked beak and legs come from?—Answer: Green blood.

Mr. Vickers: Which is best for shortening feather—double-buffing or double-yellowing?—Double-buffing; double-yellowing improves colour.

Mr. Young: Do cinnamon-marked birds put quality in birds?—I find cinnamon-marked birds are extra quality birds. I am never without cinnamon blood in my stock.

Mr. McAndrews: Why do you prefer variegated birds?—In order to keep colour in stock.

Mr. Vickers: Which bird do you prefer for breeding type, cock or hen?—Hen.

Mr. Farremond: How do you get colour, by feeding or breeding for it?—Breeding.

Mr. Green: Do you prefer buff cock and yellow hen, or yellow cock and buff hen, for size?—It makes no difference.

Mr. Fairhurst: What makes buffs larger than yellows?—The feather is more dense in buffs, and the frame seems bigger.

Mr. Green: Can buffs be bred from two yellows?—Yes; but yellows cannot be bred from two buffs.

Mr. Horton: Is it possible that birds that fail on both sides can breed anything good?—You may breed something good if they come from good parents, but it will be by chance only. The proper way is, if one bird fails in one point to get a mate for it that is strong in that particular point.

Mr. Fairhurst: If two birds don't hit, would changing them make any difference?—If I had two birds which I thought would breed good birds, and their young failed to come up to my expectations, I would certainly try with another, and would hope to get better results.—H. Young, Sec.

SHERIFFHILL F. AND F.S.

Meeting held Mar. 2, St. John's Mission Hall, Mr. G. Willis in chair. Agreed, that we hold our nest feather show June 29; Messrs. Gilesby, Maddison, and Brown nominated judges. Since the meeting I have seen Mr. Gilesby, and as he had first choice I have fixed up with him. Proposed, that secretary try and get permission for our members to have a ramble through the woods of Lord Ravensworth, and if all goes well, same to be on Whit Monday. Owing to the capable way in which Mr. J. Gray (Low Fell) judged our table show in January, we have arranged with him to judge our April table show. A lot of other business was got through in good order, which brought a pleasant meeting to a close.—W. Stockton, Hon. Sec.

HARROGATE C.B.S.

Annual meeting, held Friendly Society's Hall, Mar. 4th. There was a good attendance. Balance sheet was read, showing a balance of £1 18s. 9½d., along with stock (tresseks and tables), £6 10s. Officers elected as follows:— The Hon. Ed. Wood, M.P., and Lady Dorothy (patron and patroness), H. Milling, Esq. (president); vice-presidents, D. Duncan, Esq., H. Abbott, Esq., H. Schunck, Esq., H. Webster, Esq., C. Richardson, Esq., Rev. T. S. Dawson, Miss C. M. Hawke; committee, Messrs. Beilby, Walker, Head, Lealman, Ireland, Houseman, Gill. Secretary was re-elected, with Mr. G. H. Barnwell as joint secretary and treasurer. Prizes for winter competition were distributed to the following winners:—1st, J. T. Hollins, 67 points; Gill, 60; Ireland, 57, in the open competition; in the novice, J. Blackburn, 50 points; C. Fleetham, 44.—W. E. Furgusson and G. H. Barnwell, Joint Secs.

PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 4. In the absence of the president, Mr. W. Richmond took the chair. After the usual business we were favoured with a lecture by Mr. A. Halliday (Shipley) on breeding and rearing. Commencing with the birdroom, he said some fanciers did very well, no matter what the aspect. The larger the cages are, he said, the better. Without cleanliness no fancier could hope for success. The seed needed to be the best you could lay hands on; poor seed would be dear as a gift. He next dealt with the stock birds; the points wanted in the cock needed to be extra good in the hen, and vice versa. He liked the old fashioned egg-food—home-made bread and hard boiled egg. He preferred watercress as greenfood. He then answered questions, of which there was any amount; he dealt with them all to the satisfaction of every.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 6th. It was the unanimous opinion of all that it was the finest meeting we have ever had. The occasion was the pair show and lecture afterwards on the birds, by Mr. J. Robson. The room was crowded by members and friends, and we were very glad to see several ladies present, who joined in the discussion afterwards. Mr. S. Pike presented a splendid silver cup for most wins with birds bred by exhibitor, after which Mr. G. H. Aeton presented us with another lovely silver cup for best bird bred by an amateur or novice. Both gentlemen were heartily thanked. Both cups were on view, and created a lot of interest. About 30 pairs were entered, and, as at the Nov. show, the Yorks. were in the majority. Breeders of this variety seem to be on the increase amongst members, and we are glad to see it, as they have been in the background for a long time. After judging, Mr. Robson gave us a thoroughly practical and instructive lecture. Plenty of questions were asked and answered in good style. By the time we had finished there was not time to transact ordinary business, so it was left till next meeting. Principal points winners were: Messrs. F. Dearlove 21, S. Pike 18, F. T. Avis 16, A. Montgomery 14, E. J. Sheppard 14.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

ILFORD AND COUNTY F. & F.S.

Business of the annual general meeting completed, after an adjournment, at an extraordinary special general meeting held Feb. 27th, Mr. F. W. Holliday in chair. Decided, that in future the society be named "The Ilford and County Fur and Feather Society," the radius to remain as before. Annual subscriptions raised from 2s. 6d. to 3s. per annum. In future there will be a cup fee of 1s. per section, same to cover any number of exhibits in one section only (not all as heretofore). Mr. Jerrold kindly promised a sectional cup, for which he was kindly thanked; it was given unconditionally. In future where there is only one exhibitor in a class, half points only are to be allowed to count for 1st, 2nd, and 3rds. Election of officers: Patrons: Sir J. H. Bethell, Bart., M.P., Ald. W. P. Griggs, J.P., and H. Jell, Esq.; president, Councillor, F. D. Smith; vice-presidents, F.W. Holiday, Esq., and A. Webb, Esq.; club reporter, Mr. E. J. Reynolds; hon. auditors, Messrs. J. Clarke and J. Blennerhassett; hon. sec. and treasurer, Mr. J. H. Priestman; hon. assistant sec., Mr. H. Brown; committee: Messrs. G Bransford, A. Gollintz, W. J. Goddard, E. Jarrold, A. Keates, H. Phipps, E. J. Reynolds, W. L. Roe, R. Stevens, E Satherthwaite, S. E. Towson. An interesting list of fixtures was arranged for 1912, including a lecture by Mr. C. A. House, judging competitions, and a lantern lecture by Mr. W. L. Rae. Members elected: Messrs. F. Warne, H. Cox, E. Lawson, H. Blows, H. Cook, J. Bramble, H. Ratter, G. Oliver.—E. J. Reynolds.

ASHINGTON AND HIRST C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 24th, Harmonic Hall, Mr. J. Miles presiding over a good attendance. Decided, to have annual show Nov. 9th. Classification, 28 classes. Mr. J. Stanger, judge. Arranged, that secretary get Mr. E. Floyd to give a washing exhibition at next meeting.—W. Hall, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Mar. 2, Mr. J. Farrer presiding. Messrs. Rawson and Proctor were made members. Next meeting Mar. 16th, when we will consider question of holding the open show and fixing dates. Fanciers wishing to join will be welcomed. All members are requested to attend.—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

STIRLING AND DIST. C.B.S.

General meeting held Douglas Hotel, March 2, Mr. Summers in chair. The auditors examined the books and found them correct. New office-bearers elected: President, W. Summers; treasurer and sec., Wm. Clubb. Decided to hold annual show Nov. 16. Decided also to revise rules and nominate judges at next meeting, April 6.—Wm. Clubb, sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting held Mar. 2nd, at "The Earl Cathcart," Osnaburgh Street, Regents Park. Mr. A. Ransley in chair. Agreed, to hold a special meeting to settle details of competition for the Cathcart silver challenge cup, and other important business in connection with the association, on Mar. 16th, at 8 p.m. prompt. The committee hope every member will try and attend, so that rules for above competition may be thoroughly understood.—Alfred Mowl, Sec. pro tem., 60, Osnaburgh Street, Regents Park, N.W.

SHIPLEY O.S.

Annual meeting held Prince of Wales, Mar. 5, when a long agenda of business was gone through. Balance sheet showed a very creditable balance of over £9. Election of officers:—Chairman, J. B. Martin; vice-chairman, A. Brown; secretary, A. Tillotson; assist. sec., E. Grange; treasurer, L. Crossland; auditors, J. B. Martin, H. H. Towers; trustees, H. H. Towers, J. B. Holroyd; Union delegates, A. Brown, E. Grange. Dates and classification for members' show arranged, which I hope to have in schedule form in the course of a few weeks. We have made some good classification for champions and novices, and we hope for as good competition as last year.—A. Tillotson, Sec.

HEYWOOD AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting held Feb. 27. Mr. J. Dewhirst presided. After the usual business the members took part in a judging competition. Mr. J. Lees (Rochdale) judged (6 Norwich pairs). Mr. A. Smith won 1st prize, 2nd being divided between Messrs. J. Moscrop and R. Schofield. On Mar. 6, members again met, and Mr. J. W. Howarth presided. The meeting was arranged in honour of our president, Mr. J. Perry, who is leaving the district, having accepted a new position. During the evening Councillor R. D. McMurdo, on behalf of the members, presented a silver-mounted umbrella to him. In a few well chosen words Mr. Perry said he should never forget the happy times he had spent at our meetings, and the kindness shown him by the members. We have engaged Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield) to judge our F.F. show on June 29. We are hoping to have a good time at our coming shows.—A. H. Meadowcroft, Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held Crown Hotel, March 6th, followed by a table show of matched pairs of British birds. Mr. Broadhurst in chair. Mr. Mole presented the audited accounts for 1911. The receipts for members' subs. were the highest since the fee was reduced a few years ago from 6s. to 4s. Unfortunately the open show again resulted in a heavy loss of £11 8s. 9d., while that on next feather show was 14/2. A whip-round to wipe out the deficiency realised £4 12s. 6d., the net result for the year being an adverse balance of 6s. 4d. But had all the donations promised, and other outstanding items, been received, there would have been a good balance to carry forward. The society had other assets to the value of £6. Messrs. Smith and Fessy were elected members, and two other nominations were received. Mr. Jeffrey arranged to give his lecture on British softbills on April 3rd, and we heartily invite all bird lovers, whether members or not, to be with us. Report of show will be found in another column; prize money paid out same evening. During the evening Mr. F. Peace explained his matings in Crest class. Taking out a Crest he showed the deficiency of feather at back of head, and said it resulted from double cresting with unsuitable birds, and to counteract that he had mated it to a yellow Lancashire. The other pair (both Crests) he thought had the essential qualities for producing typical Crests, both having neat Crests, with good centre and nice veiny feather; and he intended breeding them as paired that evening. Mr. Broadhurst also explained his pairing of Nor.; from one pair he expected to obtain good stock hens, and from the other two pairs show birds. He emphasized the importance of having plenty of size with good heads and wide entrance. Mr. Jeffrey means to wake up the British bird fanciers, and will guarantee two soft-bill classes at our next open show, as well as provide a special prize.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec., 169, Church Lane, Aston, Birmingham.

The Shows.

TRURO.

Second annual show of the Truro F. and F.S. held St. Dominic Mews, March 8. The entry was double last year's. The exhibits were nicely staged down one side of the hall, which was well lighted, and free from draughts. The winner in the A.O.V. class was a grand Goldie-Greenie Hybrid, shown in rattling fine form, which captured special for best in show. The novice medal was won by A. E. Buzza, with a capital Norwich yell.; special for most points, Messrs. Gaved and Stephens. The secretary, Mr. Pascoe, had everything well arranged, and carried out his duties in an able manner. The society in his hands should have a bright future. Mr. F. Collins (Camborne) judged, and his awards were well received.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual members' and inter-club show with Walsall C.B.S., held Mar. 2nd, Duke of York, when close on 90 birds were staged. Judges, Messrs. J. A. Tonks (Nor.), I. Jones (Yorks), F. J. Weaver (Brit.); and all gave satisfaction. Mr. J. Gibbons won special for best Canary; Mr. H. E. Rowley, special for best British. It was very pleasing to see our new members came to the front with the champions.

The Critique

NOR. CK. YELL. (2): 1, spl, Gibbons, nice cl., good head and front; 2, Weaver, fine well filled neck and back, fails only in substance. NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held Mar. 7; chairman, Mr. T. C. Crawhall. Rules were revised, and several alterations made to facilitate business of the society. Messrs. Thurston (Cramlington), G. W. Scott (Newcastle), and T. Nirley (Newcastle) were elected members. A discussion was held on the cause and cure of a white furry substance appearing under the feather of birds. Several members gave their opinion, and two cures were suggested, one being paraffin oil, and the other sulphur mixed mixed into a paste with milk or lard. Carried, that meetings commence at 7.30 p.m. in future, instead of 8 o'cl. This concluded one of the most successful meetings Newcastle C.B.S. has held. Subs. are now due, and members are requested to pay same as quickly as possible to—J. W. Reed, Sec., 218, Ladykirk Road, Newcastle.

SUCCESS

in any hobby is much to be desired, and in few hobbies is success so full of practical value as in that of bird-keeping. The question of outlay, either in time or money, is, however, very important, and your resources being limited, you are unable to rely upon your own experiences to teach you. There is no need to. If you are interested in Canary breeding and management, or the production of Mules and Hybrids, and aspire to success in either, you have the experiences, the invaluable experiences of others to aid you in

ITS REALIZATION

"OUR CANARIES," by Claude St. John, is a work on Canaries only, by an author who is perhaps the greatest authority on the subject living. A glance at the contents will show you how completely this great subject has been treated. By easy stages, Claude St. John, assisted by specialists in each variety, leads the reader from the very groundwork of the hobby to ultimate success, and the whole style of the writing is such that it can be followed

WITHOUT DIFFICULTY.

"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS," by Charles Houlton, is a complete guide to the fascinating but difficult hobby of Mule and Hybrid Breeding. Look at the contents of the work. Never was Mule and Hybrid Breeding so thoroughly treated before. The Editors of each work are C. A. House and G. E. Weston, the former an authority on Canaries and a present-day leading judge; the latter, known throughout the Fancy as a specialist on Mules and Hybrids, and Canaries.

BOARDS, FRONTS, CAGE SETS.
FANCIERS, BE WARNED!

Fanciers be warned in time. Do not send for ready-made cages at ridiculously low prices. Read this: "Dear Sir,—I am sending you another order for 6 double breeding cage sets, and should like them as soon as possible. The reason I want them quickly is this: I wanted 6 double breeding cages, and not being able to make them up myself at the time I had them made by a well-known advertiser. Well, I had to burn them, as they were absolutely disgraceful.—Yours truly, J. Mitchell. 4, Parry Place, Plumstead, S.E." Fanciers, my cage sets make up into first-class cages only, and are honest value. Single breeding cage sets, 18 x 17 x 10, 2/2; doubles, 36 x 17 x 10, 4/2; fittings for same, including best white earthenware nest pans, with brackets, hooks and linings, best egg drawers, latest flat-sided drinkers and wires, 3 in. seed box sets, for singles 8d., for doubles 1/4; best quality boards, 3-ply wood, etc.; stamp for list and samples: Orford, Cage Set Specialist, 105, Cromwell-rd., Patricroft, Manchester.

AINLEY'S UNIVERSAL FOOD

for Canaries and Finches. The advantages we claim for this food are that it rears entirely from the nest; it is safe and reliable, and no further additions are required beyond a few greens. It is easily mixed with colour food, and for getting birds into show condition it stands without an equal. It contains ingredients unknown in any other foods, and the last grain is eagerly eaten and enjoyed by the birds. It is also a splendid addition to the food of all Parrots, which partake of grain, and we make this unique offer that if not as stated, return it, and get your money back in full; 1/3 per lb; 4 lbs., 4/6; 10 lbs., 10/-, free: John William Ainley, 16, Daltongreen, Huddersfield.

ARE YOU LOOKING

for a Roller Canary? If so, your opportunity is here. I have just received a consignment of special stock birds from Leipzig. This consignment consists of 150 Bandmaster cocks and 150 hens of same strain, all of which have been specially selected for this season's breeding. They are in strong, vigorous condition, and ready for immediate breeding. Cocks are in full song, day and gaslight, with hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of nightingale, bell, harp, gong and flute notes, etc., etc. Price 10/- each, hens 3/- each, matched pairs 12/6. These Roller cocks have been carefully selected for their great variety of changes, and are not like the ordinary Roller with the long drawn out train whistle roll and full stop. Special Roller cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 each; ordinary singing box cages 1/6 and 2/- each. I also have a splendid stock of pure bred, typical Norwich and Yorkshire cocks in full song, at 6/-, 7/6, 8/6 and 10/- each; hens 2/6, 3/6, 4/- and 5/- each; matched pairs, either Norwich or Yorkshires, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6 pair. Anyone requiring genuine stock birds at low price would do well to give me a trial, as I do not charge inflated prices for fictitious strains. All Canaries are sent on full week's trial at my risk, on receipt of cash or deposit system, and money refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. As I guarantee safe arrival and take risk for a week after you have received bird, do not be afraid to send for one on account of curtailment of train service. This is last consignment of Roller Canaries I shall receive this season, so order now, or you may be too late.

I have some of the best extant, cocks and hens. I can show my winners to anyone or send on approval, as I do not make myself into a mere gashag, full of pin-pricks, nor trade under a false name, for that is what I call stooping to a low level indeed. THE YORKSHIRE BREEDERS

To Fumigate a Birdroom.

Readers who are troubled with red mites should remove all birds from bird-room, then stop up all niches round windows and doors with paper, and get a bucket (tin) one quarter full of unslaked lime. Place this in the centre of the room and pour sixpennyworth of "eight-eighty" ammonia into the bucket with the lime. Of course you must "hop it" as soon as you have put the ammonia with the lime. This not only kills all insects, but "stoves" the room.—W. H. Appleton, 12, Anthony Street, West Gorton, Manchester.

Obtaining Roomy Baths.

To obtain a roomy bath, which enables our birdy friends to bathe with every freedom, and at the same time keep their living cage snug and dry, sort out your old Yorkshire show cages, take off the door and a wire at each side to widen the aperture; place inside a shallow dish or tin to hold the water. If you treat three or four cages like this, and hang them all on at the same time, it will induce even your "tramps" to take their "annual," as they can see the other birds ducking and splashing about.—Thomas Pluck, Oak Street, Cargo Fleet, Yorkshire.

To Trap Red Mites.

Keep away the red mite from the cages by using thin bamboo perches. First burn out the centre to make it hollow. Then cut one or two holes underneath the perch. Every morning take the perches out and tap on a piece of paper, and then you will shake out the mites. This should be done regularly every morning as the red mites leave the perches and return to the birds at night.—Mrs. Taylor, 44, Aberfeldy Street, Poplar.

Rearing Young Hybrids.

Knowing the difficulty in rearing young hybrids from two British birds, when the eggs have been put to a hen Canary to incubate, I advise removing young hybrids as early as possible to another hen Canary that has been feeding other young for three or four days, as by this time the Canary begins to feed in a more solid form, which is more to the nature of the young hybrids, as wild birds feed "coarse" from the time of the young being hatched. This is not so with the Canary; she feeds more of a fluid nature for three or four days. This the young hybrids cannot take, therefore are lost. I pen this from a life's experience, having reared a few good hybrids.—T. Fisher, 7, Gerrard Street, Willow Lane, Lancaster.

A Warning When Painting.

Now the time for cleaning and painting cages has commenced, the bird-room (with most fanciers) is generally the place where this work is done. When repainting cages see that the drinking vessels in the cages wherein birds are kept are washed out and filled with clean water. The reason for this is that the vapour from the paint settles in the form of a thin skin on the water, and if this is left on the birds may drink it with fatal results.—H. Hunt, Dartmouth.

Cleansing Drinking Vessels.

Place a small quantity of clean gritty sand in the drinkers, together with a little water. Then rub the finger round, pressing the sand against the glass, and it will thoroughly rid them of any "foreign" matter. To cleanse the closed top fountains put the sand and water in as before, place the thumb over the drinking hole, and shake vigorously, and it will make them look like crystal.—William Lascelles, Seghill.

The Fining of a London Bird Dealer.

The officials of the R.S.P.C.A. last week successfully prosecuted a woman bird-shop keeper, and the case was fully reported in the last issue of Cage Birds. The total stock of this dealer consisted of twelve Skylarks, a few Linnets, and three pigeons. Only a few of the back cages in which the Linnets were kept for sale, four of the Lark cages, and one store cage, were old ones. The remainder were practically new, having been in use only for a day or two, and there were plenty of witnesses available to prove that, although the birds were not kept in ideal conditions, yet their state as a whole was not such as to furnish grounds for a prosecution. In fact, there was only one cage in the shop which could be truly said to be in a neglected condition, and this was a store cage. In this cage there had been kept for a time a Skylark which had unfortunately broken one of its feet.

All practical bird-keepers know that in very many cases a broken foot may be set in small splints in such a way that the bird will shortly regain its full use; also that when by the nature of the fracture it is necessary to amputate the broken portion, the operation is a simple one, entailing very little pain, and one from which the bird quickly recovers. This bird had been so operated upon, and the defendant informed me that she should have given the bird its freedom after the operation, if it had not been for a relation of hers who begged her to give him the bird, and she was keeping it for him until he was ready to take it away. Here the society would have found it difficult to prove "wanton cruelty." The injury was the result of an accident, and three alternatives were open to the owner, to kill the bird, to set it free to fend for itself with only one foot, or to keep it and feed it in a cage. It was certainly not "wanton cruelty" to adopt the latter proceeding.

The Real Offence.

Where the defendant was really at fault was in being in possession of a Thrush which, acording to the evidence of the prosecution, was suffering with cramp, and in keeping this bird and the Skylark in a cage which was in a very dirty condition. She had the excuse that the Thrush had only been in her possession for a few minutes, and she was unaware what was wrong with it, but this did not alter the actual fact, nor did it explain the condition of the cage, and she was fined in consequence.

A Doubtful Diagnosis.

As usual, the prosecution made the very most of the case, and called a veterinary surgeon who gave it as his opinion that this bird (which had only been in the dirty cage for an hour) was suffering from blood-poisoning, set up by eating contaminated food. The condition of the cage could not be denied, and it was of very little use to suggest that the veterinary surgeon was wrong in his diagnosis. The defendant was therefore, as stated last week, fined twenty shillings, and the Society will probably use the incident as a groundwork of a diatribe against the "horrors" of bird-shops in the gross. The prosecution emphasises the fact that the Society is straining every nerve to obtain convictions, and if it result in directing the attention of bird-shop keepers to the certainty that any slight lapse on their part may result in prosecution and fine, we members of Cage Birds League will, as bird lovers, have no cause to regret that the action was brought.

Leicester C.B.S. and the League.

Members of Cage Birds League will be pleased to see from the report which appears in our Club Reports column, that the committee of the above Society has passed a resolution to the effect that one half of the subscriptions of its members to Cage Birds League shall be paid from the funds of the Society, the individual members having only, therefore, to pay sixpence a year themselves, together with the price of their badges. The result of the resolution has been that three-quarters of the members present at the meeting have given in their names, and it is expected that practically all will come in.

It is gratifying to know that fanciers are realising that Cage Birds League has no axe to grind. It is here for the protection of the Fancy, for the furtherance of the proper keeping of birds in captivity, and for the promotion of good-fellowship among bird-lovers of every grade. It has no aspiration or intention of becoming a governing body, and will not conflict or interfere with any club or society. No effort will be spared to further in every possible manner the best interests of bird-keeping, and of those who make bird-keeping their hobby, and the more members who are enlisted under its banner the more powerful will be its voice whenever occasion arises for it to speak out. Cage Birds has 50,000 readers, and Cage Birds League should have 50,000 members, without counting those keepers of just a bird or two who do not yet know that there is such an organisation as our League, or such a paper as our official organ, Cage Birds. Individual fanciers could do much on behalf of the League by simply mentioning its existence to outside bird-owners.

"The Finest Thing for the Fancy."

Mr. Wm. Cumming, Hon. Sec. of Forres and Northern Onithological Association, writes as follows:—At the annual meeting of the above Association, held last week, we resolved to have only cage birds at our annual show, as the committee is now composed of cage bird fanciers. A discussion arose with regard to members joining the League. I hope to get the majority to join in the course of a week or two, as the members are all agreed it is the finest thing that could happen for the Fancy.

Medal Scheme in Preparation.

To replace our last year's scheme of returning half the membership fees in the form of original drawings and paintings, there is now in course of preparation an arrangement under which Societies will receive as special prizes gold, silver, and bronze medals, in proportion to their membership of the League. Full particulars as to this will be announced as quickly as possible. It is recognised that the granting of these medals will add a new zest to competition on the show bench, and will increase the entries at any show at which they are offered. Societies will do well, therefore, to follow the excellent example of the Leicester C.B.S., and ensure that they have some of these medals to add to their schedule of prizes.

How Some Members are Helping.

A fortnight ago I mentioned that one of our members had taken the trouble to controvert misstatements which had been published in a local paper, having been contributed by one of the sentimentalists who hold that the keeping of pet birds is an atrocity, and I am glad to hear that several other members of our League are taking opportunities to disprove similar letters when they come under their notice. Letters of such a nature generally come from those who know little or nothing of the subject, of which they write, and are written for the edification of those who know, if possible, less. One reply from anyone who knows something of bird keeping is generally sufficient to close the correspondence, but members of Cage Birds League will do well not to let these vapourings pass without that reply, and it is pleasing to gather that our members are recognising this.

One member writes as follows:—"I cannot understand why it is that all those who keep pet birds do not come forward and join the League. Perhaps they do not take Cage Birds, and so are unaware of the doings of those who would put an end to the hobby. If they are aware of it, I think it is cool of them to stand aside and let the League fight the battle." This is what I have been saying myself week after week, and I hope the members will do their best to make known to every one who keeps a bird the objects and work of Cage Birds League.

ATHERTON.

Atherton Linnet Club first open-to-all-England Linnet sing, held Mar. 16th, Queen's Arms, Bolton Road, when 30 birds sang for some good prizes. The entry was not as good as it might have been, but, of course, the coal strike had a lot to do with it. I was a little surprised at there not being an entry from Salford, Blackburn, or Wigan, but I expect the strike has affected them also, for they are nearly always represented. We gave prizes for both classes of singing for quality. Winners: W. Barnes, 1; T. Statham, 2; J. W. Jones, 3; J. M'Allister, 4. For time: R. Fairhurst, 1, 172; J. Poole, 2, 163; R. Halliwell. After the contest we decided to call a general meeting for Mar. 22 at 7.30 o'clock, when all members are requested to attend. Mr. Pearson (Salford) kindly sent a grand Canary cage for a special; this was won by R. Fairhurst for first club member who missed a prize in quality; also another Canary cage for a guessing competition, which was won by H. Barber with 250. J. M'Allister, Sec.

Livezine, Limited, of Grimsby, are placing a food on the market for the rearing of young birds in what should be a very popular form, the packets costing but 2d. each. The scientific analysis of it is certainly of a very high order. It is composed largely of desiccated yolks, and the name given it is "Desiccated Yolk of Egg." This is claimed to be the best food for rearing young Canaries and for use when the birds are moulting or in delicate health.

Hamilton (Cadzow) Oaks O.S. have secured the services of the following specialist judges for their show on Nov. 9, writes Mr. G. Marlin, the sec.:—For Norwich Plainheads, Mr. J. I have again taken over the secretaryship of the Redhill C.B.S. for another year, writes Mr. A. W. Bacon. The Leeds C.B.S. syllabus for 1912 includes lectures on "Breeding and Rearing (on April 6), "British Birds" (by Mr. H. J. Chittenden), etc.; a First Feather Show (June 1; judge, Mr. W. A. Wilson, 75, Bayswater Mount, Roundhay, Leeds.

It came as a great pleasure to find my three Border Fancy Canaries on the front page of your very popular paper, Cage Birds. Mr. Norman must be a great artist, as he has made a very lifelike sketch of same. The yellow hen that was 3rd at the Palace was awarded 1st at Carlisle (Border City) Show in October, and was shown sixteen times afterwards, never being without a money ticket. I think it a fairly good record.—H. Davidson (Lockerbie).

Our society have elected Messrs. A. Brown (Gateshead) and F. Marwood (Eaglescliffe) to judge our open show on Nov. 8 and 9, the former to judge the Canary section and the latter the British, Mules, and Foreign birds, writes Mr. W. Elliott, sec. of the West Stanley C.B.S. On March 23 Mr. A. Brown will lecture at headquarters (the Town Hall) on "The Norwich Plainhead." All members please turn out at 6.30 p.m. Members still being enrolled.

I have sold my unflighted ticked buff Norwich cock, also clear yellow, to Mr. W. H. Howe, of Wellingborough, for a good figure, writes Mr. R. P. Bixter (Prescot). Their wins were:—Buff: 1st Manchester (Novice), 1st Thatto Heath, 2nd Lancaster and Preston, 3rd Runcorn and Liverpool, etc.; Yellow: 1st Lancaster and Thatto Heath, 2nd Preston, champion classes. These two were brothers, and reared in the same nest. I wish the new owner good luck.

The marking rings for young Canaries and other birds which are sold by Mr. Sam Drake (Haley Hill, Halifax) have acquired a very high and deserved reputation, and his goods for the 1912 season should be even more popular than ever. Mr. Drake, who is one of our oldest established makers of rings, writes:—"I had to give up advertising last season because I had so many orders for rings at the latter end of the season from the Aberdeen University, but this time I shall be able to get every order out for rings the same day, as I have been making all winter for the University, and have got them all finished."

Wishing to improve our strain of Yorkshire Canaries, we placed our wants in the hands of reliable breeders, Messrs. Ogden Bros., Bradford, and asked them to forward us on three pairs. The birds were of such excellent type and quality that we were delighted with them, never having seen such Yorkshires before. We can confidently recommend Messrs. Ogden Bros. to our New Zealand and Australian fellow-fanciers for first-class Yorkshires, knowing that they will be treated in a straightforward and businesslike manner.—Eastway Bros. (Auckland, New Zealand).—Advt.

"Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, contains this month accounts of the aviaries of Mr. Temple, by Mr. Wesley T. Page; and of Miss C. W. Thorburn, by "A Visitor." Notes on the breeding of Tanagers are given by Mr. J. Easton Scott; of Pekin Robins, by Mr. E. Chawner; and of Silver-eared Mesias, by Mr. O. Millsum. Other articles are —"The Black-headed Sibia" and "The Himalayan Whistling Thrush," both by Mr. H. Goodchild; and "Tanagers in Cages," by Lady Pilkington. Mr. W. S. Bailey records his nesting results for 1911, and Mr. H. Willford continues his very interesting notes entitled "Bird Life Through the Camera."

Through the kindness of a few friends, I am able to announce that a very handsome silver cup will be offered for competition in novice Canary classes, to be won outright, at our annual autumn show on Nov. 5 next, writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec. of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. Novices joining the society at once will be eligible to compete for this, as well as for the other trophies, namely, "News of the World' Shield, Points Cup, and Young Bird Bowl. A handsome silver-plated coffee pot (Grahame Trophy) is open for competition in the British bird classes only, besides a wealth of other specials always provided at our shows. Now, fanciers, is your chance. Send your names to me at 39, Friern Road, East Dulwich, and become members at once.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

Nomination of officers for 1912.—Will members fill in the nomination papers in centre of club's handbook, and return to the secretary not later than March 31? Members in arrears of subscriptions, please remit same at their earliest convenience.—John Greaves, secretary.

U.S.A. Birdy Men Please Note.

I would like cage bird fanciers over here to look me up or correspond, writes Mr. S. F. Carpenter (53, East 74th Street, New York), as it is hard work getting into touch with birdy men, as we have no paper published in the United States.

How to Rear Canaries.

I think my essay of last week would have been improved if I had stated that when the youngsters are placed in a cage by themselves the infusion of gentian and Parrish's Chemical Food should be discontinued gradually as they grow stronger. The infusian of gentian checks them from drinking too much, and the chemical food aids digestion; so I advise that neither be discontinued too quickly.—H. A. Waddington (Earlestown).

Grimsby Fancier's Total Loss.

Mr. J. Drinkell, a member of Cage Birds League, writes to Mr. Fulljames as under. We trust that any Grimsby reader who may have birds offered to him in circumstances which suggest that they may be some of Mr. Drinkell's birds will do his best to help this fancier to trace the culprit or culprits:—"I have had the misfortune to have my aviary broken into," he writes; "and if you could kindly make a reference to this in our journal, Cage Birds, it may be the means of tracing the thieves. The birds stolen were one yellow hen, two yellow cocks, two ditto colour-fed, one variegated hen, two cock Goldfinches (one Siberian, one Welsh), two Linnets, twenty-three month-old Canaries. Besides losing the birds, two nests of eggs have been spoilt." Mr. Drinkell's address is 69, Tunnard Street, Grimsby.

He Got His "Bargain."

The other day, in the Cattle Market at Holloway, one of the itinerant "bird dealers" was plying his calling. He had a nice stock of German Canaries of striking colour. Standing by was a quiet-looking workman. "There! two hob; warranted to sing in three days after you get it home, or your money back." The workman bought the bird, and was told he had a "bargain." He laughed, and said: "Oh, yes, I believe I've got the bargain that I wanted. This is the sixth bird I've had, and the other five which you warranted cocks have all turned out hens. So whenever I want a hen now I know where I shall be sure to get one. There's nothing like coming to a man in whom you have confidence, is there? Here's your two bob, for I know I've got a right 'un."

Swallows Nesting in a Train.

In the Australian magazine, the "Emu," attention is drawn to the remarkable, and, it is believed, unparalleled, fact of a pair of Swallows building in one of the carriages of a train. The Swallows (Hirundo neoxena) had built their nest in the under iron framework of one of the second-class carriages of a train running daily from Stony Point to Mornington Junction and back (fifteen miles each way), but occasionally going on to Mornington Station, eight miles further. When examined at Somerville Station early in December last the nest contained five eggs, which were then warm. The nest, which appears to have been constructed at Mornington Junction terminus, is stated to have taken five weeks in building. The birds were not seen to be always following the train, but joined it at various points en route.

Appreciated Sympathy.

Mr. V. Wynn asks us to return his heartfelt thanks to those who sent him such kindly words of sympathy in his recent great bereavement, as he finds it impossible to personally answer all who wrote. The numerous messages—many of them from fanciers in different parts of England who were previously unknown to him—have touched him deeply and helped in no small measure to lighten his burden of grief. The relatives of the late Miss Shephard join him in this expression of thanks.

Trouble in the L.C.B.A.

We regret to hear that serious internal dissension is rife in the London Cage Bird Association, resulting in stormy scenes at the last meeting. We learn also that Mr. John Tyson, who has played such a prominent part in the history of the L.C.B.A. for over 20 years, having been secretary, treasurer and show manager by turn, has tendered his resignation as a member; while the chairman of committee, Mr. Tinniswood Miller resigned some little time ago. We sincerely hope some means of smoothing over the present troubles may be found and that the Association may not lose the services of such respected and valued members, but steer clear of the rocks which would seem to be looming ahead.

Progress at Lockerbie.

We are only having cage birds at Lockerbie Show this year, and are trying to make it as large a show as possible, writes Mr. H. Davidson. There will be more cups and medals (amongst other valuable prizes) offered for competition. We have a few "new hands" in the hobby, especially Dr. Irving, of this town, who has built a large outside aviary, and is filling it with British and foreign birds. Also we have Mr. Bryce (all the way from Bathgate), who is going in for pairs for hybrid breeding, also a few Border Fancies. Lockerbie will be a hotbed shortly for birds, and ere long I hope they will be able to boast of it being the Palace Show of the North.

Sparrows and Crocuses.

They say that it is for the sake of the saffron in it that the Sparrows attack the crocus, playing sad havoc among the spring flowers of this name, writes "Whist" in the "North Mail." There are several ways of keeping the birds off. The best way that I know of is to stick into the ground, all along the crocus border, small pieces of twig about a foot high and a yard apart. Take a reel of ordinary black sewing cotton, tie it to the end stick and carry it from one stick to another, giving a few twists round each to keep it firm. This is a sure protection. The Sparrows are afraid of getting their feet entangled in the thread, and do not touch the flowers so protected. If the twigs are cut from shrubs or trees they hardly show at all, and do not disfigure the borders.

The Lady's Slight Mistake.

We have received, says the "Swindon Evening Advertiser," the following remarkable letter from the Secretary of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds:—

> Sir,—It is to be hoped that the picture which appears in the "Daily Mail" of two detestable young women wearing stuffed Robins in their hats as a "compliment" to the Swindon Football Team, is a libel and an invention. The footballers who call themselves by the name of our popular little Redbreast can hardly be gratified by seeing the dead bodies of their mascot stuck on girls' heads, and if they possess the ordinary healthy instinct of young Englishmen are more likely to hiss the wearers off the ground than to wish to walk out with them on Sunday.
> I am, sir, your obedient servant,
> (Miss) L. Gardiner.
> Sec. R.S.P.B.

This is really too funny for words. Miss Gardiner might have spared herself much pain and trouble had she taken the simple and judicious step of ascertaining whether the Robins which these "two detestable young women" were wearing were actually stuffed, or merely artificial. One can well imagine the indescribable shock which this revolting picture must have given this good lady, and we hasten to calm her feelings by at once assuring her that these "popular little Redbreasts" are nothing more or less than a fantastic composition of felt, paper, and wadding—in fact, quite artificial! They can be bought in Swindon for one penny each. No fewer than eight thousand of these perky little mascots were sold in Swindon last year by one tradesman alone.

How Cinnamon Blood Has . . Improved the Modern Yorkshire.

— By —
Messrs. Ogden Bros.
(Bradford).

The Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire and the problems of its breeding are dealt with by two of the most noted of present-day exhibitors. They consider Cinnamon blood indispensable to any winning strain of Yorkshires.

YOU have asked one of the most difficult questions possible, namely, concerning the breeding of Cinnamon-marked birds. It is impossible to get a single Cinnamon-coloured feather from dark-eyed birds, providing (mind you) they have no Cinnamon blood in them. But it is nearly impossible to tell when many of the Yorkshires of to-day possess Cinnamon blood, for there has been so much bred into them of late years that it is impossible to get a Yorkie and definitely say, "There is no Cinnamon blood in this bird." Mind you, we don't mean there are no Yorkshires without Cinnamon blood, but there are very few. We certainly can breed Cinnamon-marks from dark-eyed birds, but we must have bred the dark-eyed ones, and know exactly how they were bred. It would be folly for anybody to start and try to breed Cinnamon-marks from dark-eyed birds if they did not know how the latter were bred.

One of the Brightest "Stars" in Canarydom.

This beautiful variety (the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire) is one of the prettiest and most interesting of all Canaries. What can be more effective or charming to the eye than a bird with two good eye-marks and a pair of well-balanced wings? To our mind an even-marked bird of this description is one of the brightest "stars" in all the Canary family. Just recently we had a fancier in our rooms who asked us if we had no Cinnamon-marked birds with dark eyes, so we think it will be of benefit to the new beginner to state here that all Cinnamon-marks have pink eyes; even if they have only one Cinnamon feather you will know they are pink-eyed. When they get to be adults the pink of the eye is not usually easy to distinguish, except by an experienced fancier, and he cannot always be certain. The best way to tell them is to run the birds into the show cage and hold them up to the window to a strong light; this is the best way to catch a glimpse of the pink tinge of the eye. But when the birds are young (in the nest) they are very easy to tell, as their eyes are like "drops of blood." Then there is the clear bird with pink eyes (carrying no Cinnamon feathers at all). The pink eye denotes Cinnamon blood. Whenever you see a bird with pink eyes you will be certain it has Cinnamon blood in it; but the dark-eyed birds that have Cinnamon blood in them you cannot tell, except by knowing how they are bred.

We should advise the new beginner to start with, on one side, a Cinnamon-marked bird, marked on both eyes and both wings, and, on the other side, a clear pink-eyed bird, or one very slightly ticked; because by pairing two marked birds together, in a lot of cases they throw the young too heavily marked, and we have proved that it pays better to be under marked rather than over, as the clear pink-eyed, or slightly ticked birds, will sell better than the heavily-variegated and whole Cinnamons. We have bred several whole Cinnamons when pairing two good marked birds, so the new beginner must not think that if he pairs two perfect marked birds together, he is going to get all the young perfect in markings; not at all. It is quite possible to get clear, ticked, good marked, or self Cinnamons from them.

Certain to Breed Good Marked Birds.

Now the following year, if you pair one of these whole (self) Cinnamons to a clear pink-eyed bird, you will be certain to breed good marked birds, providing the clear pink-eyed one comes from good marked stock; if it is of the same strain and a bit related to its mate, it will be no worse. We have on several occasions bred with whole Cinnamons in this way, and have produced some champion marked birds (both eyes and both wings) as near even as possible. But you must not think you can do it with any whole Cinnamons. Here, again, comes in the advantage of knowing how they are bred. If there is a time when blood (or "pedigree") is of vital importance, it is in even-marked breeding. You must know something of the birds' forefathers to be successful.

A real champion winning Cinnamon-marked bird is more difficult to breed than clear birds, for the simple reason that you have marking to attend to, over and above all the other properties. For instance, you may get a clear pink-eyed bird, or one or two heavy-marked birds, perfect in type and quality and all other things; then you say, if this had only been correctly marked, what a knock out. On the other hand you may get a bird perfect in markings, but failing in type, quality, or some other important property. So you will see that you cannot be too careful in selecting your stock.

The Advantage of Cinnamon Blood.

The advantage of having Cinnamon blood in the Yorkshire is that it helps you to get colour and quality. By mixing Cinnamon and Green together we get those lovely salmon-tinted buffs. You can put Cinnamon blood into your stock without breeding Cinnamon-marks by using the pink-eyed hens, as by pairing a pink-eyed hen to a dark-eyed cock you will never get a Cinnamon feather, if the cock has no Cinnamon blood in him. Cinnamon marking comes from the cock's side, so you see you are compelled to have Cinnamon blood in the cock to produce Cinnamon-coloured feathers in the young the first year. But the sons of the above pair (pink-eyed hen and dark-eyed cock) mated up the following year to dark-eyed hens, will be capable of throwing Cinnamon marks; but all the Cinnamon-marks so bred will be hens, as it is impossible to get a Cinnamon-marked cock bird by this method of pairing. But pair these same cocks to pink-eyed or Cinnamon-marked hens and you can produce Cinnamon-marked cocks.

If you want to breed Cinnamon-marks the first year, it is best to mate a Cinnamon-marked cock to a dark-eyed hen. We advise a dark-eyed hen because the dark-eyed birds are supposed to be better in type. But if you are pairing this way with a view to improve type, see that the dark-eyed hen is really typical, as there are a lot of dark-eyed hens a long way off the type we require. If you want to breed all Cinnamon-marks, it is best to have pink-eyed on both sides; then you can depend on all the young being pink-eyed. If you find your stock throwing too many clear pink-eyed birds, it is advisable to breed with a whole Cinnamon, or a heavy marked bird occasionally, to keep the marking up; but mind it comes from a good marked strain, as we have proved that marking wears out or deteriorates. What we mean by this is, the birds drift so much towards clears; this is proved by the original Green Canary, from which all Canaries have descended.

There is another curious thing about Cinnamon blood; once you have put it in, you can never breed it out. Cinnamon blood can lie dormant for practically any length of time and then show itself, to the surprise of the owner, by a pair throwing a Cinnamon-marked or pink-eyed youngster. This is exactly the way we bred our buff Cinnamon-marked hen which won first prize at the Crystal Palace "Jubilee" show. We had introduced no Cinnamon blood into this strain for 10 or 11 years, and we were rather surprised to get a real good marked one (marked both eyes and both wings and very evenly balanced). You must have Cinnamon blood in the Yorkshires of to-day to be successful on the show bench, as we have proved beyond doubt that this is the source whence we get that lovely tint of colour, also that glossy appearance of the plumage so much admired to-day on the show bench.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

The second instalment of a very instructive discourse upon British birds, delivered before the Edinburgh C.B.S.

MAKE some so-called "bird-lime" — a compound resembling a mixture of treacle and Stockholm tar. If you purchase it you will perhaps get it in a tin with two lids, the inner one having holes in which small twigs are inserted, printed directions for use being supplied with each box. You are instructed to stick the twigs on a hedge or bush at an angle of forty-five degrees (perhaps birds don't like any deviation from this rule), and the directions conclude with the only sensible action of the whole proceedings—"retire and hide yourself," to which I should add, "and never more show yourself." The subsequent results can be imagined, that is, if any foolish but unfortunate bird alights on those twigs before the alleged bird-lime has run off or dried on them; a besmeared and miserable victim is left scrambling about the hedge bottom to show that the "fool bird-catcher" has been there. This is one of the things which bring discredit on bird-keepers.

Using Bird-Lime Humanely.

I will now describe the humane method of using good bird-lime. Make or purchase some proper bird lime, tough and elastic in consistency; this is made from holly bark; it should neither run nor "freeze," and when affixed should be capable of being disengaged without injuring a bird's feathers (as no lime remains on the bird). For Gold-crests, take a few lengths of esparto grass, that is, a tough wiry grass, largely imported from Spain and used in paper making; it is most familiar in the form of "carpet switches." In its natural state it has a slight crook at the base, and a long tapering point at the other end, both of which should be removed, the former because it precludes insertion, and the latter because it is liable to become entangled and break. The portion left will be about ten or twelve inches long. Take a number of these and separate them into two lots; dip the ends of one lot in the lime, and twist till sufficient is engaged, taking care not to get too much. If the lime is good it will be found necessary to cut it free from the tin. A pair of scissors, previously wetted, are useful for this purpose. Take the remaining lot of grasses and contrive by twisting the two lots together, to coat the grasses very lightly for two-thirds of their length with lime. Holding them before a fire facilitates this operation. These rolled in a sheet of strong glazed paper will be found effective in taking almost any species of bird.

I wish to impress one important point on those who mean to try this method of catching their own birds. Never go for a walk without the grasses. A habit becomes second nature. As sure as you go out and forget them, you will see something good; I have experienced this scores of times, and you will probably smile when I inform you that this pocket was made to hold grass, and that to hold my field glasses. This may seem like the Yankee habit of carrying a gun. I can, however, certify that the grass, like the gun, may be carried a long time without being required; but there comes an occasion when it is wanted "durned bad."

I may mention one of many instances; I had been on the look-out for a good Gold-crest for quite a long time, and all I had seen was a poor specimen, not worth taking. Accepting an invitation to visit our genial friend Wat., of Loanhead, I, in company with our worthy president, trained to Polton Station; of course, I forgot the grasses, and I touched a magnificent specimen twice with my stick that day. Now, if I had possessed the grasses I should have improvised a rod by splicing two hemlock stems or nettles and inserting two grasses in the top. I should without making any undue fuss or chasing have endeavoured to approach close enough to permit of my touching the bird on the wing with the limed portion, which, being very slightly inserted, would have remained on him and effectually prevented his flying.

The "Touch Down" Method.

If the bird is in a hedge, and you are accompanied by a friend, it is a good plan to ensconce yourself in a gap and allow him or her to drive it very gently towards you. I have found that holding a leafy branch before you greatly facilitates a near approach. This method of taking I term "the touch down." I have taken almost every species of Warbler by this means, also Tits, Treecreepers, Siskins, Redpolls, etc. It is a very convenient method of taking nestlings which have the power to fly but are still in that stage of infantile ignorance which allows you to approach so near, and yet be so far. I succeeded in marking over 100 birds for the Aberdeen University Bird Migration Enquiry Committee and a private gentleman last year—mostly by this method. As showing what can be done by effective screening, I touched down and marked seventeen Martins in one morning, not one of which lost a feather in the process. There are other methods of using the grass, which I will explain when you come to deal with the species. Meantime, having caught our Gold-crest, we will proceed to moat it off, or wean it on to a diet of preserved food. The stock cage for this and similar small insectivorous species, should be box pattern, i.e., wired in front only, and not less than 18in. long, 8in. deep, and 12in. high, as although these birds are small they are very active, and any sudden curtailment is detrimental to health.

It is not within the scope of my lecture to demonstrate the bad effects which result from a maximum of food and a minimum of exercise, but I wish to impress on you a the folly of expecting a bird to retain a healthy condition if confined in one of the small abominations too often met with.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT (First Year).—Many thanks for your appreciative letter and kind remarks about CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Hope you will have a successful season.

CAUSE OF DEATH (F.S.).—As a rule the only possible way in which to ascertain the cause of a death is to have a post-mortem on the body. In your case, however, there is no doubt whatever the bird died from an apoplectic seizure, and nothing you could have done after the attack came on would have been of any avail. If you could have anticipated the attack by a few days of spare plain dietary, with a liberal supply of green food, and frequent aperients, it might have been prevented, though even this would depend to some extent upon the nature of the exciting cause.

HOLDING BEAKS OPEN (Harry).—This is sometimes simply due to nervousness, or fright at some unfamiliar object. See if you can discover any such cause, and, if so, remove it, or place the birds where it will not trouble them much, when the effect will disappear. If no such cause exists, the birds are probably in an overfed condition. Try the treatment advised to "Portsmouth" for a fortnight, but give the sponge cake once only in each week, and omit from it the sherry and oil. Also give the buckthorn every second day for a week, and the gentian mixture every second day in the following week.

NOT SINGING (F. R. Armstrong).—Follow the advice given to "Portsmouth" as regards feeding and management. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day for a week, and in the next week give the gentian mixture as advised in the reply referred to. Also give a little of the following paste. Place a tablespoonful of pure honey, a small teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, and the same quantity of grain of paradise in a small gallipot, stand pot in a saucer of hot water, and mix thoroughly, adding, meanwhile, sufficient finely pounded biscuit to make a fairly stiff paste. When cold, cut off a small piece, and stick between the wires at the end of a perch for bird to peck when so disposed.

ASTHMA AND WHITE CANARIES (Fancy).—(1) The bird making a noise as you suggest does not necessarily mean it is suffering from asthma. See that it is kept in a comfortable and equable place quite free from draughts. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to its drinking water for two days, and afterwards give 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken in its water, every second day for a week. (2) When first obtained, white Canaries were certainly sports, or freaks, as you put it—but as they stand to-day they may well be regarded as the pioneers of a new, though, as yet, undeveloped, variety. White is the natural colour. They are not colour fed.

VARIOUS (Mrs. Hodges).—(1) No, I do not think you should try to breed with the green hen any more. Even if she apparently recovers from the painting I would not do so. Feed her as advised to "Portsmouth" for a fortnight, and give the medicine advised to "Fancy." See that she is kept in healthy surroundings and free from draughts. (2) I do not care for these elaborate mixtures of seed for regular use, neither during breeding or at any other time. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" for details of feeding. (3) It would have been quite safe to put the two eggs a week old under the other hen, and they would probably hatch out if they had been kept under proper conditions. But as being a little stale would probably delay the hatching some hours, it would have been best to use these eggs as dummies to replace the hen's own eggs as laid, leaving them in the nest when the other eggs were returned on the evening of the third day.

DOES NOT SING (New Beginner).—I should begin to doubt it being a cock. Follow advice given to "F. R. Armstrong" for a fortnight, and if it is not then coming in song get some experienced fancier to look at it and tell you whether it is a cock or hen. I imagine it will be the latter.

MIXED SEEDS AND FEEDING (A.V.S.).—(1) For occasional use as a tit-bit, and to tone birds up, the following is excellent. Two parts each hemp, niga, and millet; one part each black rape, and teazle; half-part each of sesame, gold of pleasure, and maw, and a quarter part each of linseed and mustard. (2) No. 10 Nutshell booklet will tell you all about feeding Roller Canaries, and No. 5 about other varieties. (3) It is not necessary to place a dummy egg in the nest for each egg removed. One dummy to replace the first egg is quite sufficient.

SWELLING ON BACK (Fag).—As the swelling is not reduced under the treatment already given there is nothing for it but to excise it, and judging from what you say, it is, I imagine, now quite fit for removal at any time. You may, if you wish, try painting with iodine every second day for a week, though I doubt the efficacy of doing so. If a valuable specimen, get a vet., or a chemist, to open the skin and remove the substance, which will probably press out quite easily all at once. If your medical man would do it, so much the better. If you attempt it yourself, unless you have some knowledge of the part, you would have to take the risk of making matters worse than they now are.

BLISTERS ON YORKSHIRE (H. Towner).—I cannot gather clearly from your description what these blisters may be. Do they appear to be filled with air or fluid? Thoroughly examine cage and bird for the presence of insect pests, and if any are discovered clear them out. Allow bird to bathe freely in mild weather. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed, and every second day give separately half-a-teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of summer rape, and two leaves of dandelion. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "A.V.S." Add 20 drops of chemical food to the drinking water two days in every three. If not well, report progress in two or three weeks.

NOT REARING YOUNG (F.J.).—If you mean that you have already had two nests this year, you started much too early, and this is, or will be, a considerable bar to good success by the end of the season. If you follow the advice in the ANNUAL with the next brood, you will stand the best chance of success. You should, however, remove the cock next time when the hen commences to sit, and leave her to hatch and rear the young by herself. Many hens will go along famously under these conditions, which will not fully rear their young when the cock is left with them permanently. It would also be advisable to try to get another common hen nesting about the same time in order to transfer the young to her care if the Norwich hen fails to do her duty again. When the young are a week old begin to vary the diet, and make it as tempting as you can. Give a little crushed hemp daily, fresh green food two or three times daily, and a little soaked rape seed. Allow hen to bathe if she will. You will find names and addresses of club secretaries in the ANNUAL. Mr. J. Sheppard, 9, St. Oswald's Road, Small Heath, is secretary to the S.B.O.S.

MOULTING (Alice B.).—If the bird is in no draught, it is practically certain to be subject to constant rapid extremes of temperature. Move it out of the window, and keep it within the room, in a nice bright position, free from draughts, great fluctuations, or impure air from burning lights. A box cage is preferable, but if bird is in an open wire one, cover it over for a week or so on three sides at least. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day a half-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed; on the alternate days give a pinch of hemp and a leaf of dandelion. Twice a week give a little of the seed mixture advised to "A. V. S." In the water add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day until feathers cease dropping. The bird will not sing until moulting ceases.

A BAD START (Posthorn).—Very sorry to hear you have lost the hen. She clearly died from egg-binding. Possibly you might have saved her had you noticed her in time, and treated her as advised in the ANNUAL, or Part VIII. of "Our Canaries." It is most inadvisable to try running a cock and two hens all together in a double breeding cage. But you might very reasonably get two hens, as you suggest, and keep one in each compartment of a double-breeder with the wood slide between. Then if one is ready to mate before the other, introduce the cock and let him send her to nest, then remove him and introduce him to the other one. When No. 2 has gone to nest, remove cock and cage him alone until No. 1 is ready to go to nest with a second brood. Then repeat the process. If both hens are equally forward in going to nest, run the cock with each one alternate every day. Say put him with No. 1 in the morning, and at midday run him through the slide to No. 2; let him remain until next midday, then turn him back to No. 1, and so on until both have gone to nest, then move him and cage him alone.

A BALL OF FEATHERS (Portsmouth).—You do not give sufficient particulars to enable me to form a very clear idea of what is wrong. Try following treatment for a fortnight, and if not then well, write again. In the first place, see that the bird is kept in a healthy and comfortable place, and is quite free from cold draughts, of great fluctuations of heat or cold. See that cage is free from red mites, and keep floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled liberally with maw seed. Give two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. Limit diet solely to this. In the water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

SINGS VERY LITTLE (Kintore Foxe).—Follow the advice given to "F. A. Armstrong" in this issue, which will probably soon set matters right.

SILENT YORKSHIRE (Novice).—You give absolutely no particulars about the bird and its treatment to enable me to form any definite opinion. If it is a young bird and in good health it should have been in song before now. Follow advice given to "F. R. Armstrong" for a fortnight, and if not then in song try to get some experienced fancier to see it and tell you if it is an undoubted cock. You may also write again, referring to this reply and giving full particulars about the bird and its treatment.

MATING CRESTS (E. Johnson).—I take it that by the term "plain crest" you mean a Crestbred bird; that is, a bird with dense heavy head feather and overhanging eyebrows, but no definite crest, such as are bred intimately with crested birds. If this is so, then you will do quite right to pair such a bird with a crested specimen. This is the usual way of mating. Occasionally two crested birds are put together for some special purpose, but this method is not to be commended to inexperienced breeders who have no such objects in view. You should get Parts XII. and XIII. of "Our Canaries" for a full discussion of all these points.

FORWARD HEN (Posthorn).—(1) No, the forwardness of the hen is no indication that she had been mated before you had her. The way in which she went to nest is, indeed, the strongest proof that she had not been mated. (2) If pairing took place, it is quite possible the eggs may be fertile, but as the cock seems out of condition, this is by no means a certainty. Let them sit the full time and prove themselves. (3) A hen sitting out her full time on a clutch of eggs which prove unfertile has absolutely no harmful effect upon her. (4) It would have been much better to remove the cock as soon as the hen began to sit, leaving her to hatch and rear the brood herself. Then you could have fed him up and brought him into condition, as given in full detail in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

A VARIETY (Market Cross).—(1) It is quite possible the hen would breed in the condition you describe, but not very probable, and if she did it is highly probable she would not rear the young, and, again, if her young were reared with the help of feeders, the probability of them inheriting this weakness and being strongly predisposed to similar attacks is very great indeed. Therefore, you see how unwise it is to breed with such birds. See No. 1 reply to "Mrs. Hodges." (2) You may get some Crested birds from the Crest hen and the Norwich Plainhead cock, but you must not look for anything at all exceptional. The number and quality of the birds would depend upon the breeding of the Crest hen. It is impossible to say whether you would get a clear body dark crest from the mating. It may be possible, but it would be a mere sport. (3) The above cock mated with a Crest-bred hen would breed large, feathery birds, a large proportion with heavy eyebrows, long tails and flights, and, perhaps, a quite small proportion with some sort of apology for a crest. In both cases the young would be simply crossbreds of no particular value. (4) Mated with a Roller hen you would get some young quite as large as the Norwich, and others little larger than the Roller. It would depend upon which bird was the most vigorous and dominant, and also upon the way the parents fed them to some extent.

DIARRHŒA (F. Wells).—It is useless putting the hens up for breeding until this trouble is removed, and as the treatment you have now given has not removed it you must look well into your foods, water, etc., as there must be something wrong here. Continue the same general method of feeding and treatment as already advised, but instead of any other kind of soft food, give a piece of bread the size of a large hazel nut dusted all over with carbonate of bismuth every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of good sound hemp, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Continue the treatment for a fortnight, if necessary, and if not well then, write again and report progress. The sample of canary seed sent is to all appearance an excellent one, and is not musty; but there is a suspicion of softness in the kernel which makes me suspect it may be stored in a damp place. The summer rape is also very good, but there is, I think, a little indication of it being infested with mites, though the sample was too small to make quite certain of this. Look into these points.

A NEGATIVE SIGN (F. MacPherson).—Instead of casting feathers being a sign of breeding condition, it is significant of the fact that the bird most certainly will not breed as long as the loss of feather continues. Had you had a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL by you you would have seen full details how to deal with this trouble. See that the bird is kept quite free from draughts and insect pests, and keep floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of equal parts hemp and millet, and a leaf of dandelion. Allow bird to bathe in bright, mild weather. Keep fairly warm and equable, but not overheated. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for one day, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel two days in every three until feathers cease dropping. From November to end of February is about best time to purchase birds for stock.

OUT OF CONDITION. (John Henderson).—I have not the least doubt these birds are kept under decidedly unhealthy conditions, and most likely exposed to damp, cold draughts, or extremes of heat and cold. For a young cock to be in the condition you describe is a most gloomy prospect for success in breeding. Indeed, I doubt the wisdom of breeding with such a bird at all, even if it should apparently recover. See that both birds are kept in a quite comfortable place, not overheated, but free from any of the above-named causes. Keep cages quite free from red mites and strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day add half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days twice each week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar. On each of the remaining days give a pinch of maw. Give a spray of chickweed or leaf of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom Salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together, every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

THE BEST SONGSTER (S. D., Shrewsbury).—It is largely a matter of choice. Personally I prefer a Linnet Mule as a vocalist; still, the Goldie Mule is a fine, free songster. The former, however, has a fuller, sweeter voice, the latter being a more shrill, and what one might describe as "aggressive," vocalist.

IDENTITY OF BIRD (F. A. Hinder).—The bird you have caught is a Lesser Redpoll, one of the commonest Finches we have. It is a cock; the hen has not a red breast. Feed as you would a Linnet, This species is very easy to keep. You should read the "Nutshell" Booklet (No. 22) dealing with this bird—post free 2½d.

YOUNG BLACKBIRDS AND THRUSHES (Throstle).—The food you gave them killed the young birds. Consult the "Nutshell" booklet on these birds (No. 4; post free 2½d.), and you will have no more trouble. It tells how to hand-feed them and how to treat them when adult. The only sure way to sex Song Thrushes is by the song.

LINNET AILING (H.W.B.).—Bird-keepers are constantly advised by CAGE BIRDS (to say nothing of books on bird-keeping) not to move birds from heated into unheated rooms, or vice-versa. It is a highly dangerous thing to do. You will gather from this that you have only yourself to blame for the illness of your bird. Give him a course of the medicine advised "Out of Sorts" in this issue. Give also the "tit-bit" mixture recommended by me in reply to a querist last week.

UNCERTAIN (H. A. F.).—I am not quite sure whether Hawfinches have been bred in confinement. I seem to remember reading of its being done in an aviary, but cannot at the moment trace any reference to the case. Perhaps some readers of these notes will write and tell us. I don't see any reason why Hawfinches should not nest in a suitable enclosure.

WHEN SHOULD THEY SING? (A. B. C.).—The Goldfinch ought to have commenced to sing before this, and the Thrush also, I think, seeing that both are, you say, "fairly steady and in good health." Larks are usually longer in "opening out." A good deal depends upon the nature of the individual bird, however, also upon the place in which it is kept. If you put your birds in a quiet, sunny spot, for instance, they will be more likely to sing there than anywhere else. The tale told you by the "other fellow" is just nonsense; ignore it.

SIX OF 'EM (N. M. Hall).—(1) Hawfinches I have always found peaceably inclined towards other birds kept in the same aviary. (2) Experience differs as regards the Crossbill. One well-known aviculturist turned a pair into his aviary, and the cock slaughtered several of the inmates, and was very murderously inclined. A friend of mine, however, kept a cock bird for a long time "on his own" amongst a crowd of birds in an aviary, and this bird did no damage whatever (to other birds, at any rate). (3) I think you would find Blackbirds and Thrushes somewhat unsuitable for your place. A friend had a pair of Blackbirds in his aviary, and during the spring the cock knocked out the brains of several other smaller birds therein before his misdeeds were brought home to him. A pair of Great Tits were suspected as being the culprits. But it so happened that one afternoon I saw the cock Blackbird rush upon and murder a Hedge Sparrow right under my nose. After his removal no further crimes were committed. (4) I think you can safely introduce the hens mentioned, providing you have not two cocks of the same species to one hen, in which case ructions may ensue. (5) Ivy and mountain ash berries are eaten by the wild birds. (6) Breeding in a small aviary with a mixed lot of birds is always very much of a lottery with plenty of tickets and very few prizes, so to speak, as a general thing.

AN UNSTEADY GOLDFINCH (An Amateur, F.A.).—I am inclined to think that the advice you were given is thoroughly sound; the Goldie in question would be likely to do better in the aviary. If you elect to use a cage, let it be a roomy one, and hang it in a very quiet room. Of course, if you have any other cock birds in the aviary, one or other of these might pair up with the Canary hens. The Linnet you describe should be treated as advised in the answer given "Out of Sorts" in this issue. Don't give the Parrish's Food.

GREENIE AND HEN CANARY (Beginner, E.L.). No need to draw the centre slide until the hen Canary shows decided signs of wanting to build by persistently carrying bits of nesting stuff about in her beak. Until then, just let the two birds see each other. Let the Greenie have every day about a dessertspoonful of white sunflower and hemp (mixed), cracking the former, if necessary. Get him a little dandelion (young leaves and seeding heads), flowering groundsel, chickweed, and shepherd's purse, whenever you possibly can do so.

BLACKBIRD BALD (Calx).—Your method of feeding is wrong, and may be at the root of the trouble. Peameal is too heating and indigestible to be suitable for regular and extensive use, and bread and milk should only be indulged in occasionally. Get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Blackbird (No. 4), and arrange the diet on the lines laid down therein, not overlooking the minced greenfood and the fruit, both of which are essential. Red-mites may also be the cause of the loss of feathers. Are you sure the cage is free from them?

IN AN AVIARY (No nom-de-plume).—Generally speaking, it is better to have only one pair of each species in an aviary if breeding results are desired. There are exceptions to this (Linnets for instance), but Bullfinches can be very nasty to each other when trying to nest in the same enclosure, and especially the females—it is often quite impossible to keep two hens in the same aviary during the nesting season, as the weaker (or more timid) bird is led an awful life by her companion. Your enclosure is a very large one, however, and you can try the experiment and see how several pairs get on. I find I cannot now keep two Bullies (either cocks or hens) together in my flight cages if they are in high condition without one constantly harassing the other. You could try several pairs of Goldfinches. Have never tried to breed Hawfinches in an aviary. I have never found them aggressive with other birds, however. Your aviary would easily accommodate 20 to 24 pairs of birds if the species were mixed. The Hawfinches will subsist largely on sunflower seed (the white kind for preference), but like hemp and some of the other seeds supplied to the Finch family.

A COUPLE (Novice No. 1).—(1) It would be best to choose the mate of the Norwich cock yourself. I advise a hen Bullie, as any progeny would be valuable, and this cannot be said of the progeny likely to result from the other two hens you mention; (2) A cage 2ft. x 12ins. is only large enough for one bird, in my opinion; certainly not for three. If you really must keep two in it, try the Goldfinch and Linnet cocks.

A CHANGE OF MATE (H.W.H.).—I think if you separated the Goldie and his present mate at once, and took her right away (out of the room), then put the Goldie close by the hen Canary (within close sight of her) for a week or so, that you would find him "take to her" all right when she feels like going in for house-keeping. I may say that it is quite the usual order of things to find hen Britishers build and lay in a cage, and then refuse to incubate their eggs. You ought to have transferred the eggs of your hen Goldie to a Canary foster-parent.

A PAIR OF ROBINS (A. Friend).—I "hae ma doots" about a pair of Robins breeding in a cage; that they would do so in a well-fitted outdoor aviary is pretty certain. It is possible, however, that a skilled fancier could contrive to get Robins to nest in a large indoor cage. What would you propose to give them to rear the young with? Adult Robins need a high-class insectile mixture, prepared in the usual way, as their staple item of diet, with live foods in season (gentles, mealworms, flies, smooth caterpillars, grubs, small beetles, plant lice, and the like), while my birds liked ripe fruit and berries, and ate a little canary seed and coarse oatmeal now and again with relish.

A TAIL OF A HAWFINCH (J.C.).—It is not an infrequent occurrence that a tail which is pulled out fails to be reproduced properly until the next moulting season comes round. This is especially likely to happen if a tail gets pulled or knocked out twice within a short period of time. Most keepers of small softbills know this only too well, unfortunately. Are you sure the "stumps" of one or two feathers do not remain in still? Anyway, you cannot do anything to remedy matters; leave the case to Nature to effect a cure when the next moult takes place.

THE CASE OF A GOLDFINCH (Out of Sorts).—I think if you gave your bird a course of a tonic and building-up medicine he would soon pull himself together, as it were. I have found compound syrup of hypophosphites B.P. (Fellows' syrup) very valuable, and am never without it in my bird-room. Get an ounce or so from a high-class chemist. Stir 12 drops into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give this for four days, fresh daily, then on alternate days (plain water in between) over a period of 10 to 14 days, according to the bird's condition. You seem to be feeding him very well. Get him some fresh dandelion seed and young leaves—not too many of the latter.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

LORRIKEETS (T. H.).—The only kinds you are likely to obtain at present are those I named in my previous reply, and these are not easy to lay hold of. Try an advert in our columns for such as you fancy. The New Guinea Lorrikeets are almost unknown to English aviculturists, save to a few who have sent out collectors. Keep a watch on the Fancy Press for new arrivals, and seize the opportunity.

INDIAN GREEN PARROT (Mrs. Buswell).—Give the bird a seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint each oats and hemp seed, and half a pint each of monkey nuts, grit (not sand), dari, maize, paddy rice and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Give Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls of water) twice a week so long as the voidings are not watery. While the sneezing lasts, add a few chilies to the daily supply of seed mixture. Bathing or spraying the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline will clear them and benefit the bird—bathing them daily for a week should give relief. It is not sickness, but a natural habit; some individuals and species are more prone to it than others. If a pair were together after regurgitation it would feed its mate; having no mate it re-swallows the regurgitated food—in similar fashion, after being fondled and made a fuss of, it will go through this habit, which ceases to be objectionable when understood. Cease giving table scraps at once.

KEEPING BUDGERIGARS OUT-OF-DOORS (C. E. Johnson).—Yes, they can be so kept, but your cage must have a retiring place fitted, and only be open netting at the front; and you must provide a glass slide to cover this during periods of severe weather. The joints of the cage must be wind and rain proof, also the woodwork must be well painted so that the interior or cage will not be damp. If you take these precautions the Budgerigars should pass the winter out-of-doors in comfort. Use twiggy branches for perches. They should breed. Hang up a couple of coco-nut husks. You must not put the birds out till May, unless you procure outdoor birds, and they can then be left out altogether.

CUTTHROATS AND JAVAS (M.U.M.).—See reply to "G. J. N.," in this issue re Java Sparrow; the treatment is identical, but the Cutthroats are very fond of ants' eggs when rearing young. I should give the Cutthroats a Hartz travelling cage (any dealer will sell you one for a few pence), take out the perches and fittings, cut away or pull out one of the bars, push in a little hay, and leave the birds to do the rest. Do not be too inquisitive; many foreign species decidedly resent their domestic affairs being pried into. For the Javas, supply a nest box described in above reply, and act in a similar manner. As the dimensions of your cages are rather small for breeding purposes, each nest should be screened with a twig branch, and disturb birds as little as possible when renewing food supplies. The eggs usually get broken by the sitting bird rising off the nest with a rush; eggs temporarily adhere to plumage, but fall away and get broken. Will probably have results from next clutches.

GOULDIAN FINCH AND PADDY RICE (M.S.).—Very glad to hear the bird is recovering, and if you continue the treatment the inflammation will gradually disappear. I should advise you to use a twiggy branch in lieu of ordinary perches in your cages, as the different thicknesses of the twigs give good gripping exercise to the feet, and help to keep them fit. As regards Paddy rice, any of the seed merchants advertising under "Foods" will supply you. Paddy rice is rice in the husk, and many of the Grassfinches are very fond of it. As soon as obtainable free from frost, supply liberally seeding (flowering) grass; keep a supply of crusbed eggsbell and grit in the cage.

WHITE COCKATOO (J. C. W.).—Give this bird a seed mixture of one pint each canary, white millet, oats, hemp, and half-a-pint each of grit (not sand), dari, Paddy rice, monkey nuts, maize, and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep a supply in the cage, also supply regularly ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit or crust of household bread. Give as little boiled maize as possible, and gradually discontinue this, as you see the bird eating heartily of the seed. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage. For a month give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates, also in the drinking water. Use a glass or crock drinker when giving drugs.

PARROT WITH BROKEN MANDIBLE (A. E. Wasley).—Am afraid "poor old Koko" will have to put up with the inconvenience for some time, these breakages taking some time to renew. But it will undoubtedly be renewed ultimately. However, as soon as the bird has got used to the loss of the hook and the soreness has passed away, the inconvenience will soon cease. In the meantime give it a little boiled maize daily—boil till soft, drain off all water, and supply to the bird, but supply it at the same time with seed and ripe fruit, as usual. Note: The boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and stale grains must not be left about. For the next month at least put half-a-teaspoonful of Bynophosphates daily into the drinking water, using a glass or crock drinker. If the beak starts bleeding again, apply the Friar's Balsam at once.

BULBUL (Foreign Bird).—Red-cheeked (red-eared, Red-whiskered) Bulbul is a native of India, but it extends to China, Siam and the Malay Peninsula. Description: Upper surface, light brown, darker on flight and tail feathers, the latter tipped with white; head and crest black; ear coverts white, with a tuft of silky crimson feathers almost obscuring them; under surface white, with the sides of the breast dark brown. In a state of nature it feeds on fruit, but also eats seeds and insects. In captivity it should get all the above, and also some good soft food (insectile) mixture. Its scientific name is Otocompsa jocosa. The Red-vented Bulbul

INDIAN SPECIES (G. J. G., Quetta).—It is difficult to give a list off-hand referring to a particular province, in the museum all districts are mixed. If you could send me a list (if time permits) of birds obtainable, I could then soon indicate values, and if you send me the list in duplicate, I will mark up values and return it you per next mail. As regards Fringilla montifringilla, the value of these is so low it would barely pay freightage. Numbers are caught every year in England. Himalayan Goldfinches and Greenfinches and Siskins about 35s. pair. If you have in your neighbourhood any of the following genera, a moderate quantity of each should pay you for the bringing: Poliopsar, Sturnopastor, Psaroglossa, Ploceus, Coccothraustos, Procarduelis, Carduelis, Chrysomitris, Montifringilla, Erythrospiza, Passer (uncommon species), Carpodacus, Pyrrhospiza, Loxia, Emberiza (uncommon species), also any Chats, Warblers, Bush Robins, Babblers, Redstarts, and Flycatchers obtainable. The above is the best general reply I can give you, apart from a list.

CAUSE OF DEATH (Green Amazon).—It would be unwise for me even to attempt to guess cause of death. The body should have been sent at once to our Mr. Yates, who, by post-mortem examination, could have given you a satisfactory reply. I can only say it looks very much like either poison or a stoppage, probably the former, as its end was so sudden.

WHAT BIRD? (H. J. E.).—I have looked through the British Museum Catalogue and cannot find your bird among Lovebirds or Hanging Parrakeets. Please inform me where it came from, also is the tail a typical Lovebird's tail or is it longer? Your description almost reads like a Lorikeet, in which case supply the sponge cake sopped with milk, unlimited fruit, etc., but I should not continue the egg food. The other items you are giving are all permissible. Send me the information asked for at once, and I will give you a definite reply in next issue. I am keeping your query by me.

GREENHOUSE AVIARY (Avis).—From your remarks I gather that the floor area of the part you intend netting in will be about 10ft. square. In the first place you must put roofing felt either over or under the glass of this part (the wired-in portion), and in the winter cover the north side with either felt or frame matting, and then your birds will be fairly comfortable. You could plant the border under staging (which of course you'll take down), with such evergreens as will benefit from the slight protection, and also put up some twiggy branches and nest receptacles under the span of roof. I think by covering the roof you would dodge both the extreme heat and cold, and keep the place comfortable for the birds, but you must arrange your ventilation without draught. If the roof is covered your birds in the summer would be more comfortable flying loose in the flight than they would be in the cages. I knew of a very successful greenhouse aviary so arranged. Keep the parts given up to the plants well ventilated and the aviary end should ventilate itself into and from that portion. Repeat query as to any special point still in doubt.

AILING BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (Kintore Foxe).—Am afraid I cannot give you much more assistance. I did not, and do not, attach much importance to it, and have had and seen birds that were so affected periodically, but not regularly day after day. On the other hand there may be some internal growth, not yet outwardly apparent, but even in this case, unless you consult a vet., you cannot do better than follow the treatment given, keeping the bowels moving quite freely, but not watery loose. Report at once if symptoms become more pronounced. If bird is very excited at such times give it, say, four doses of the following sedative: 4 grains bromide of potassium, dissolve in a little syrup and give, either direct to the beak, or soak it into biscuit, sponge cake or bread, or anything similar that the bird will eat. Give second dose at one day's interval; third, three days after second, and fourth a week later. If you write again, please inform me upon the following points: (1) Do you know what sex it is? (2) The attacks, I take it, have not the character of a fit? (3) Observe carefully, and note if the spasms have anything of a sexual nature. (4) Does it give evidence of being in pain? You might try the effect of fomenting the underside of body with a hot decoction of camomile flowers daily; dry the plumage afterwards, and keep strictly out of draught. The decoction must not be hot enough to cause discomfort.

BLOOD-RUMPS (Puzzled).—I should catch her again, and give three drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak, and at the same time carefully ascertain by gentle pressure if there is an egg waiting to be passed; if so, anoint the vent with the oil as well, and if this does not give relief you must steam her over a jug of hot water and put her in a small cage, in some warm place, till the egg is passed. You give me no idea of the diet, but a mixture of one quart each canary and white millet, one pint oats, and half a pint each of hemp, sunflower, paddy rice and grit (not sand), the whole to be well mixed. Also ripe fruit, green food, cuttlebone, and water. If you notice any signs of a cold put three drops daily of friar's balsam in the drinking-water (use a glass or china vessel holding about two table-spoonfuls) for about a week.

THE GREY PARROT (Anxious).—Yes, you will do better to mix your own seed. Get a quart each canary and white millet, one pint each white oats and hemp seed, and half a pint each dari, maize, monkey nuts, paddy rice, sunflower seed, and grit (not sand) the whole to be well mixed. Also supply ripe fruit, green food, plain biscuit and water regularly. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and keep it in some well ventilated, but not draughty, position. Get our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager; it will help you.

ROSE-BREASTED COCKATOO (G. E.).—Give the bird 5 drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the beak from a quill, or soak it into a piece of biscuit or crust of bread, or piece of cake (either way so that you insure it taking it) twice weekly. Use a crock drinking vessel holding about two tablespoonfuls of water, and put therein 5 drops of friar's balsam daily till relief is given. Keep out of draught, yet in a well-ventilated portion of the room. Confine its diet to: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, green food, plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread, grit, cuttlebone and water—it is good practice to add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

BREEDING GOULDIANS (Gould).—You must take the whole paragraph re Crystal Palace cages and not merely the sentence, "admirable home, etc.," by itself. It is not meant as breeding quarters; for the latter see the cage described on p. 15 of the booklet. As regards diet, you can safely give all the items mentioned on pages 17 and 21 of the Gouldian Finch booklet, but the supply of spray millet should be liberal—a more varied dietary will be better for them. As a rule in a cage, when breeding commences the pairs do not live together in amity, and it is better to cage the respective pairs separately to get best results. Yes, spray millet should be given liberally, but not as the sole seed diet. As you have kept sexes separate so far, I should so keep them for another month or five weeks.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

MRS. DALDY.—Bird fever, a contagious disease. The liver was the principal seat of the disease, also the spleen, both organs being considerably enlarged. Death resulted from the absorption of poisons generated within the system as a result of the disease.

D. PRICE.—A very bad case of septic fever, and you must be prepared for further loss.

A. E. KIRBY.—Death resulted from acute inflammation of the lungs. The bird was in a very poor condition, but there was no evidence of long-standing disease. It may have been asthmatical, but this is not easily revealed on post-mortem.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

No. 22 of the New Series by this popular author deals with that charming little mite, the Orange-cheeked Waxbill, an inexpensive and dainty little morsel of bird-life.

I MUST begin this article with a very humble apology. I received this rather crushing letter from the Editor not so many days since: "It may interest you to know that we have already to pay the operators at rate and a half to set your manuscript, and even at this the men fight shy of handling your copy." It reminded me of the story told of the late Dean Stanley. It was said that he wrote three different hands; one that could be deciphered by himself, but not by his printers; one that was intelligible to the printer, but not to the Dean; and one which neither could read. Mine evidently came under heading No. 1 or 3!! Having done the handsome thing by my printers, I will now begin my article, and try to do better for a time!

Within the Reach of Everybody.

I get most pathetic little notes sometimes, begging me to write on something common sometimes. I am told it is not everybody that can buy Poë birds and such-like rarities. I determined, therefore, this time to write on a pretty little bird within the reach of everybody's pocket. In the early summer Orange-cheeked Waxbills can be bought as low as eight shillings a dozen, and any dealer would allow you to pick your birds at fifteen shillings; so that Orange-cheeks should be well within the reach of the very poorest of bird keepers.

It is always best to buy them as soon after they land in the shop as possible. They are then usually in the very pink of condition, and as tight as wax. By the way, this is not intended for a pun on their name. After a few days, should they have been caught again and again in the process of sale, they seem to go wrong, and never get over it.

A Very Necessary Warning.

May I here give a very necessary, but simple warning. Never transfer these little Finches straight from the big travelling cage they came over in to a nice open four-sided affair. If you do, they will infallibly die. The heat of the travelling cage packed close with some five hundred birds is like a place we have all heard about, but never want to visit. To bring the little things out of this to an open cage is about as sensible as to come straight out of a Turkish bath into the open air, without cooling.

Whenever I buy these tiny Waxbills I always keep them for some weeks in a box cage and throw a cloth over the front at night, and I never dream of turning them out of doors till the weather is really hot.

Orange-cheeks are not really very tender if you deal sensibly with them, but they will not stand idiotic experiments. I believe more birds are lost for want of thought than from any other cause. It is always as well to buy a dozen of these little birds, as with all the care in the world some will die, and the sexes, especially if they are all birds of the year, are not very good to tell. A dozen seems a lot, but as they will only cost eight shillings, and they would also be able to sit comfortably on your pen handle, it is not a very ruinous experiment.

Not the Gentleman's Name.

These poor little birds are saddled with the awful Latin name Sporæginthus melpodus. I should never dare go into a bird-shop and ask for a pair by this title. If I did, I should expect to happen what once actually occurred at a certain death-bed. One neighbour remarked, when the end had apparently come near: "Come away, he'll soon be in Beelzebub's bosom." "Hush, Martha," whispered a horrified voice from among the crowd, "that's not the gentleman's name!" I expect the poor dealer would say the same, if I asked for my little friend by such an outlandish title!

My great ambition has always been to breed every sort of foreign bird I have kept, and to win thereby the medal of the Avicultural Society. Some people think it an ignoble ambition. They can't understand why I place so much value on a little bit of bronze. It always reminds me of the Frenchman, who said to the German with reference to the Iron Cross, "I wonder at your wearing a distinction which is only worth a few centimes!" "I thought," replied the German, "that it cost you two Napoleons." If some of my readers knew how hard it is to get that medal, they will understand my anxiety.

It is comparatively easy to get these Waxbills to build a nest and lay eggs; it is quite another thing to persuade them to sit. They are so intensely nervous that the simple opening and shutting of a door scares them. Every passing sound brings them off the nest, and it is often half an hour before they can summon up courage to return, and at the next sound everything is enacted once again, to the natural detriment of the work of incubation.

The nest is a very untidy structure, made of growing grass, and to call it flimsy is to exaggerate on the side of politeness. In some books we are told these little birds are perfectly easy to breed. Such statements are about as veracious as many others quæ volitant per ora virum. There is only one person, so far as I know, to whom has fallen the honour of rearing these birds; this is Miss Rose Alderson, of Worksop, the well known authority on Doves. She has written a delightful book on her pets, and I advise everyone to order it at once from their bookseller.

It too often happens that the people who best know and appreciate things are not found among the writers of them. Their occupation and interest do not urge them to the dull mechanical exercise of maving a pen up and down. What books could not many keepers and poachers and boatmen and shepherds write if, like "Son of the Marshes," they could be expressive for once. Natural history has generally suffered in the past from the professional writer with borrowed knowledge. Poor Goldsmith's "Natural History," full of extravagant yarns suggested by Dr. Johnson and his facetious circle of friends, is the first and worst example. Goldsmith was great at "Vicars of Wakefield," but a child could have instructed him on hermit crabs. This is why it is such a pleasure to read Miss Alderson's experiences; and it gives me additional pleasure, because she was able to do what I never could accomplish. I really think this sounds very handsome. I am not always like this. My opponents are, for the time, my enemies, and I rejoice to see them in the dust.

Very Untidy Little Architects.

Waxbills are very untidy little architects; as they waste far more than they use, and the ground under the site of the nest is like a newly mown hay-field. They would have driven mad that ultra careful housewife of whom Oliver Wendell Holmes tells us, that if the Archangel Gabriel had come down from heaven to visit her, she would have complained that he littered up the place "by dropping his feathers about." When birds are good enough to go to nest a few stray bits of grass, more or less, do not count.

I always try to give my birds natural surroundings. It is no good to expect them to build unless you make them comfortable. I accordingly arranged a most natural looking hedge of furze and pea sticks, to the great discomfort of my poor hands. As I said, the Waxbills went to nest again and again, and laid eggs, I verily believe, by the score; but do what I could, they would not incubate. Imagine my astonishment, therefore, when some years ago I read of how Miss Alderson's birds had reared a nest. But do not run away with the idea that she won success the first year. This very seldom happens. A nest is usually the result of years of patient toil. It was so in this case; but after years of patient waiting success came to her, and one Sunday morning her man came to tell her that two little Waxbills were out of the nest. They were scarcely bigger than a bumble bee; their backs were soft mouse colour and their breasts grey; their tails were short and spread out like fans, and were dark, with a patch of dull red at the root; legs and feet grey, beak black, or nearly so, with a tiny spot of white skin on each side, eyes very dark and bright.

Next day two more little ones left the nest, and almost at once began to feed on spray millet. When Waxbills are nesting I always try to give them a good supply of branches coated with green aphides. Most gardeners can find these without much difficulty, and in considerable plenty. I do not think that any great success can be looked for without them.

In a Waxbill aviary I always took care to have a nice grass plot, and the birds were always busy from morning to night searching for insects, invisible to human eyes, just like our own Hedge Sparrows. The great requisite for success is absolute quiet. A mere human stranger looking through the wires will spoil all hopes of a successful nesting. If you want to rear Waxbills you must have an aviary hidden away where nobody but yourself can find it, and you yourself must be particularly circumspect in all your movements, and you may then hope for success, but remember that Hope is a hen that lays more eggs than she can hatch out, and that, as Josh Billings says, "Opportunitys are made just as often as they happens."
